SYSTEM OF TRANSLITERATION ADOPTED.

A.—For the Dēva-nāgarī alphabet, and others related to it—

अ a, आ ā, इ i, ई ī, उ u, ऊ ū, ऋ ṛi, ए e, ऐ ai, ओ o, औ ō, औ au.

Visarga (:) is represented by h, thus क्रमशः kramaśaḥ. Anuswāra (̣) is represented by m, thus सिंह siṁh, वंश vaṁś. In Bengali and some other languages it is pronounced ng, and is then written ng; thus बंग baṅga. Anunāsika or Chandra-bindu is represented by the sign ~ over the letter nasalized, thus मे mē.

B.—For the Arabic alphabet, as adapted to Hindōstānī—

ا a , etc.	ح j	د d	ر r	س s	ع gh
ب b	ڄ ch	ڌ d	ڙ r	ش sh	غ gh
پ p	ه h	ز z	ڙ z	ص s	ف f
ت t	ڄ kh		ڙ zh	ض z	ق q
ٿ t				ط t	ک k
ث s				ظ z	گ g
				ل l
				م m
				ن n
				و when representing anunāsika
				و in Dēva-nāgarī, by ~ over
				و nasalized vowel.
				و w or v
				ھ h
				ی y , etc.

Tanwīn is represented by n, thus فَاوْرَان fauran. Alif-e maqṣūra is represented by ā;— thus, دَاوَا da'wā.

In the Arabic character, a final silent h is not transliterated,—thus بَنْدَا banda. When pronounced, it is written,—thus, گُنَا gunāh.

Vowels when not pronounced at the end of a word, are not written in transliteration. Thus, बन ban, not banā. When not pronounced in the middle of a word or only slightly pronounced in the middle or at the end of a word, they are written in small characters above the line. Thus (Hindī) देखता dēkh'tā, pronounced dēkhtā; (Kāś-mīrī) चह chh; कर् kar, pronounced kor; (Bihārī) देखथि dēkhat'h.

C.—Special letters peculiar to special languages will be dealt with under the head of the languages concerned. In the meantime the following more important instances may be noted :—

- (a) The ts sound found in Marāṭhī (च), Puṣhtō (ڄ), Kāśmīrī (च्, च्), Tibetan (ཅ), and elsewhere, is represented by ts. So, the aspirate of that sound is represented by tsʰ.
- (b) The dz sound found in Marāṭhī (ज), Puṣhtō (ڄ), and Tibetan (ཇ) is represented by dz, and its aspirate by dzʰ.
- (c) Kāśmīrī (च्) is represented by ñ.
- (d) Sindhī (ڄ), Western Panjābī (and elsewhere on the N.-W. Frontier) (ڄ), and Puṣhtō (ڄ or چ) are represented by n.
- (e) The following are letters peculiar to Puṣhtō :—
 ټ t; ځ ts or dz, according to pronunciation; ډ d; ږ r; ښ zh or g, according to pronunciation; ش sh or kh, according to pronunciation; ڼ or ڻ n.
- (f) The following are letters peculiar to Sindhī :—
 ٻ bb; ڀ bh; ٺ th; ٽ t; ڌ th; ڙ ph; ڇ jj; ڄ jh; ڙ chh;
 ڙ ñ; ڌ dh; ډ d; ڏ dd; ڊ dh, ڪ k; ڳ kh; ڳ gg; ڳ gh;
 ڳ n; ڳ n.

D.—Certain sounds, which are not provided for above, occur in transcribing languages which have no alphabet, or in writing phonetically (as distinct from transliterating) languages (such as Bengali) whose spelling does not represent the spoken sounds. The principal of these are the following :—

ā, represents the sound of the a in all.

ä, „ „ „ a in hat.

ě, „ „ „ e in met.

ō, „ „ „ o in hot.

e, „ „ „ é in the French était.

o, „ „ „ o in the first o in promote.

ö, „ „ „ ö in the German schön.

ü, „ „ „ ü in the „ mühe.

th, „ „ „ th in think.

dh, „ „ „ th in this.

The semi-consonants peculiar to the Muṇḍā languages are indicated by an apostrophe. Thus k', t', p', and so on.

E.—When it is necessary to mark an accented syllable, the acute accent is used. Thus in (Khōwār) ássistai, he was, the acute accent shows that the accent falls on the first, and not, as might be expected, on the second syllable.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

I TAKE this opportunity of tendering my thanks to the many friends who have assisted me in the compilation of the following pages. Most particularly do I record my indebtedness to the Rev. G. Macalister, M.A., of Jaipur, and to the Rev. G. P. Taylor, D.D., of Ahmedabad. To the former gentleman I owe not only a very complete series of specimens of the dialects spoken in the State of Jaipur, but also the valuable book on the same subject, which was written by him at the request of His Highness the Mahārājā. Limits of space did not permit me to utilize in their entirety the numerous specimens provided by him, but, that they may be available to future students, these have all been carefully filed in the India Office with the records of the Linguistic Survey.

To Dr. Taylor I owe an equally heavy debt of gratitude. Besides furnishing me with specimens of dialectic Gujarātī, he most kindly revised the proofs of the whole section dealing with that language, and has materially enhanced its value by his criticisms and suggestions. His revision has stamped the section with an authority that no labours of mine could have supplied.

GEORGE A. GRIERSON.

CAMBERLEY;
February 24, 1908.

RĀJASTHĀNĪ.

Rājasthānī means literally the language of Rājasthān, or Rājwārā, the country of the Rajputs. The name, as connoting a language, has been invented for the purposes of this Survey, in order to distinguish it from Western Hindī on the one hand, and from Gujarātī on the other. Europeans have hitherto included the various dialects under the loose term of 'Hindī,' just as they have also used that name for Bihārī and for the Eastern Hindī of Oudh. Natives do not employ any general name for the language, but content themselves with referring to the various dialects, Mārwarī, Jaipurī, Mālvi, and so forth. Rājasthānī is spoken by an estimated number of more than fifteen millions of people, and covers an area which may be roughly estimated at 180,000 square miles. The number of speakers is that estimated in the returns made for this Survey, which were based on the returns of the Census of 1891. The figures for Rājasthānī in the Census for 1901 are much less,—i.e., 10,917,712. The difference is no doubt due to the uncertain line which lies between Rājasthānī and Western Hindī, and between Rājasthānī and Sindhī. In 1891 many speakers of Western Hindī and Sindhī were included in the figures which were, for the Survey, interpreted as representing Rājasthānī. On the other hand, a large reduction was to be expected in 1901, owing to the lamentable famines which have prevailed in the preceding decade over the area in which Rājasthānī is spoken. The figures for 1901, therefore, though more accurate for the time at which they were recorded, cannot be taken as representing the normal number of persons who might be expected to speak this language. This I am inclined to put down at about twelve millions. As, however, the whole of the Linguistic Survey is founded on estimates which are derived from the figures of the Census of 1891, I am compelled to adhere to the larger estimated total in the following pages. No other figures which give the necessary details are available. The totals given must therefore be received with great reserve. We may compare the estimated number of speakers, and the area in which Rājasthānī is spoken with the population and area of Spain, which are, in each case, a little larger.¹

On its east, Rājasthānī is bounded (going from north to south) by the Braj Bhāshā and Bundēlī dialects of Western Hindī. On its south (from east to west), it has Bundēlī, Marāṭhī, Bhilī, Khāndēśī, and Gujarātī. Bhilī is also spoken in two mountainous tracts (the Vindhya Hills and the Aravali Hills) in the heart of the Rājasthānī country.

On its west (from south to north) it has Sindhī and Lahndā, and on its north (from west to east) it has Lahndā, Panjābī, and the Bāngarū dialect of Western Hindī. Of these, Marāṭhī, Sindhī, and Lahndā belong to the outer circle of Indo-Aryan languages.

As explained in the general Introduction to the Group, the areas now occupied by Panjābī, Gujarātī, and Rājasthānī, which are classed as languages of the Central Group, were originally occupied by languages belonging to the Outer Circle. Over them the language of the Central Group, now represented in its purity by Western Hindī, gradually spread in a wave which diminished in force the further it proceeded from the centre. Rājasthānī, therefore, and especially Western Rājasthānī presents several traces of the older outer language which once occupied Rajputana and Central India. Such are, in Western Rājasthānī, the pronunciation of ā like the a in 'ball,' of ē and ai like the a in 'hat,' and of au like the o in 'vote.' Such, too, are the common pronunciation of chh as s and the inability to pronounce a pure s when it really does occur, an h-sound being substituted. Again, Rājasthānī nouns have the oblique form in ā, as in most Outer Languages, and in the west it forms the genitive with r as in Bengali. Eastern Rājasthānī, like the Outer Lahndā, forms its future in s, and in the west we find a true passive voice,—forms unknown or almost unknown at the present day in Western Hindi.

All this is borne out by what we know of the way in which Rajputana and Gujerat have been populated by their present inhabitants. At the time of the great war of the Mahābhārata, the country known as that of the Pañchālas extended from the River Chambal up to Hardwār at the foot of the Himalayas. The southern portion of it, therefore, coincided with Northern Rajputana. It is known that the Pañchālas represented one of the Aryan tribes who were first to enter India, and that, therefore, it is probable that their language was one of those which belonged to the Outer Circle of Indo-Aryan Sanskritic languages. If this is the case, it is à fortiori also true of the rest of Rajputana more to the south. The theory also further requires us to conclude that as the Aryans who spoke the Inner Group of languages expanded and became more powerful, they gradually thrust those of the Outer Circle, who were to their south, still further and further in that direction. In Gujerat, the Inner Aryans broke through the retaining wall of the Outer tribes and reached the sea. There are traditions of several settlements from the Madhyadēśa (the home of the Central Group) in Gujerat, the first mentioned being that of Dwārakā in the time of the Mahābhārata war. The only way into Gujerat from the Madhyadēśa is through Rajputana. The more direct route is barred by the great Indian Desert. Rajputana itself was also occupied in comparatively modern times by invaders from Central Hindostan. The Rathours abandoned Kanauj in the Doab late in the twelfth century A.D., and took possession of Marwar. The Kachhwāhās of Jaipur claim to have come from Oudh and the Solankis from the Eastern Panjab. Gujerat itself was occupied by the Yādavas members of which tribe still occupy their original seat near Mathura. The Gahlōts of Mewar, on the other hand, are, according to tradition, a reflex wave from Gujerat, driven into the neighbourhood of Chitor after the famous sack of Vallabhi. We thus see that the whole of the country between the Gangetic Doab and the sea coast of Gujerat is at present occupied by immigrant Aryan tribes who found there other Aryan tribes previously settled, who belonged to what I call the Outer Circle, and whom they either absorbed or drove further to the south, or both.

Rājasthānī contains five dialects, those of the West, of the Central East, of the North-East, and two of the South-East. They have many varieties, which are explained in the sections dealing with each. Here, I shall confine myself to the main dialects. The most important of all, whether we consider the number of its speakers, or the area which it covers, is the Western dialect, commonly known as Mārwarī. It is spoken, in various forms, in Marwar, Mewar, Eastern Sindh, Jaisalmer, Bikaner, the South Panjab, and the North-West of the Jaipur State. The area occupied by Mārwarī is greater than that occupied by all the other Rājasthānī dialects put together. The Central-East Dialect is recognised under two well-known names, Jaipurī and Hārautī, and there are other varieties as well. We may take the language of Jaipur as the Standard. Jaipurī, although in the East of Rājputana, is more nearly allied to Gujarātī than is Mārwarī, the latter dialect tending rather to agree with the Sindhi, immediately to its west. North-Eastern Rājasthānī includes the Mēwātī of Alwar, Bharatpur, and Gurgaon, and the Ahīrwātī of the Ahir country south and south-west of Delhi. It is the form of Rājasthānī which agrees most closely with Western Hindī,—the purest representative of the Central Group—and some people maintain that it is a dialect of that language and not of Rājasthānī. It is admittedly an intermediate form of speech, and the point is not one of great importance, but in my opinion it must be classed under the latter language. The principal South-Eastern dialect is the Mālvi, spoken in Malwa and the adjoining country. It has Bundēli (a Western Hindī dialect) to its east and Gujarātī to its west, and is really an intermediate form of speech between the two. It is hence less decisively marked by typical peculiarities of Rājasthānī than Jaipurī, possessing some forms which are evidently connected with those of Western Hindī. The other South-Eastern dialect is Nimādi. It is by origin a form of Mālvi, but is spoken in a rather isolated position amongst a number of non-Aryan hill tribes. It has hence been so affected by the influence of the neighbouring Bhīli and Khāndēsi that it is now a distinct dialect, with marked peculiarities of its own.

INTRODUCTION.

According to the returns supplied for the Linguistic Survey, the estimated number of speakers of each of the dialects of Rājasthānī in the area in which it is a vernacular is as follows. As previously explained, the figures given in the Census of 1901 are much less :—

Mārwarī	6,088,389
Central-East	2,907,200
North-Eastern	1,570,099
Mālvi	4,350,507
Nimādi	474,777

Total number of speakers of Rājasthānī in the area in which it is a vernacular as estimated for the Linguistic Survey . . . 15,390,972

No figures are available as to how many speakers of any of the dialects of Rājasthānī except Mārwarī are found in other parts of India. In 1891, 451,115 speakers of Mārwarī were found outside Marwar, and scattered all over the Indian Empire. Natives loosely employ the name 'Mārwarī' to indicate any inhabitant or dialect of Rajputana, and it is certain that these figures include some (but not all) the speakers of other dialects of Rājasthānī, who were found away from their native country. We can, therefore, say that, in 1891, the total estimated number of speakers of Rājasthānī in India was at least 15,842,087.

The literary history of Rājasthānī is discussed in the sections dealing with the various dialects. A few general remarks will, therefore, suffice in the present place. The only dialect of Rājasthānī which has a considerable recognised literature is Mārwarī. Numbers of poems in Old Mārwarī or Dīngal, as it is called when used for poetical purposes, are in existence but have not as yet been studied. Besides this, there is an enormous mass of literature in various forms of Rājasthānī, of considerable historical importance, about which hardly anything is known. I allude to the corpus of bardic histories described in Tod's Rajasthan, the accomplished author of which was probably the only European who has read any considerable portion of them. A small fraction of the most celebrated history, the Prithirāj Rāsau of Chand Bardāi, has, it is true, been edited and translated, but the rest, written in an obsolete form of a language little known at the present day, still remains a virgin mine for the student of history and of language. The task of producing the whole is, however, too gigantic for any single hand, and unless it is taken up by some body of scholars acting on a uniform plan, I fear that the only students of Rajputana history for many years to come will be fish-insects and white-ants. Besides these Bardic Chronicles Rājasthānī also possesses a large religious literature. That of the Dādū Panthī sect alone contains more than half a million verses. We do not know in what dialect of Rājasthānī any of these works are written. The portion of the Prithirāj Rāsau which has been published is written in an old form of Western Hindī,—not Rājasthānī,—but, unfortunately, this work, while the most celebrated, is also the one regarding the authenticity of which the most serious doubts are justified. The Serampur missionaries translated the New Testament into Mārwarī, Udaipurī (i.e., Mēwarī), Bikhānērī (a form of Mārwarī), Jaipurī proper, Hārautī (an Eastern dialect), and Ujainī (i. e., Mālvī).

The only essay dealing with the Rājasthānī dialects as a group is one by the present writer on pp. 787 and ff. of the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for 1901, entitled Note on the principal Rājasthānī Dialects. Most of this is incorporated in the following pages.

For printed books the Dēva-nāgarī character is used. The written character is a corrupt form of Dēva-nāgarī, related to the Mōḍī alphabet used in Marāṭhī, and to the Mahājanī alphabet of Upper India. Its most noteworthy peculiarity is that it has distinct characters for the letters ḍ and ṛ.

The grammars of the various dialects are described, under the head of each. I here propose to give a brief comparative sketch of the grammars of the four principal dialects, Mārwarī, Jaipurī, Mēwātī, and Mālvī, based on the Note referred to above. Nimāḍī, being a mixed form of speech, does not require illustration in this connexion.

The pronunciation of the vowels, especially in Western Rājasthānī, is often irregular. In certain cases ā is pronounced like the a in 'ball,' ē and ai like the a in 'hat,' and au like the o in 'hot.' Short e and o (like the first o in 'promote') also undoubtedly exist, but the distinction is never shown in writing. When I have been certain, I have marked the distinction in transliterating the specimens, but every e which I could not be sure was short, had to be marked as long, and many of these are really short.

Especially in the west and south, the letter s is pronounced like a rough h, thus agreeing with Northern Gujarātī and many Bhīl dialects. On the other hand, in the same locality chh is commonly pronounced as s. The letter h itself and the aspiration of aspirated letters is frequently dropped, so that such a word as hāth, a hand, becomes āt.

I take this opportunity of explaining the pronunciation of the letter व, sometimes transliterated w, and sometimes v. In Western Hindī and in the languages further to the east this letter almost invariably becomes b. Thus wadam, a face, becomes ba'dan, and vichār, consideration, becomes bichār. In Rājasthānī we first come upon the custom prevalent in Western India of giving this letter its proper sound. In the Marāṭhī section of the Survey it is regularly transliterated v, but this does not indicate its exact pronunciation. In English the letter v is formed by pressing the upper teeth on the lower lip. It is thus a denti-labial. This sound, so far as I am aware, does not occur in any Indo-Aryan language. In India v is a pure labial, and is formed by letting the breath issue, not between the teeth and the lip, but between the two lips. An experiment will show the correct sound at once. It is something between that of an English w and that of an English v. This sound naturally varies slightly according to the vowel which follows it. Before long or short a, u, o, ai, or au it is nearer the sound of w, while before long or short i or e it is nearer that of v. These sounds will be naturally uttered under the influence of the following vowel, so long as the consonant w or v is pronounced as a pure labial, and not as a denti-labial. In transliterating Rājasthānī I represent the w-sound by w, and the v-sound by v, but it must be remembered that the English sound of v is never intended. Thus, I write 'Mār^wārī' not 'Mār^vārī,' because the w is followed by ā, but 'Māl^vī,' not 'Māl^wī,' because the v is followed by ī.

Rājasthānī agrees with Gujarātī and Sindhī in having a strong preference for cerebral letters. The letters l and n which are hardly ever met in Western Hindī are here very common. In fact every medial l or n which has come down from Prakrit is cerebralised, unless it was doubled in the Prakrit stage. A Prakrit ll is represented by a dental l, and a Prakrit nn by a dental n in Rājasthānī. This is fully explained, with examples, in dealing with the dialects. It will be observed that initial l and n are not cerebralised.

In the following tables, I also give the Braj Bhāshā, Bundēlī and Gujarātī forms for the sake of comparison.

As regards gender, the rule of Western Hindī is generally followed, that there are only two genders, a masculine and a feminine. In one or two dialects of Western Hindī we have noted sporadic instances of the use of a neuter gender. In Rājasthānī these occasional instances become more and more common as we go west and south till we find the neuter gender firmly established in Gujarātī.

Declension.

The following tables illustrate the declension of the four chief Rājasthānī dialects.

INTRODUCTION.

In the above we note the typical Rājasthānī and Gujarātī singular oblique form in ā, instead of ē. In Rājasthānī the plural of the ā is ā̃. It will also be noted that all the Rājasthānī dialects have a special form for the Agent case, instead of using the oblique form with the postposition nē or its equivalent. Mēwātī and Mālvi, which are most nearly related to Western Hindī, also optionally employ nē or nai.

Mālvi has also a plural formed by suffixing hōr, which reminds us of the old Kanauji hwār and the Khas (Naipālī) haru.

All these nouns have also an organic locative in ē, or ai. Thus gharē, in a house.

B.—POSTPOSITIONS.

	Braj.	Bundēli.	Rājasthānī.				Gujarātī.
			Mēwātī.	Mālvi.	Jaipurī.	Mārwarī.
Agent	nē	nē̃	nai	nē		...	...
Genitive	kau, kē, kī	kō, kē, kī	kō, kā, kī	rō, rā, rī; kō, kā, kī	kō, kā, kī	rō, rā, rī	nō, nā, nī

In the above, note that the oblique genitive ends in ā, as in Gujarātī, not in ē, as in Braj and Bundēli. The forms commencing with r are typical of Rājasthānī. The dative postpositions commencing with n are typical of Rājasthānī and Gujarātī. So is the e or ai of the Agent. Note that Mēwātī and Mālvi are the only dialects which can optionally employ a postposition for the case of the Agent.

The dative cases are always locatives of corresponding genitive postpositions. Thus kai is the locative of kō, and nai the locative of the Gujarātī nō. Note that in Mālvi and Mēwātī nē and nai are used both for the agent and for the dative.

Adjectives.—Adjectives follow the genitive postpositions in their inflexions. Thus āchchhō, good; fem. āchchhī; masc. obl. āchchhā. Adjectives (including genitives) have, however, a further declension. When the noun is in the agent or locative, the adjective is put into that case too, and not into the oblique form. Thus, kālē ghorē lāt mārī, the black horse kicked; rājā-kē gharē, in the Rājā's house. In other words adjectives agree in case with the nouns they qualify. When the noun is in the oblique form, the adjective is put into the oblique form, and when the noun is in the agent or locative, the adjective is put into the agent or locative as the case may be. So we have in Gujarātī bījē, dahādē, on the second day.

In these two pronouns the distinguishing points of Rājasthānī leap to the eye. The declensional base of the singular in Braġ and Bundēli is mo-, muj-, or mē-; to-, tuj-, or tē-. In Rājasthānī it is ma- or mū-; ta-, or tū-, in this agreeing with Gujarātī.

In the plural it is mhā and thā instead of ham and tum. There is also a tendency in Rājasthānī to aspirate the first consonant in the singular, so that we get mhā and thā. Mēwātī alone shows signs of agreement with its neighbour Braj in the formation of the genitive. On the other hand, in the second person, its plural agrees with Gujarātī in having tam, not tum, which it optionally aspirates to tham. In the genitive plural Mālvi has the termination nō, which corresponds to the nō which Gujarātī uses for substantives, and which appears in the genitive of āp in all Indo-Aryan languages. Note also the aspirated forms of the plural in Rājasthānī, and the use of āp to mean 'we,' only employed, as in Gujarātī, when the 'we' includes the person addressed, which seems to be an idiom borrowed from Muṇḍā or Dravidian languages. On the other hand, Rājasthānī sometimes employs the genitive of āp to mean 'own,' in this respect agreeing with Western Hindī: but this method of using the word is very loosely followed, and the genitive of the ordinary pronouns are more often employed.

With regard to the relative, it must be observed that in Rājasthānī it is very often used in the sense of a demonstrative.

In the above pronouns, the differences between Rājasthānī and Braj-Bundēli are not so great, but it will be seen that there are several sets of forms (including feminine nominatives singular) which are peculiar to Rājasthānī.

Verbs.—The verb of Western Rājasthānī has one marked peculiarity—the possession of a true passive voice,—which is strange (except for a few scattered instances) to Western Hindī. The typical syllable of this voice is ij. Thus mārⁱnō, to strike; marījⁱnō, to be struck. A similar form occurs in Sindhī and Lahndā, both languages of the Outer Circle. Gujarātī also has a passive voice, but makes it by the addition of ā, the resulting form thus agreeing with Western Hindī potential passives such as dikhānā, to be visible.

A.—VERBS SUBSTANTIVE.

It will be observed that the conjugational roots used are those which are common to the languages of other parts of India. The Mewātī sū is, of course, only a phonetic spelling of the Jaipurī chhū. The conjugational forms are the same as those which occur in all other Indo-Aryan languages: The only peculiarities which need be noted in Rājasthānī are that, in the present, the first person plural ends in ā̃, that (except in Mēwātī) the third person plural is not nasalised, and that, as usual, the plural of the past tense ends, as in the case of adjectives, in ā.

B.—THE FINITE VERB.

In Rājasthānī the conjugation of the verb, with two exceptions, proceeds on the same lines as those which obtain in Pañjābī and Western Hindī, of which latter Braj and Bundēli are dialects. One exception is the conjugation of the Definite Present, which departs from the method adopted in Western Hindī, and follows that of Gujarātī. The other exception is the conjugation of the Imperfect, which is done by adding the auxiliary verb to a verbal noun in the locative. Both these exceptions do occur, however, in the Western Hindī of the Upper Gangetic Doab. They are, nevertheless, distinctly typical of Rājasthānī. It will be sufficient to give only a few of the principal tenses of the intransitive verb chal, 'go.' Transitive verbs, of course, use the passive construction in the case of tenses derived from the past participle.

- (a) Old Present.—This tense is, as in other cognate languages, often employed as a present Subjunctive. More often, however, it has its proper power of a Present Indicative. Its conjugation is practically the same in all Indo-Aryan languages. In Rājasthānī we may note that, as in the verb substantive and in the simple future, the first person plural ends in ā̃, and that, except in Mēwātī, which in this particular agrees with its neighbour Braj, the third person plural is not nasalized.

(c) Future.—Two forms of this tense occur, which we may call the Simple Future and the Periphrastic Future respectively. The Simple Future is the direct derivative of the Prakrit Future, chalissāmi or chaliḥāmi; thus, chal'syū or chal'hū. The Periphrastic Future is formed by suffixing an adjective, probably a participle, to the Present Subjunctive, as in the Hindī chalñ-gā, which probably means 'I am gone (gā) that I may go (chalñ).' Some dialects use one form and some another and some both.

Note that in Mālvi and Mārwarī the singular terminations are gā and lā respectively, not gō and lō as we should expect. Unlike the gō of Mēwātī and Mārwarī and the lō of Jaipurī, gā and lā are immutable. They do not change for gender or number. They are no longer adjectives, and are hence to be distinguished from the gā of Standard Hindī.

- (d) The Periphrastic Present.—This is the ordinary present with which we are familiar in Hindōstānī. In that language, as in Braj and Bundēli, it is formed by conjugating the present tense of the verb substantive with the present participle. Thus, maĩ chal^atā hũ, ‘I am going.’ In Rājasthānī, instead of the present participle being used, the simple present is conjugated together with the verb substantive. The same idiom is used in Gujarātī. Thus, to take Jaipurī as an example, we have—

Singular.

1. maĩ chalũ chhũ, ‘I am going.’
2. tũ chalai chhai, ‘thou wast going.’
3. wō chalai chhai, ‘he was going.’

Plural.

1. mhē chalã chhã, ‘we are going.’
2. thē chalō chhō, ‘you are going.’
3. wai chalai chhai, ‘they are going.’

The following are the forms which this tense takes in the various languages in the first person singular. In Braj and Bundēli only the masculine forms are shown :—

Braj	.	chal^atu haũ.
Bundēli	.	chalat hō or chalat āw.
Mēwātī	.	chalũ hũ.
Mālvi	.	chalũ hũ.
Jaipurī	.	chalũ chhũ.
Mārwarī	.	chalũ hũ.
Gujarātī	.	chālũ chhũ.

Braj	.	haũ chal^atu hō.
Bundēli	.	maĩ chalat tō.
Mēwātī	.	maĩ chalai hō.
Mālvi	.	hũ chal^atō thō.
Jaipurī	.	maĩ chalai chhō.
Mārwarī	.	hũ chal^atō hō, hũ chalāi hō.
Gujarātī	.	hũ chāl^atō hatō.

- (f) Participles and Infinitives.—The following are the most usual forms in the Rājasthānī dialects :—

	Present Participle.	Past Participle.	Infinitives.
Braj	chal^atu	chal^{yau}	chal^anaũ,	chaliwaũ.
Bundēli	chalat	chalō	chalan,	chal^abō.
Mēwātī	chal^atō	chal^{yō}	chal^anū,	chal^abō.
Mālvi	chal^atō	chal^{yō}	chal^anō,	chal^awō.
Jaipurī	chal^atō	chal^{yō}	chal^anū,	chal^abō.
Mārwarī	chal^atō	chal^{yō}	chal^anō, chal^anũ,	chal^abō.
Gujarātī	chāl^atō	chāl^{yō}		chāl^avũ.

The differences are slight, but it will be seen that when they exist the Rājasthānī dialects agree among themselves, and with Gujarātī, but differ from Braj and Bundēli.

In Rājasthānī verbs of speaking govern the dative of the person addressed, not the ablative, as in Western Hindī. Here again the Gujarātī idiom is followed.

When a transitive verb in the past tense is used in the impersonal construction in Western Hindī, the verb is always put in the masculine, whatever the gender of the object may be. Thus, us-nē strī-kō mārā (not mārī), he struck the woman, or, literally, by him, with reference to the woman, a beating was done. In Gujarātī, on the contrary, the verb is attracted to the gender of the object. Thus, tēnē strī-nē mārī (not māryō), literally, by him, with reference to the woman, she was struck. Rājasthānī sometimes employs one construction, and sometimes the other, so that, in this respect, it is intermediate between Western Hindī and Gujarātī.

Rājasthānī delights in the use of pleonastic letters which are added to a word without altering its meaning. Thus kat^rrō or kat^rrō-k, how many; khā^h gayō or khā^h gayō-s, where did he go? To these may be added rō or ḍō, properly a diminutive, but often added without in any way affecting the sense. The frequent use of these pleonastic letters is typical of Rājasthānī.

It will be seen from the above that the Rājasthānī dialects form a group among themselves, differentiated from Western Hindī on the one hand and from Gujarātī on the other hand. They are entitled to the dignity of being classed as together forming a separate, independent language. They differ much more widely from Western Hindī than does, for instance, Panjābī. Under any circumstances they cannot be classed as dialects of Western Hindī. If they are to be considered as dialects of some hitherto acknowledged language, then they are dialects of Gujarātī.

In the inflexion of nouns they agree with Gujarātī and differ from Western Hindī. The postpositions they use in the declension of nouns are either peculiar to them, or else agree more often with Gujarātī than with Western Hindī.

In the formation of the two personal pronouns they have taken an entirely independent course, and in the few cases in which the inflexions of these agree with the inflexions in another language it is again Gujarātī to which we must look for the points of agreement. The forms of the demonstrative and other pronouns occupy a position intermediate between Gujarātī and Western Hindī.

The conjugation of the verb differs but slightly in all these languages, but even in this Rājasthānī has struck out a path for itself in the formation of the first and third persons plural, and of the imperfect tense. In one important point, the formation of the present definite, it agrees with Gujarātī in adopting a principle which is altogether foreign to the genius of Western Hindī.

Taking the dialects separately, Mēwātī is the one which most nearly resembles Western Hindī. Here and there we find in Mālvi a point of agreement with Bundēli, while Jaipurī and Mārwarī agree most closely with Gujarātī.

I now proceed to deal with each dialect separately.

MĀRWĀRĪ.

Standard Mārwarī is spoken on the Rajputana State of Marwar-Mallani. The dialect, in a more or less impure condition, is also spoken •
 Where spoken. on the east, in the neighbouring British districts of Ajmer and Merwara and in the States of Kishangarh and Mewar; on the south in the States of Sirohi and Palanpur; on the west in the Sind district of Thar and Parkar and in the State of Jaisalmer; and on the north in Bikaner, in the Shēkhāwātī tract of the State of Jaipur, and in the south of the Panjab. In this area the number of its speakers is about six millions.

On the east Mārwarī is bounded by the Eastern dialects of Rājasthānī, of which we have taken Jaipurī as the standard. On the south-east Language boundaries. it has the Mālvī dialect of Rājasthānī and a number of Bhīl dialects. On the south-west it is bounded by Gujarātī. On the west, it has, to the south, the Sindhī spoken in Sind and Khairpur, and, further north, the Lahndā of the State of Bahawalpur. On the north-west it has Panjābī. It merges into Lahndā and Panjābī through a mixed form of speech entitled Bhaṭṭiānī, which has little connexion with Rājasthānī; on the north-west it merges into Panjābī and the Bāngarū dialect of Western Hindī through Bāgrī. In the extreme north-east of the area, it has Mēwātī directly to its north.

Standard Mārwarī varies but little from Jaipurī. We may note three main points of difference. In Jaipurī the postposition of the genitive Compared with Jaipurī. is kō, while in Standard Mārwarī it is rō. In Jaipurī, the verb substantive is chhū, I am, chhō, was; in Mārwarī it is hū, I am, hō, was. In Jaipurī there are two forms of the future. Of one the typical letter is s, as in mār^ssyū, I shall strike. The other takes the suffix lō, which changes for gender and number; thus, mārū-lō, I shall strike. In Mārwarī, there are three forms. In one of these, the typical letter is h, as in mār^hhū, I shall strike. In another lā is added, which does not change for gender or number, as in mārū-lā, I shall strike; while the third adds gō, like the Hindī gā.

Standard Mārwarī is spoken in the centre of the Marwar State. In the north-east of the State, and in Kishangarh, Ajmer, and west
 Sub-dialects. Merwara the dialect is somewhat mixed with Jaipurī. Further to the south-east in Mewar and the neighbourhood, there is a well-known eastern form of Mārwarī, known as Mēwārī or Mērwarī, according to locality. In South Marwar, in the State of Sirohi, and in the north of Palanpur in Gujarāt, the Mārwarī is affected by Gujarātī, and we have a southern sub-dialect. In West Marwar, in Jaisalmer and in Thar and Parkar of Sind, the influence of Sindhī makes itself felt. Here we have a number of minor dialects, the principal of which are Thaḷī and Dhaṭkī, which are grouped together as Western Mārwarī. Finally there are a Northern Mārwarī in Bikaner, the neighbouring parts of Bahawalpur, and Shekhawati of Jaipur, in which we again find Mārwarī merging into Jaipurī, and Bāgrī of North-East Bikaner, and the South Panjab, in which it merges into Panjābī and Bāngarū.

It should be noted that, right in the heart of the Mārwarī country, between Marwar and Mewar, the Aravali hills are inhabited by tribes speaking various Bhil languages. These have also affected the Mārwarī spoken in their neighbourhood.

The following table shows the estimated number of speakers of Mārwarī in the area in which it is a vernacular.

The Mārwarīs are a great mercantile community, and there are few parts of India where some of them may not be found carrying on the banking business of the country. No complete materials are at hand to show the number of speakers of their language away from their home. The following incomplete statistics are compiled from the Census figures of 1891. It will be seen that for several provinces figures are not available. Moreover, even where figures are given, these should be received with some suspicion, for there is no doubt that many speakers of other dialects of Rājasthānī, such as Jaipurī or Mālvi, have been included under Mārwarī.

Total number of speakers of Mārṡārī so far as known, in places in India outside the Mārṡārī area	451,115

Besides the above there are to be found here and there in India scattered tribes who are said to speak some form or other of Mārṡārī. Such are the Ōḍs of Sind and the Panjab. Some of the members of this tribe of diggers do speak a corrupt Mārṡārī, but others do not, and it is best to neglect them here, and to consider them subsequently under the head of-Gipsy tribes. More definitely Mārṡārī are the Mahēśrī and Ōśwālī of Chanda in the Central Provinces. They are the languages of two Mārṡārī-speaking mercantile castes, and the figures for them have been included in the general figures for Mārṡārī spoken in the Province. So also has the dialect of the Kīrs who have settled in Narsinghpur in the Central Provinces. They cultivate melons, and are said to have immigrated from Jaipur. We should therefore expect that their language would belong to the Eastern Group of Rājasthānī dialect, but the specimens of it which I have received are written in what is certainly a mixture of Mārṡārī and Mālvi. Bhōyārī, another tribal dialect of the Central Provinces, which is usually classed as Mārṡārī, is really bad Bundēli. Turning to the North-Western Provinces we find Chūrūwālī returned as a special dialect from the District of Farukhabad. It is the language of the Chūrūwāls, a set of traders who come originally from Churu in Bikaner. As may be expected, their language is a corrupt Bikānērī, and is already included in the Mārṡārī figures.

¹ The Mahājānī character is really this Mārwarī current script which has been carried in the course of trade all over India. Its illegibility, owing to the omission of the vowels, has given rise to numerous stories. One of the best known is of the Mārwarī merchant who went to Delhi. Thence his clerk wrote home 'bābū, ajmār gayō, bārī bahī bhāj-dyē, the Babu has gone to Ajmer, send the big ledger.' This, being written without vowels, was read by its recipient, 'Bābū āj mar-gayō, bārī bahū bhāj dyē, the Babu died to-day, send the chief wife,—apparently to perform his funeral obsequies!

others, and the student is recommended to read the Central Eastern Rājasthānī grammar before the Mārwarī one, as several references to it occur in the latter.

PRONUNCIATION.

In ā, the termination of the oblique plural of nouns, the ā is pronounced broadly something like the a in all. The diphthongs ai and au have each two sounds. In Tatsama words they are pronounced as in Sanskrit. In Tadbhava words they are pronounced more shortly. The ai is sounded almost like the a in 'hat' and the au almost like the o in 'hot.' In such cases, in order to draw attention to the fact, I transcribe them āi and āu respectively. It may be added that ē and āi are often practically interchangeable, and so are ō and āu.

As in Eastern Rājasthānī i and a are often interchanged as in jināi-rāi for janāi-rāi, to a person. The letters ch and chh are quite commonly pronounced s. Thus chakkī, a millstone, is often pronounced sakkī and chhāchh, buttermilk, as sās. As this pronunciation is not universal, I have not shown it in my transcription.

The cerebral l is very common. It usually represents a single l in Prakrit. Thus the Prakrit chaliō, gone, becomes, in Mārwarī, chaliyō. A dental l represents a Prakrit double ll. Thus, Prakrit challiō, gone, becomes, in Mārwarī, chāliyō. l is often indicated thus, ल, instead of by ळ.

In writing Mārwarī the letters ḍ and ṛ are distinguished. This is not done as in Hindī by representing ṛ by the sign for ḍ with a dot placed under it, thus ḍ̣. In Mārwarī there are two distinct characters, viz., ḍ for ḍ and ṛ for ṛ. In printed Mārwarī, when the type for ḍ is not available, the Dēvanāgarī letter ṛ is often substituted for it, which is very inconvenient; as, in that case, for instance, only the context can tell whether बमो represents 'baḍō' or 'bamō.' In printing the Mārwarī specimens in the Dēvanāgarī character, I shall represent ḍ by ṛ and ṛ by ḍ̣.

Aspiration and the letter h are commonly omitted. Thus paḍnō for paḍh^anō, to read; pāilō for pahilō, first; kāinō for kah^anō, to say.

The letter s is quite commonly pronounced as sh in English. The rule is almost universal.

DECLENSION.

Nouns are declined as follows. It will be noticed that the agent case never takes the postposition nē, but has, like the locative, a special form in declension :—

Acc.-Dat.	nā̃i ,	nā̃i ,	kanā̃i ,	rā̃i .
Instr. and Abl.	sū̃ ,	ū̃ .
Genitive	rō̃ ,	kō̃ ,	tanō̃ ,	handō̃ .
Locative	mē̃ ,	mā̃i ,	māhā̃i ,	mā̃i , mā̃y .

With regard to the above it should be noted that the dative (and accusative) postpositions nā̃i (or nā̃ĩ) and rā̃i are locatives of nō and rō respectively. Kanā̃i is a contraction of kā̃i-nā̃ĩ, which is the locative of kō̃-nō̃. Kō̃, nō̃, and rō̃ are all genitive postpositions. Kō̃ and rō̃ occur in Mārwarī and nō̃ in the neighbouring Gujarātī. Further remarks regarding the use of rā̃i will be found below.

The usual suffix of the genitive is rō̃. Tanō̃ and handō̃ are archaic, and are now only found in poetry. Kō̃, as a genitive suffix, is used in those parts of the Mārwarī area which border on tracts in which Mēwarī or Mālvi is spoken.

It is necessary to state that, if we desire to write with strict philological accuracy rō̃, rā̃i, and nā̃ĩ should be joined to the noun without hyphens, as is done with the nō̃ of Gujarātī, while kō̃, tanō̃, and handō̃ should have hyphens. Thus ghōḍānō̃, ghōḍārā̃ĩ, ghōḍānā̃ĩ, but ghōḍā-kō̃, ghōḍā-tanō̃, and ghōḍā-handō̃. This is a question of derivation which will be found explained under the head of Gujarātī on p. 328 infra. In Rājasthānī, in which both the omission and the retention of the hyphen occur, the strict adherence to the rule would be liable to cause confusion in the mind of the reader. I have therefore, in the case of that language, abandoned scientific accuracy and have inserted the hyphen everywhere. Thus, ghōḍā-rō̃, ghōḍā-rā̃ĩ, ghōḍā-nā̃ĩ.

The genitive terminations are liable to change as in Eastern Rajputāna. Rō (kō, tanō, handō) changes to rā (kā, tanā, handā) before a masculine noun in the oblique singular or in the plural; to rī (kī, tanī, handī) before any feminine noun; and to rē or rāi (or sometimes rā) before any masculine noun in the agent or locative. As postpositions like āgāi, in front, before, or pachhāi, behind, are really nouns in the locative, the nouns they govern are usually placed in this form of the genitive. Rāi or rē, itself, is a locative and often means 'in of.' Examples of the employment of the genitive are, khēt-rō dhān, the paddy of the field; rājā-rā ghōḍā-sū, from the horse of the king; khēt-rī kākaḍiyā, the cucumbers of the field; ghar-rāi pachhāi, behind the house; thā-rāi bāp-rāi ghar-māi, in your father's house; āp-rāi khētā-māi, in his own fields; in-rāi hāt-māi, in his hand; khētā-rāi pālī, the boundary of the fields, literally, 'in of the fields'; un-dēs-rāi, in of that country, one amongst its inhabitants; thā-rāi bābō-sā gōṭh kivī, by your father a feast was made; un-rai bāp dīthō, by his father he was seen.

As all postpositions of the dative are by origin the locatives of genitive postpositions (nāi or nāi is itself the locative of the Gujarātī genitive termination nō), we often find rāi used as a postposition of the dative, but in such cases it is attached, not to the oblique form, but to the locative of the noun. Thus, mhāi un-rāi bēṭāi-rāi ghaṇā chāb-kiyā rī-dīvī-hāi, I have given many stripes to his son; ēk jīnāi-rāi dōy dāwōrā hā, to a certain man there were two sons; un-rāi gōṭh, a feast for him. In the first example it will be noted that the rāi of un-rāi is also in the locative to agree with bēṭāi. In the same way, when a genitive agrees with a noun in the dative (of which the postposition is itself in the locative), rāi is often used instead of rā. Thus āp-rāi bāp-nāi kayō, he said to his father; āp-rāi hukam-nāi lōpiyō nahī, I did not disobey your order.

Finally, when a noun itself is in the locative with māi, the māi is sometimes attached to the inflected locative in āi, and not to the oblique form. Thus kūphāiḍāi-māi (not kūphāiḍā-māi), in debauchery.

To sum up, we may now give the following complete paradigm of the declension of ghōḥā, a horse:—

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	ghōḍō .	ghōḍā .
Agent	ghōḍē , ghōḍāi .	ghōḍā .
Accus.	ghōḍō , ghōḍā-nāi .	ghōḍā , ghōḍā-nāi .
Instr.	ghōḍā-sū , ghōḍā-ū .	ghōḍā-sū , ghōḍā-ū .
Dat.	ghōḍā-nāi .	ghōḍā-nāi .
Abl.	ghōḍā-sū , -ū .	ghōḍā-sū , -ū .
Gen.	ghōḍā-rō (-kō , -tanō , -handō).	ghōḍā-rō (-kō , tanō , -handō).
Loc.	ghōḍē , ghōḍāi , ghōḍā-mē , etc.	ghōḍā , ghōḍā-mē , etc.
Voc.	hē ghōḍā .	hē ghōḍā .

Adjectives.—Adjectives nearly follow the customary Hindōstānī rule. The oblique masculine of tadbhava adjectives ending in ō ends in ā, and the feminine in ī. Thus,— Kālō ghōḍō hawā-rā jīū jāy-hai, the black horse goes like the wind.

Kālā ghōḍā-nāi dōrāwō, make the black horse gallop.

Kālī ghōḍī baḍī saitān hāi, the black mare is very vicious.

Kālī ghōḍī-nāi dōrāwō, make the black mare gallop.

When a noun is in the agent case singular the adjective is put in the agent case also. Thus kālē ghōḍē lāt mārē, 'the black horse kicked; nāin^akiāi dāw^arai gayō, by the younger son it was gone. Similarly with a noun in the locative, the adjective is put in the locative, as in chhōṭāi ghar-māi, in a small house.

In comparison the ablative is used, or (as in Gujarātī) the word kar^atā is employed in the sense of 'than,' as in uchchāraṇ-mē mūḷ swarā kar^atā lambā bōlījāi, in pronunciation they are uttered longer than the original vowels.

Numerals.—These are given in the list of words; dōy, two, has dōyā for its oblique form and agent, so tīn, three, has tīnā.

As ordinals, we may quote pāilō, first; dūjō, second; tijō, third; chōthō, fourth; pāch^awō, fifth; chhatthō, sixth; sāt^awō, seventh; āth^awō, eighth; naw^amō, ninth; das^awō, tenth, and so on. Pāch^awō has its agent pāch^awē and its oblique form pāch^awā. So for other ordinals in ō. The others are declined regularly. Chhēlō (as in Gujarātī) is 'last.'

PRONOUNS.—The pronouns have, as usual, special forms for the Accusative-Dative and for the Genitive.

The Pronoun of the First person is thus declined. It has two forms of the plural. One, āpā, includes the person addressed. The other, mhē, does not necessarily do so. Mhē means 'we,' and āpā, 'we including you.'

	Singular.	Plural.
		Including person addressed.	Excluding person addressed.
Nom.	hū, mhū.	āpā.	mhē, mē.
Agent	mhāi, māi.	āpā.	mhā, mā.
Acc.-Dat.	mha-nāi, ma-nāi.	āpā-nāi.	mhā-nāi, mā-nāi.
Gen.	mhārō, mārō.	āpā-rō.	mhārō, mārō.
Obl.	mhāi, māi, mhārā, mārā, mhārāi, mārāi.	āpā.	mhā, mā, mhārā, mārā, mhārāi, mārāi.

So, for the Second person, we have—

Nom.	tū, thū.	thē, tamē.
Agent	thāi, tāi.	thā, tamā.
Acc.-Dat.	tha-nāi, ta-nāi.	thā-nāi, tamā-nāi.
Gen.	thārō.	thārō, tamā-rō.
Obl.	thāi, tāi, thārā, thārāi.	thā, thārā, thārāi, tamā.

The honorific pronoun of the second person is āp, your honour. It is regularly declined. Thus, āp-nāi, to your honour; āp-rō of your honour. Another honorific pronoun is rāj, your honour, also regularly declined. Jī, jī-sā, sā, or sāb are added to a noun to indicate respect. Thus rāw-jī-sā, thākur-sā, sēth-sāb, all of which are titles; bābō-sā or bābō-jī, O father!

The Reflexive pronoun is also āp. Ap-rō is 'one's own.'

The pronoun of the third person is supplied by the demonstrative pronouns ō, this, and wō, that. These have feminine forms in the nominative singular only. They are thus declined—

	This.	That.
Sing. Nom.	ō, yō ; fem. ā, yā .	wō, ā, uwō ; fem. wā, uwā .
Agent	in .	un .
Acc.-Dat.	ĩ-nāĩ, in-nāĩ, anĩ-nāĩ .	ũ-nāĩ, un-nāĩ, wanĩ-nāĩ .
Gen.	in-rō .	un-rō .
Obl.	ĩ, in, anĩ .	ũ, un, wanĩ .
Plur. Nom.	āĩ, ē .	wāĩ, wē, uwāĩ, uwē .
Agent	āĩ, ā, yā, inā .	wāĩ, wā, uwā, unā, wanā .
Obl.	āĩ, ā, yā, inā .	wāĩ, wā, uwā, unā, wanā .

The Relative Pronoun is often used in the sense of a Demonstrative Pronoun.

The Relative and Correlative pronouns are jō or jikō, who, and sō or tikō, he. They also have each a feminine form in the nominative. They are thus declined—

	Relative.	Correlative.
Sing. Nom.	jō, jyō, jikō, jakō ; fem. jikā, jakā .	sō, tikō , fem. tikā .
Agent	jin, jan, janĩ, jinĩ, jĩ, jikan, jikāt .	tin, tinĩ .
Obl.	jin, jan, janĩ, jĩ, jikan .	tin, tinĩ .
Plur. Nom.	jō, jyō, jikā, jikāt, jakāt .	sō, tikā, tikāt .
Agent	jaĩ, jĩ, jyā, jinā, janā, jikā .	tinā, tikā .
Obl.	jaĩ, jĩ, jyā, jinā, janā, jikā .	tinā, tikā .

The Relative Pronoun is quite commonly used as a Demonstrative, as is also the case in Eastern Rājasthānī. Many examples will be found in the specimens.

The Interrogative Pronouns are kun, who? (masc. and fem.) and kāĩ, what? (neut.) They are thus declined—

	Masc. and Fem.	Neut.
Sing. Nom.	kun, kaṇ.	kāĩ, kāĩ, kaĩ.
Agent and Obl. form.	kun, kaṇ, kuṇĩ, kaṇĩ, kiṇ, kĩ.	kuṇĩ.
Plur. Nom.	kun, kaṇ.
Agent and Obl. form.	kuṇā, kaṇā, kiṇā.

The Indefinite pronouns are kōĩ, anyone, and kāĩ, kāĩ, or kĩ, anything. Kōĩ has its agent and oblique form kiṇĩ, kuṇĩ, or kō. When kĩ is used, the letter ĩ must be added to the postposition, as in kĩ-rō-ĩ, of anyone. Kāĩ, kāĩ or kĩ does not change its form in declension.

CONJUGATION.—Auxiliary Verbs and Verbs Substantive.

Present, I am, etc.

Sing.	Plur.
1. hũ.	hā.
2. hāĩ.	hō.
3. hāĩ.	hāĩ.

The past tense is masc. sg. hō, pl. hā, fem. sg. and pl. hĩ, was. It does not change for person.

The principal parts of the verb 'to become' are as follows:—

Root, hō, become.

Present Participle—hōtō, hūtō, whētō (masc. pl. -tā; fem. -tĩ), becoming.

Past Participle—huwō, huyō, whiyō, whiō (fem. huĩ), become.

Adjectival Past Participle—huwōrō, huyōrō, become.

Conjunctive Participle—hūyar, hūy-nāĩ, hō-kar, hō, whētō-knāĩ, whēr, having become.

Infinitive—hōwan, hōw^anō, hōnō, hũnō, whāĩnō, whāĩnũ, whaibō, to become.

Noun of Agency—hōn-wālō, one who becomes.

Simple Present—I become, I may or shall become, etc.

Sing.	Plur.
1. huũ , hōũ , whēũ .	huwā , whāĩā , whāĩhā .
2. huwāĩ , whāĩ .	huwō , whāĩō , whāĩhō .
3. huwāĩ , whāĩ .	huwāĩ , whāĩ .

Definite Present—I am becoming, etc. huũ-hũ or whēũ-hũ, etc.

Imperfect, I was striking, etc.

whētō-hō, as in Hindī, or whāĩ-hō, as in Eastern Rājasthānī:

Future, I shall become, etc.

1st form—

Sing.	Plur.
1. whēhũ.	whēhā.
2. whēhī.	whēhō.
3. whēhī.	whēhī.

huũ-lā, whēũ-lā, etc.

3rd form,—

huũ-gō, whēũ-gō, etc.

Imperative, become!

sing. whāi, plur. hōwō.

The other tenses can be formed from the foregoing elements.

THE FINITE VERB.

Root, mār, strike.

Present participle, mār^atō, striking.

Past participle, māriyō, māryō (fem. mārī), struck.

Adjectival past participle, māriyōṛō, māriyō-huwō, stricken.

Conjunctive participle, mār, mār-kar, mārār, mar-nāĩ (or -nāĩ), mārũ-nāĩ (or -nāĩ), mār^atō-knāĩ, having struck.

Infinitive, māraṇ, mār^aṇō, mār^aṇũ, mār^abō, to strike.

Noun of Agency, mār^aṇāwālō, mār^abāwālō, a striker.

The Adjectival past participle is only employed as an adjective, like the Hindi mārā-huā. When a participle is used adverbially, it takes the termination ā. Thus, mulk-mē liyā phirā, I will take (thee) about the country; mhārō māl magāw^atā gharī na kar^asī jēj, he will not make an hour's delay in sending for my property; āw^atā āw^atā ghar nērō āyō, as he came along he arrived close to the house.

Simple Present—I strike, I may strike, I shall strike, etc.

Sing.	Plur.
1. mārũ.	mārā.
2. mārāĩ.	mārō.
3. mārāĩ.	mārāĩ.

This tense is often employed as a present subjunctive or even as a future.

Present Definite, I am striking, etc.

Formed by conjugating the simple present with the present tense of the auxiliary verb.

Sing.	Plur.
1. mārũ-hũ.	mārā-hā.
2. mārāĩ-hāĩ.	mārō-hō.
3. mārāĩ-hāĩ.	marāĩ-hāĩ.

Imperfect, I was striking, etc.

This has two forms. Either it is formed as in Hindī, with the present participle and the past tense of the auxiliary verb, or else the past tense of the auxiliary verb is added to a verbal noun in ā. Thus—

Form I.

	SING.		PLUR.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1.	mār^atō-hō	mār^atī-hī	mār^atā-hā	mār^atī-hī
2.	mār^atō-hō	mār^atī-hī	mār^atā-hā	mār^atī-hī
3.	mār^atō-hō	mār^atī-hī	mār^atā-hā	mār^atī-hī

Form II.

	SING.		PLUR.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1.	mārāt-hō	mārāt-hī	mārāt-hā	mārāt-hī
2.	mārāt-hō	mārāt-hī	mārāt-hā	mārāt-hī
3.	mārāt-hō	mārāt-hī	mārāt-hā	mārāt-hī

Future, I shall strike.

This has three forms—

Form I.—This tense is formed directly from the root—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	mār^ahū, mār^asū, mārū	mār^ahā, mārā
2.	mār^ahī, mār^asī, mārī	mār^ahō, mārō
3.	mār^ahī, mār^asī, mārī	mār^ahī, mārī

The forms with s belong to Eastern Rājasthānī, and, in Mārwārī, are only employed in the singular.

II.—This is formed by adding lā to the simple present. Lā corresponds to the lō of Eastern Rājasthānī, but does not change for gender or number, as lō does.

	Sing. Masc. and Fem.	Plur. Masc. and Fem.
1.	mārū-lā	mārā-lā
2.	mārāt-lā	mārō-lā
3.	mārāt-lā	mārāt-lā

III.—This is formed by adding gō, which changes for gender and number, to the simple present. It properly belongs to Eastern Rājasthānī.

	SING.		PLUR.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1.	mārũ-gō	mārũ-gī	mārã-gā	mārã-gī
2.	mārāt-gō	mārāt-gī	mārō-gā	mārō-gī
3.	mārāt-gō	mārāt-gī	mārāt-gā	mārāt-gī

Imperative, strike thou, etc.

2. sg. mār, pl. mārō.

Respectful forms mārjai, mārjai, mārjyō, mārjō.

Past Tenses.—These are formed from the past participle as in Hindī. Transitive verbs use the passive or the impersonal construction, and intransitive ones the active or the impersonal construction. The various tenses will be found below. Note that the impersonal construction, with the subject in the case of the agent, can be used with intransitive as well as with transitive verbs. Thus, nāin^akiāi dāw^arāi gayō, by the younger son it was gone, i.e., the younger son went.

The following additional tenses are formed from the present participle :—

hũ mār^atō, (if) I had struck.

hũ mār^atō-huũ, I may be striking.

hũ mār^atō-huũ-lā, I shall (or may) be striking.

hũ mār^atō-hōtō, were I striking.

The following are the tenses formed from the past participle :—

mhāi mārīyō, I struck (him).

hũ sūtō, I slept.

mhāi mārīyō-hāi, I have struck (him).

hũ sūtō-hũ, I have slept.

mhāi mārīyō-hō, I had struck (him).

hũ sūtō-hō, I had slept.

mhāi mārīyō-huāi, I may have struck (him).

hũ sūtō-huũ, I may have slept.

mhāi mārīyō-huũ-lā, I shall (or may) have struck (him).

hũ sūtō-huũ-lā, I shall (or may) have slept.

mhāi mārīyō-hōtō, had I struck (him).

hũ sūtō-hōtō, had I slept.

In the above sūtō is an irregular past participle of the intransitive verb sōw^anō, to sleep. The regular form, sōyō, is also used.

Irregular verbs.—The following verbs are also irregular :—

kar^anō, to do, past participle kīyō (fem. kī or kīvī) or kārīyō.

lēw^anō, to take, past participle līyō (fem. lī or līvī).

dēw^anō, to give, past participle dīyō (fem. dī or dīvī).

pīw°nō, to drink, past participle pīyō (fem. pī or pīvī).

jāw°nō, to go, past participle gayō (fem. gaī).

kah°nō, kāñ°nō, or kāñw°nō, to say, 3. pres. kawāī; past participle kayō (fem. kahī or kaī); conjunctive participle kāīyar.

- Like kah°nō are conjugated rah°nō, to remain, and bah°nō, to flow.

The past participles of kar°nō, dēw°nō and lēw°nō are sometimes kīnō, kīdhō or kīdō; dīnō, dīdhō or dīdō; and līnō, līdhō or līdō, respectively. Similarly khāw°nō, to eat, makes khādhō. Mar°nō, to die, has marīyō or muchyō. Dēkh°nō, to see, has dīthō.

Other verbs sometimes form the past participle in ō, not iyō, as in kasālō bhug°tan lāgō, he began to feel want.

Causal verbs.—These are formed generally as in Hindī except that the causal suffix is āw, not ā, and the double causal suffix is wāw, not wā. Thus, uḍ°nō, to fly; causal uḍāw°nō; double causal uḍwāw°nō. Root vowels are shortened as in Hindī; viz., ā to a; ī, ē, and āi to i; and ū, ō, and āū to u.

Causals formed like mār°nō, to kill, from m°r°nō, to die, and khōl°nō, to open, from khul°nō, to be open, are as in Hindī.

Verbs whose roots end in h, drop the h in the causal. Thus, from bah°nō, to flow, ḥawāw°nō, and from kah°nō, to say, kawāw°nō.

The following do not follow the usual Hindī rules:—

dēw°nō, to give, causal dirāw°nō, double causal dirwāw°nō.

lēw°nō, to take, causal lirāw°nō, double causal lirwāw°nō.

sīw°nō, to sew, causal sīwāw°nō.

khāw°nō, to eat, causal khawāw°nō.

pīw°nō, to drink, causal piwāw°nō.

Negative voice.—A kind of negative voice is formed by conjugating the present participle with the verb rah°nō, to remain. Thus gātō rah°nō, is 'not to sing,' not (as in Hindī) 'to continue singing.' Dr. Kellogg gives the following example of this idiom, kīwān jar-dō kāi manakh mahāī ātā rahāī, shut the door that people may not come in.

Passive voice.—Mārwarī has a regular inflected passive voice, formed by adding īj to the root of the primitive verb. Thus, mār°nō, to strike; marīj°nō, to be struck. The primitive root undergoes the same changes that it does in the formation of causals. Other examples are:—

Active.	Passive.
kar°nō , to do	karīj°nō
khāw°nō , to eat	khawīj°nō
lēw°nō , to take	lirīj°nō
dēw°nō , to give	dirīj°nō

Even neuter verbs can take this passive (cf. the Latin luditur a me), and are then construed impersonally. Thus, from āw°nō, to come, we have awīj°nō, to be come; mhāī-sū awījāī nahī, by me it is not come, I cannot come. Other examples of these passives, mhū marījīyō, I was struck; thāī-sū nahī khawījāī-lā, it will not be eaten by you, you will not be able to eat it. It will be observed that these passives have always a kind of potential sense, like the potential passive formed by adding ā to the root in the languages of Hindostan proper.

Compound verbs.—These are as in Hindī, except that intensive verbs are often formed by prefixing rō, parō, or warō, which are adjectives and agree in gender with the object of any tense (not only the past tenses) of a transitive verb, and with the subject of an intransitive verb. Warō is used when the action is reflexive, and makes a kind of middle voice, as in warō lēw^onō, to take for oneself.

Examples are :—

parō mār^anō, to kill (Hindī mār-dāl^anā).

parō jāw^onō, to go away (Hindī chalā-jānā).

parō uṭh^anō, to rise up (Hindī uṭh-jānā).

thū warō jā, thou (masc.) go away.

thū warī jā, thou (fem.) go away.

ū pōthī warī lēwāi, let him take the book for himself.

hū pōthī warī lēū-hū, I take the book for myself.

ū pōthī parī dēhī, he will give the book away.

mhāi chāb^akiyā rī dīvi-hāi, I have given (so and so) stripes.

Frequentative verbs are formed with the infinitive in bō, and not as in High Hir. Thus, jābō kar^anō, to go frequently.

Inceptive verbs are formed with the infinitive in n, as in uwō kasālō bhug^atan lā he began to experience want.

Vocabulary.—Mārwarī vocabulary is much nearer that of Gujarātī than that Hindī. In studying the language a Gujarātī dictionary will be found very useful. We may specially note the typical Gujarātī word nē or nāi, and, and the Gujarātī termination ij or hij used to give emphasis, and connected with the Śaurasēnī Prakrit jjēva, as in in-sū-hij, even from these; mār^awārī bhākhā-rī unnati hōw^anā-sū mār^awār-rō tō phāy^adō hūwāi-ij, by importance being attached to the Mārwarī language, Marwar itself will certainly profit. Sometimes this is doubled, and becomes jēj as in kar^asī-jēj, he will certainly do.

The termination rō is, as has been seen, added to past participles. It can also be added pleonastically to any noun, adjective, or pronoun. Thus, badō-rō dāw^arō, the elder son; jakō-rī gaw-rī kachērī-mā ubō-rī hāi, the cow which is standing in court. It will be seen that the ō in jakō and ubō is not changed for the feminine when rō follows.

CENTRAL EASTERN RĀJASTHĀNĪ.

The Central Eastern dialect of Rājasthānī contains four forms of speech which are recognised by natives as independent dialects. These are

Name of dialect.	Area
Jaipuri	Jaipur
Ajmēri	Ajmer
Kishangarhi	Kishangarh
Hārauṭi	Hārauṭi

So old and firmly established are these distinctions that the Serampore Missionaries in the beginning of the 18th century made separate translations of the New Testament into Jaipuri and Hārauṭi. And yet all these four forms of speech differ so slightly that they are really one dialect which can be named Eastern Rājasthānī. Over the whole area, which is clearly shown in the map facing p. 1, the language varies slightly from place to place, as is usual in the plains of India, but such local differences are too unimportant to justify us in allowing them to create separate dialects. Of the four, Jaipuri is the most important and may be taken as typical of the rest.

Eastern Rājasthānī is spoken in the centre and south of the Jaipur State and in the Thakurate of Lawā and those parts of Tonk which are close to Jaipur, in the greater part of the Kishangarh State, and the adjoining portion of the British district of Ajmer, in the Hārā States of Bundi and Kota (hence the name Hārauṭī), and in the adjoining portions of the States of Gwalior, Tonk (Pargana Chabra), and Jhallawar.

On its north-east, Eastern Rājasthānī has the Mēwātī dialect of the same language ; on its east, in order from north to south, the Ḍāṅg sub-dialects of the Braj Bhāshā spoken in East Jaipur, the Bundēlī of the centre, and the Mālvi of the south, of the Gwalior Agency of Central India. On its south it again has Mālvi and also the Mēwārī form of Mārwarī and on its west and north-west Mārwarī. It will thus be seen that, except for a portion of its eastern frontier, it is entirely surrounded by other Rājasthānī dialects.

We have taken Jaipurī as the standard of Eastern Rājasthānī. In the year 1898 His Highness the Maharaja of Jaipur published the results of a special linguistic survey of the State, which was conducted by the Rev. G. Macalister, M.A. From this it appears that no less than thirteen different forms of speech are employed in the State, of which six are forms of Jaipurī. These are Tōrāwāṭī, of the Tōmar country in the north of the State, standard Jaipurī in the centre, Kāṭhairā and Chaurāsi in the south-west, and Nāgarchāl and Rājāwāṭī in the south-east. Kishangarhī is spoken over nearly the whole of the State of Kishangarh and in a small piece of the north of Ajmēr, and Ajmērī over the east centre of the latter district. Hārauṭī is the dialect of Bundi and Kota, and also of the neighbouring portions of Jhallawar, Tonk, and Gwalior. In the last-named State about 48,000 people speak a sub-form of Hārauṭī called Sipārī or Shiopurī.

We thus get the following figures for the dialects and sub-dialects of Eastern Rājasthānī :—

JAI PURI—

No trustworthy figures are obtainable as to the number of speakers of Eastern Rājasthānī outside the tract of which it is a vernacular. The only dialect of Rājasthānī for which such figures are available is Mārwarī, and there can be little doubt that the figures given for that dialect include many speakers of Jaipurī and its related forms of speech.

Jaipurī has a large literature, which is all in manuscript and about which very little is known. The most important is probably the collection of works by the reformer, Dādūjī and his followers. Regarding these, the Rev. John Traill, writing in 1884, says as follows:—

“It is now twelve years since I was first introduced to the Bhāshā by the study of a religious poet called Dādū. This man was born in Ahmedabad in A.D. 1544, but he lived and taught a great deal in Jaipur, where many of his disciples are still to be found. The Nāgā soldiers of Jaipur form a part of them.

The Book, or Bāṇī of Dādū, I have translated into English. One of the copies of the Bāṇī now in my possession was written 234 years ago. In the Bāṇī there are 20,000 lines, and in Dādū's life, by Jān Gōpāl, 3,000. Then Dādū had fifty-two disciples, who spread his ideas through the country, and who all wrote books of their own, which are believed to be still extant in the Dāddwārās founded by them. Taking up the list of Dādū's disciples, I copy out a few names, with what each is said to have written:—

Gharīb Dās	32,000 lines.
Jaisā	124,000 „
Prayāg Dās	48,000 „
Rajab-jī	72,000 „
Bakhnā-jī	20,000 „
Śaṅkar Dās	4,400 „
Bābā Banwārī Dās	12,000 „
Sundar Dās	120,000 „
Mādhō Dās	68,000 „

And so on, through all the 52 disciples. All are said to have written more or less.

I say ‘are said to have written,’ for no European has yet collected their writings, though they are well known among the common people. I hardly meet a native unable to repeat some verse of poem or song composed by them. I believe that most of the books can yet be bought or borrowed for being copied. I have through friends seen, and am in possession of many books belonging to these men, and only the scanty resources of a private individual prevent me from possessing more of them. The men above mentioned are Dādū's immediate disciples: their disciples also wrote, and in this sect living authors are still to be found, so that men have been writing throughout the 340 years of this sect's existence.”

The Dādū-panthis are an offshoot of the sect founded by the celebrated Kabīr. They worship Rāma, but temples and images are prohibited. No doubt most of Dādū's disciples wrote in their native tongue, Jaipurī, but all the works of Dādū himself which I have seen are in an old form of Western Hindī.

The name ‘Jaipurī’ employed for the main language of Eastern Rājasthānī has been coined by Europeans, from the name of the chief town of the State. Natives usually call it Dhunḍhārī, or Jaipurī. Its various names.

the language of the Dhundhār country. This tract is the country lying to the south-east of the range of hills forming the boundary between Shekhawati and Jaipur proper. The name is said to be derived from a once celebrated sacrificial mount (dhūṇḍh) on the western frontier of the State.¹ Other names employed by natives are Jhār-sāhī bōlī, or the speech of the kingdom of the wilderness, and (contemptuously) Kāñ-kūñ-kī bōlī, or the speech of kāñ-kūñ, from the peculiar word kāñ, which, in Jaipurī, means 'what'? The people of Shekhawat do not use the Jaipurī word mālai, on, and they facetiously call a speaker of Jaipurī a 'mālai-hālō', or 'man who uses mālai.'

I know of the following works which deal with Jaipurī, and with the Dādū-Panthis:—

Of the above, Mr. Macalister's work is a most complete and valuable record of the many forms of speech employed in the Jaipur State. It is a Linguistic Survey of the entire State.

For books and the like the ordinary Dēva-nāgarī character is employed. The written character is the same as that found in Marwar, and is described on p. 19.

As excellent materials are available, and as Jaipurī can well be taken as the standard of the Eastern Rājasthānī dialects, I give the following pretty full account of its peculiarities. This is mainly based on the Grammar, Rev. G. Macalister's excellent work, and has additions here and there gathered from my own reading.

As regards pronunciation, we may note a frequent interchange of the vowels a and i. Thus, piṇḍat, a paṇḍit; sir gayō = Hindōstānī sar gayā, it decayed; minakh for mānukh, a man; dan for din, a day. The vowel ō is sometimes represented by ū, as in dīnū, instead of dīnō, given; kyū, instead of kyō, why. The diphthong ai is preferred to ē, as in maī, in. In words borrowed from Persian ending in h followed by a consonant, an i is inserted as in jhair for zahr, poison, sair for shahr, a city.

As regards consonants, aspiration is commonly omitted. Thus we have both bī and bhī, also; kusī, for khusī (Persian khushī), happiness; ādō, half; sīk^abō, to learn; kār^abō, to ^araw, pull; lād^abō (for lād^hbō), to obtain; dē for dēh, a body; sāy for sahāy, help. In phar^abō for par^hbō, to read, and chhar^abō for char^hbō, to rise, the aspirate has been transferred from one letter to a preceding one. So also in jhair for zahr, poison, already quoted and bhagat (i.e., bakhat for waqt) time.

We have seen that in words like sāy for sahāy, a medial h is dropped. This is the case with verbs like rah^hbō, to remain, and kah^hbō, to speak, which are frequently written raibō and kaibō respectively. More often, however, kah^hbō is written khaibō, with the aspiration transferred to the first consonant. So we have khū^h-chhū^h, say; khai^h-chhai^h, he says; khai, it (fem.) was said; khāñī, a story; mhārāj, for mahārāj, a king; bhai^htō, for bah^htō, floating; mhārō, for mahārō (Hindōstānī hamārā), my; thārō, for tahārō, thy.

The letters n and l often appear as cerebrals (𑀓 n and 𑀕 l respectively). This is a survival from old times. The rule is (as in Pañjābī, Marāṭhī, and Gujarātī) that in a tadbhava word when an n or an l was doubled in the Prakrit stage of the language, it remains a dental; but when it was not so doubled it is cerebralised. Thus we have :—

Prākṛit.	Rājasthānī.
dinnu , given	dīnū (dental n)
ghallai , he throws	ghālai (dental l)
bolliau , spoken	bōlyō (dental l)
challiau , gone	chālyō (dental l)
But janau , a person	janō (cerebral n)
bālu , a child	bāl (cerebral l)
chaliau , gone	chālyō (cerebral l)
kālu , time	compare kāl , a famine

Some monosyllabic words are enclitics, and are written as part of the preceding word. In such cases, when the enclitic word commences with a, and the preceding word ends with a vowel, the initial a of the enclitic is usually, but not always, elided. Such enclitic words are ar, and; ak, that; k (for kai), or; as, he, by him, his, she, etc.

As ak often takes the form k, it is liable to be confused with k, or. The word as meaning 'he,' etc., is not recognised in Mr. Macalister's grammar, but I do not think that there can be any doubt as to its existence. It is quite a common enclitic pronoun of the third person in many Indian languages. For instance, it is used in Bundēlī and in Eastern Hindī.

The word ar, and, is liable to be confused with r, the termination of the conjunctive participle. Thus, करर karar is 'having done,' but कखोर karyō-r, for karyō-ar, did and.

Examples of the use of these enclitics are as follows :—

ar, and :—

chhōṭ^hkyō bēṭō . . . chālyō-gāyō ar . . . āp-kō dhan uṛā-dīnū, the younger son went away and squandered his property. Here the initial a of ar has not been elided.

ādī rāt gaī-r (गईर) kāwar-jī nāi-nai bōlyā, midnight passed, and the youth spoke to the barber.

ũ-nai dūr-sũ ātō dēkhyō-'r (देख्योर) bāp-nai dayā ā-gai, from a distance he saw him coming, and pity came to the father.

ak, that :—

jō thē puchhō-'k (पूछोक्) ' mhē kãĩ karã? ' tō mui yā khũ-chhũ-'k (खुँछुँक्) ' aurã-kī sāy karbā-nai sadā tyār rahō-'k (रह्योक्) jĩ-sũ thē kām-kā minakh whai-jāwō, if you ask that 'what shall we do?' then I am saying this that 'always remain ready to help others that by this you may become a useful man.'

On the other hand, the initial a is not elided in ĩ lāyak kōnai ak thã-kō bēṭā bājũ, I am not so worthy that I should be called thy son.

k, or :—

kãĩ thē jāsyō-k (जास्योक्) kōnai, will you go or not.

wō rōṭi khãĩ-chhai-k (खाईछैक्) dūdḥ piyō chhai, has he eaten bread or drunk milk.

as, asĩ, pronominal suffix of the third person :—

āp bichārĩ-as ab aĩḍai raibā-kō .dharam kōnai,—she herself considered 'it is not proper to stay here.' Here the initial a is not elided.

rãñĩ puchhĩ-'s, ' wā kãĩ bāt chhai? '—the queen asked (lit. by the queen it was asked-by-her), 'what is that thing?'

mā-nai-'s khai kōnai, he did not tell it to his mother. This suffix sometimes takes the form asĩ as in ĩ nãḍĩ-mai hīrā mōṭi whai-'sĩ, in this river there are diamonds and pearls. cf. kanai-'sĩ-'k, near (him).

jid ũḍai sāsarai-'s gāwār-ĩ-gāwār chhā-ĩ, then there in his father-in-law's house they verily were perfect boors.

khãĩ gayō-'s, where did he go?

wō kyō āyō nai-'s, why did he not come.

mai-'s tō aĩḍai-ĩ chhō, it was I who was here.

Here the as does little more than emphasize the word mai.

There is one more enclitic particle added to adjectives of quantity and kind. It also is k. It does not affect the meaning, but probably, to judge from the instances of its occurrence in cognate languages such as Kāśmīrī and Bihārī, originally meant 'of him,' 'of her,' 'of it,' or 'of them.' Thus, कतरो katrō or कतरोक् katrō-k, feminine कतरी katrī or कतरीक् katrī-k, how much? kasyō or kasyō-k, feminine kasyī or kasyī-k, of what kind. Katarō-k probably means literally 'how much of him?'

DECLENSION.

Nouns Substantive.—The usual genders are masculine and feminine. There are also occasional occurrences of a neuter, as in sunyũ, it was heard. The masculine would be sunyō, and the feminine sunĩ.

As regards declension, there are wide divergencies from the system which is familiar in Hindōstānī.

Tadbhava nouns, which in Hindōstānī end in ā, in Jaipurī end in ō. Thus, ghōrō, a horse (Hindōstānī ghōrā). The normal oblique form singular and the nominative plural of these nouns ends in ā, thus, ghōrā-kō, of a horse; ghōrā, horses. The oblique plural ends in ā, as ghōṛā. These nouns have also another oblique form in the singular, ending in ai. Thus, ghōṛai. This is employed as a locative, and means 'in a horse.' It is also used to form the case of the agent, 'by a horse.' On the other hand, the agent is equally often the same in form as the nominative. Thus, pōtō khai or pōtai khai, by the grandson it was said, the grandson said. We thus get the following declension for this class of nouns. I give the word pōtō, a grandson, which is that employed by Mr. Macalister as an example:—

	Singular.	Plural.
Nom.	pōtō	pōtā
Agent	pōlō, pōlai	pōtā, pōtā
Loc.	pōtai	pōtā
Obl.	pōtā	pōtā
Voc.	pōtā	pōtō, pōtāwō

Note that the Agent case never takes the sign nē or nai as it does in Hindōstānī. The locative may also be formed with postpositions as in Hindōstānī.

The postpositions which form cases are as follows:—

Accusative	nai, kai.
Dative	nai, kanai.
Ablative	sū, saī.
Genitive	kō.
Locative	maī (in), ūpar or mālai (on).

Regarding these various postpositions, the following should be noted. The postpositions of the Accusative and Dative, kai and nai are by origin locatives (like pōtai) of genitive suffixes kō and nō. Kō itself is used in Jaipurī, and nō occurs in the closely related Gujarātī. Kanai is a contracted form of kai-nai. It usually means 'near'; hence 'to' after verbs of motion.

The genitive suffix kō has an oblique masculine kā and a feminine kī. Thus, pōtā-kō ghōṛō, the horse of the grandson; pōtā-kā ghōṛā-mālai, on the horse of the grandson; pōtā-kī bāt, the word of the grandson. It has also a locative form kai, which is usually, but not always, employed when in agreement with a noun in the locative. Thus, āp-kai sās^arai lugāi kanai gayō, he went to his wife in his father-in-law's house. As already explained, the suffix nai is itself a locative, and so is mālai; hence, when a genitive is in agreement with a noun governed by these postpositions, it also is put in the locative; thus, kanai for kai-nai explained above; āp-kō mātthō ar nāk pāñi-kai bārā-nai rākhai-chhai, it keeps its head and nose outside the water; sait-kai mālai, on the butter milk. Similarly āgai, before, and pāchhai, behind, are really locative, meaning respectively 'in front' and 'in back.' Hence, we have thā-kai pāchhai, behind you. When the genitive postposition is dropped, the main noun remains in the general oblique form as in mūḍā āgai, before the mouth, for mūḍā-kai āgai.

The locative postposition mālai is sometimes used with the locative of the genitive, as in sait-kai mālai above, and is sometimes attached directly to the oblique base, as in pōtā-mālai, on the grandson.

Other examples of the locative in ai are akkal thikānai ai, his sense came into a right condition; jō bātō mhārai bātai āwar, what share comes into my share, whatever my share of the property may be. In the plural we have kuggailā, in evil ways.

I have only noted this locative in ai in the case of tadbhava nouns in ō. Other nouns show, however, occasional instances of a locative singular in ā. Thus, bāgā chālā, let us go into the garden; bazārā chālā, let us go to market; dukānā-mai rahyō, he remained in the shop; pāchhā (as well as pāchhai), behind. These are all (except perhaps pāchhā) masculine nouns with nominatives ending in a consonant. With feminine nouns ending in i we have gōdyā, on the lap; gōḍalyā, on the knees; gōḍpōṭhyā, on the back; dhartyā, on the ground; bēlyā, early; bhāryā, on the ground; hatēlyā, on the palm of the hand; maryā (oblique form of an obsolete verbal noun marī) pāchhai, after dying.

Omitting this locative in ā, which does not appear to occur with all nouns, the following are examples of the declension of nouns other than tadbhavas in ō :—

	Singular.	Plural.
Nom.	rājā , a king	rājā
Agent	rājā	rājā , rājā
Obl.	rājā	rājā
Nom.	bāp , a father	bāp
Agent	bāp	bāp , bāpā
Obl.	bāp	bāpā
Nom.	chhōrī , a girl	chhōryā
Agent	chhōrī	chhōryā
Obl.	chhōrī	chhōryā
Nom.	bāt (fem.) a thing, a word	bātā
Agent	bāt	bātā
Obl.	bāt	bātā

The following examples illustrate the use of adjectives :—

ēk chōkhō minakh, a good man.

ēk chōkhā minakh-kō, of a good man.

chōkhā minakh, good men.

chōkhā min^akhā-kō, of good men.

Comparison is formed with the ablative, as in Hindōstānī. Thus, ū-kō bhāi ū-kī bhāi-sū lambō chhai, his brother is taller than his sister. Sometimes bīch, between, is used, as in wō maryō kīḍō ū bīch baḍō ar bhāryō chhō, that dead insect was bigger and more heavy than he.

PRONOUNS.—The pronoun of the first person is mai. It has two plurals, one āpā, we (including the person addressed), and another mhē, we (excluding him). If you say to your cook 'we shall dine to-night at eight o'clock,' and if you employ āpā for 'we,' you invite him to join the meal, while if you employ mhē, you do not.

The following are the principal forms :—

	Singular.	(excluding the person addressed.)	Plural. (including him.)
Nom.	mai	mhē	āpā
Agent	mai	mhē	āpā
Acc.-Dat.	mū-nai , ma-nai , mhārai	mhā-nai , mhā-kai	āpā-nai ; āp^anai
Genitive	mhārō (- rā , - rī , - rai), mhāw^alō	mhā-kō	āp^anū
Oblique form.	mū , ma , mai	mhā	āpā

In the above mhārō is treated exactly like a genitive in kō. So is āp^anū, obl. masc. āp^anā, locative āp^anai, fem. āp^anī. Note that āp^anū means 'our,' not 'own.'

Mr. Macalister gives the following examples of its use :—

āp^anū ghōrō gayō, our horse went.

āp^anā chhōrā yō kām karyō-chhai, our boys have done this deed.

wō āp^anā ghōrā-mālai baiṭhyō, he is seated on our horse.

wō āp^anā chhōrā-nai pharāwai-chhai, he is teaching our children to read.

The principal forms of the pronoun of the second person are :—

	Singular.	Plural.
Nom.	tū	thē
Agent	tū	thē
Acc.-Dat.	tū-nai, ta-nai, thārai	thā-nri, thā-kai
Gen.	thārō (-rā, -rī, -rai)	thā-kō
Obl.	tū, ta, tāi	thā

The genitive thārō is treated exactly like a genitive in kō.

I have pointed out that the accusative-dative suffixes nai and kai are really locatives of genitive suffixes. Here further note that the accusative-datives mhārai and thārai are locatives of the genitives mhārō and thārō respectively.

The Reflexive pronoun is āp, self. It is declined regularly, its genitive being āp-kō. It should be noted that the use of āp-kō when the pronoun refers to the subject of the sentence is not obligatory in Jaipurī. In Gujarātī this use has disappeared altogether. Thus, we have not only chhōṭī^akyō āp-kā bāp-nai khaī, the younger (son) said to his father, but also mai^a ūṭh^asyū^a ar mhārā (not āp-kā) bāp-kanai jāsyū^a, I will arise and go to my father.

The Demonstrative pronouns, including the pronoun of the third person, are yō, this; and wō or jō, he, it, that. The form jō is declined exactly like the relative pronoun jō, to which reference can be made. As an example of its use in the sense of a demonstrative pronoun (which indeed is common in Western Hindī, too) we may quote chhōrā chhōryā ar barā ād^amyā-kai chīrō jī-sū lagāwai-chhai, vaccination is performed from it (the cow) on boys, girls, and grown-up people. Similarly the pronominal adverb jid means both 'then' and 'when,' as in jid nāī . . . rōbā lāgyō-jid rāñī khaī, when the barber began to weep, then the Queen said.

Each of these pronouns has a feminine form; yā, wā, and jā, respectively, in the nominative singular only. In the other cases of the singular, and throughout the plural, the feminine is the same as the masculine.

The following are the principal parts of yō and wō.

Yō, this.			Wō, that.
	Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
Nom. . .	yō , (fem.) yā	yē	wō , (fem.) wā	wai

The Relative pronoun, which in the form jō is also used as a demonstrative pronoun, is thus declined:—

	Singular.	Plural.
Nom. . .	jō or jyō , (fem.) jā	jō or jyō
Agent . .	jō or jyō , (fem.) jā	jō , jyō , jā , or jyā

Gen. . .	jā-kō	jā-kō , jyā-kō
Obl. . .	jā	jā , jyā

The Interrogative pronouns are kun, who? and kāñ, what? Neither changes in declension. Thus kun-kō, of whom? kāñ-kō, of what? The word kāñ is typical of Jaipurī, which is hence locally called the kāñ-kūñ-kī bōlī.

Kōñ means 'any' and kēñ, 'some.' Neither changes in declension. Mr. Macalister does not give any form equivalent to the Hindōstānī kuchh, anything, nor can I find it in the specimens.

CONJUGATION.—Auxiliary Verbs and Verbs Substantive.

The Verb Substantive is declined as follows:—

Present, I am, etc.

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	chhū	chhā
2.	chhai	chhō
3.	chhai	chhai

The Past, I was, etc., is sing., masc., chhō, fem. chhī; plur., masc., chhā, fem. chhī. It does not change for person.

The Verb whaibō, to become, is irregular. The following are its principal parts:—

Infinitive.	whaibō , hōbō , whaiñū , or hōñū , to become.
Present Participle.	whaitō , hōtō , becoming.
Past Participle.	huyō , become.
Conjunctive Participle.	whair , hōr , having become.
Adverbial Participle.	whaitāñ , hōtāñ , immediately on becoming.
Noun of Agency.	whait , hōt , hōbāhālō , hōbālō , hōñhār , hōbākō , hōtib , or hōtab , one who becomes or is about to become.

Simple Present:—

I become, I may become, etc.

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	hōñ , or hū	whāñ
2.	hōy , whai	hō
3.	hōy , whai	whai

Future.

Of this there are two forms, viz.—

I shall become, etc.

I.

Sing.	Plur.
1. hōũ-lā, hōũ-lō, hũlā, or hũlō	whā-lā
2. hōy-lō, hō-lō, whailō	hō-lā
3. hōy-lō, hō-lō, whai-lō	whai-lā, or hō-lā

II.

1. hōsyũ	hōsyā
2. hōsī	hōsyō
3. hōsī	hōsī

Imperative.—2. sg., whai, pl., hō ; respectful whājō, whaijō, or hōjō.

The other tenses are regularly formed from these elements.

Finite Verb.—The conjugation of the Finite Verb differs widely from that of Hindōstānī. Not only are the auxiliary verbs different, but so are the radical tenses and participles of the verb.

In Hindōstānī the old simple present has lost its original meaning, and is now employed almost exclusively as a present subjunctive. In Jaipurī it is used not only as a present subjunctive but also in its true sense of a simple present indicative.

The present definite is formed by conjugating not the present participle, but the simple present with the auxiliary. Thus, not mār^atō-chhũ, but mārũ-chhũ, I am striking.

The imperfect is formed by appending an auxiliary verb to an oblique verbal noun in ai. Thus maĩ mārāi-chhō, not maĩ mār^atō-chhō, I was striking, literally, I was on-striking. Compare the English 'I was a-striking.'

The future has two forms. One is formed on the analogy of the Hindōstānī future, lā or lō being substituted for gā. Thus maĩ mārũ-lā or maĩ mārũ-lō, I shall strike. In the plural lā is alone used, and not lō.

The second form of the future has sy or sī for its characteristic letter, and is the direct descendant of the old Śaurasēnī Prakrit future. Thus maĩ mār^asyũ, I shall strike.

The Infinitive ends in bō or ñũ, thus mār^abō or mār^añũ.

The Conjunctive Participle takes the termination ar or, after a vowel, r. Thus, mārar, having struck; dēr, having given. This termination must be distinguished from the enclitic particle ar or r meaning 'and,' with which it has nothing to do. It is derived from kar, of which the k has been elided, while the rest has been welded into one word with the root and has become a true termination, not a suffix.

The past tenses of transitive verbs are constructed passively as in Hindōstānī, but it must be remembered that in Jaipurī the agent takes no termination, while it is the accusative that takes the termination nai. Thus 'he struck the horse' would be:—

Hindōstānī—

	us-nē	ghōṛē-kō	mārā
Jaipurī —
	wo	ghōṛā-nai	māryō
English —
	by-him	to-the-horse	it-was-struck.

With these remarks I give the following conjugational forms of the verb mār^abō, to strike :—

Infinitive.	mār^abō (obl. mār^abā) or mār^anū (obl. mār^anā), to strike.
Present Participle.	mār^atō , striking.
Past Participle.	māryō (obl. sing. and nom. plur. masc. māryā ; fem. māri), struck.
Conjunctive Participle.	mārar , having struck.
Adverbial Participle.	mār^atāi , immediately on striking.
Noun of Agency.	mār^abāhālō , mār^abālō , mārārō , or mārākō , a striker.
Simple Present and Present Subjunctive—

I strike or may strike, etc.

	Sing.	Plur.
	1. mārū	mārā
	2. mārai	mārō
	3. mārai	mārai ¹
Future—
	I shall strike, etc.
I.	1. mārū-lā or mārū-lō	mārā-lā
	2. mārai-lō	mārō-lā
	3. mārai-lō	mārai-lā
	(Fem. mārū-lī , pl. mārā-lī , and so on.)
II.	1. mār^asyū	mār^asyā
	2. mār^asī	mār^asyō
	3. mār^asī	mār^asī

(The masculine and the feminine are the same in this form.)

Present Definite—

I am striking, etc.

	1. mārū-chhū	mārā-chhā
	2. mārai-chhai	mārō-chhō
	3. mārai-chhai	mārai-chhai
Imperfect—

I was striking, etc.

	1. maĩ mārai-chhō	mhē mārai-chhā
	2. tū mārai-chhō	thē mārai-chhā
	3. wō mārai-chhō	wai mārai-chhā
	(Fem. sing. and pl. mārai-chhī .)

Past—

I struck (by me was struck), etc.

	1. maĩ māryō	mhē māryō
	2. tū māryō	thē māryō
	3. wō māryō	wai māryō

Other forms are :—

Perfect	maĩ māryō chhai , I have struck.
Pluperfect	maĩ māryō chhō , I had struck.
Past Conditional	jai maĩ mār^atō , if I had struck!

¹ Note that the 3rd plural is not nasalised.

Similarly we have, after the analogy of Hindōstānī, maĩ mār^atō-hũ, I may be striking; maĩ mār^atō-hũ-lō, I shall be striking, I may be striking; jai maĩ mār^atō-whaitō, were I striking; maĩ mār^yō-whai, I may have struck; maĩ mār^yō-whai-lō, I shall have struck, or may have struck; jai maĩ mār^yō-whaitō, had I struck.

The following irregularities in conjugation have been noted by me.

The past participle ends in yō, but in one or two cases I have noticed that the y is dropped. Thus I have come across laggō, as well as laggyō, he began.

The word khaichai is used over and over again in Mr. Macalister's selections, and usually appears to have the meaning of 'he said.' It seems to be a corruption of khai-chhai, he says, used as a historical present. It may be noted that the aspiration of the auxiliary verb is regularly dropped in Nīmāḍī. See p. 61.

From dēbō, to give, we have an imperative dyō, and a past participle dīnū or dīyō. Similarly lēbō, to take, has lyō and līnū or līyō. Kar^abō, to do, makes its past participle regularly karyō. Jābō, to go, has its past participle gayō, giyō, gyō, or gō.

Verbs of speaking and asking govern the dative of the person addressed and not the ablative. Thus, bāp-nai khaĩ, he said to his father; ũ-nai pūchhi, he asked him. Note that the past participle is feminine, to agree with bāt, understood.

Compound verbs are much as in Hindōstānī. Nākh^abō is used like ḍālnā in that language. Thus, chhōrā-nai mār-nākh, kill the children.

Frequentatives are made with the infinitive. Thus, kar^abō kar^ajē, do continually, keep doing, = Hindōstānī kiyā kījīyē. Inceptives are formed with the oblique infinitive, as in raiḍā lāggō, he began to remain.

The verb ābō, to come, is often compounded with the root of another verb, y being inserted. Thus, ly-āwō, bring; jīy-āyō, he came to life; lādy-āyō, he was found. In Dēva-nāgarī these words are written लावो, जीयायो, and लाद्यायो respectively.

Causals are formed as in Hindōstānī. It may be noted that the causal of piṭ^abō, to be beaten, is pīṭ^abō.

The usual Negative is kōnai. Thus, kōnai, I am not (worthy); kōnai rōũ, I do not weep. Generally the kō precedes the verb and nai follows, as in kōi-ĩ āḍ^amī kō-dētō-nai, no one used to give. Kō by itself is used pleonastically in affirmative sentences. Thus on pages 48 and 49 of Mr. Macalister's Selections, we have nāi kō bōlyō, the barber said; nāi kō dukān-maĩ utar-gayō, the barber descended into the shop. Judging from the analogy of other dialects, kō seems to be connected with kōi, any, and may be considered as equivalent to the English 'at all.'

NORTH-EASTERN RĀJASTHĀNĪ.

North-eastern Rājasthānī represents Jaipurī merging into Western Hindī, it possesses two sub-dialects; in one, Mēwātī, Jaipurī is merging into the Braj Bhākhā dialect, and in the other, Ahīrwātī, it is merging, through Mēwātī, into the Bāṅgarū dialect.

The populations reported as speaking these two dialects are :—

Mēwātī	1,121,154
Ahīrwātī	448,945
TOTAL	1,570,099.

The head-quarters of Mēwātī may be taken as the State of Alwar in Rajputana, and of Ahīrwātī as Rewari in the Panjab District of Gurgaon. Both dialects are of a mixed character. Each is described separately in the following pages.

MĒWĀTĪ.

Mēwātī is, properly speaking, the language of Mewat, the country of the Mēōs, but it covers a larger tract than this. It is the language of the whole of the State of Alwar, of which only a portion is Mewat. Mēwātī is also spoken in the north-west of the State of Bharatpur and in the south-east of the Panjab district of Gurgaon. These last two areas do fall within Mewat. To the north-west of the Alwar State there is situated the Kot Kasam Nizāmat of the Jaipur State and the Bawal Nizāmat of the Nabha State. Here also Mēwātī is spoken. The Jaipur and Nabha people call their Mēwātī 'Bīghōtā-kī bōlī,' a name the exact meaning of which I have failed to ascertain.

The Alwar Gazetteer (pp. 167-8) defines the true Mewat country as follows:—The ancient country of Mewat may be roughly described as contained within a line running irregularly northwards from Dig in Bharatpur to somewhat above the latitude of Rewari. Then westwards below Rewari to the longitude of a point six miles west of Alwar city and then south to the Bara stream in Alwar. The line then turning eastwards would run to Dig, and approximately from the southern boundary of the tract.

Mēwātī is bounded on the east by the Braj Bhākhā of Bharatpur and east Gurgaon and on the south by the Dāñg dialects of Jaipur. On its north it has the Ahīrwātī of west Gurgaon. On its south-west it has the Tōrāwātī form of Jaipurī, and on the north-west, the mixed dialect of Narnaul Nizāmat of Patiala. Beyond this last is Shekhāwātī. The Narnaul dialect will be considered under the head of Ahīrwātī.

Language Boundaries.

Mēwātī itself is a border dialect. It represents Rājasthānī fading off into the Braj Bhākhā dialect of Hindī. It varies slightly from place to place, and, in Alwar, is said to have four sub-dialects, viz.:—Standard Mēwātī, Rāṭhī Mēwātī, Nahērā Mēwātī, and Kāṭhēr Mēwātī. Kāṭhēr Mēwātī is also the Mēwātī of Bharatpur. The Kāṭhēr tract consists of the north-west of Bharatpur, and of a small portion adjoining it in the south-east of Alwar. Kāṭhēr Mēwātī is, as might be expected from its position, mixed with Braj Bhākhā. So also, it may be observed, is the Mēwātī of Gurgaon. Nahērā Mēwātī is mixed with Jaipurī. Nahera is the name of the western portion of Tahsil Thana Ghazi which lies in the south-west of Alwar State. The Rāṭh (ruthless) tract is the country of the Chauhan Rajputs and lies near the north-west border. Rāṭhī Mēwātī, as well as the Mēwātī of Kot Kasam of Jaipur and Bawal of Nabha is mixed with Ahīrwātī. Over the rest of Alwar the language is Standard Mēwātī. The Alwar State officials give the following figures for the number of speakers of each of these sub-dialects:—

Sub-dialects.

Standard Mēwātī	253,800
Rāṭhī Mēwātī	222,200
Nahērā Mēwātī	169,300
Kāṭhēr Mēwātī	113,300
TOTAL	758,600

In Bharatpur, Kāṭhēr Mēwātī is spoken by 80,000 people in the divisions of Nagar, Gopalgarh, Pahari, and Kama, so that we may put down the total number of speakers f Kathēr Mēwātī at 193,300. I do not propose to refer to these sub-dialects again. They are all mixed forms of speech and are of no importance.

The number of speakers of Mēwātī, in the Mēwātī-speaking tract, is reported to be as follows. It must be explained that the Nābhā State has given no separate figures for the Mēwātī of Bawal, which its return shows as Ahīrwātī, not Mēwātī. I put it down as having roughly about 20,000 speakers:—

Rajputana—
Alwar	758,600
Bharatpur	80,000
Kot Kasam of Jaipur	17,054
		• 855,654
Punjab—
Gurgaon	245,500
Bawal of Nabha	20,000
	TOTAL :	1,121,154

No figures are available for Mēwātī spoken abroad except that there are said to be 18,694 speakers of it in Delhi district who probably really speak Ahīrwātī, and 800 speakers of it in Jalaun in the United Provinces.

Literature. I am not acquainted with any literary work in the Mēwātī dialect.

Authorities. The Rev. G. Macalister has given a short grammar and several specimens of 'Bighōtā,' i.e., the Mēwātī of Bawal and Kot Kasam, in his admirable Specimens of the Dialects spoken in the State of Jaipur, to which work frequent reference has been made, when describing the Central Eastern Rājasthānī dialects. The only other allusion to the language with which I am acquainted is contained in a few lines in the language section of the Gurgaon Gazetteer.

Grammar. The following account of the Mēwātī dialect is based, partly on Mr. Macalister's notes, and partly on the specimens. It is very brief, and I have mainly confined myself to points in which the dialect differs from Jaipurī.

Declension. The declension of nouns closely follows that of Jaipurī. The only difference is that the agent case can take the postposition nai as well as accusative and dative, and that the postposition of the ablative is generally taĩ instead of sũ. We thus get the following declension of ghōṛō, a horse:—

	Sing.	Plur.
Nominative	ghōṛō	ghōṛā
Agent	ghōṛō, ghōṛai, ghōṛā-nai	ghōṛā, ghōṛā, ghōṛā-nai
Accusative	ghōṛā-nai, -kai	ghōṛā-nai, -kai
Dative	ghōṛā-nai	ghōṛā-nai
Ablative	ghōṛā-taĩ	ghōṛā-taĩ
Genitive	ghōṛā-kō (kā, kai, kī)	ghōṛā-kō, etc.
Locative	ghōṛai, ghōṛā-maĩ	ghōṛā-maĩ
Vocative	ghōṛā	ghōṛō

It is unnecessary to give other examples. The Jaipurī grammar gives all that is necessary.

The Genitive suffixes kō, kā, kai, and kī are used exactly as in Jaipurī.

Adjectives often end in yō, where in Hindī they end in ā, and in Jaipurī in ō.

Thus, āchhyō, good; bhāryō, severe.

We occasionally find remains of a neuter gender, as in sunyū, it was heard.

Pronouns.—The following are the forms of the first two personal pronouns:—

	I.	Thou.
Sing. Nom.	maĩ	tū
Agent	maĩ	taĩ, tū
Obl.	muĵ, mū, mērai	tuĵ, tū, tērai
Gen.	mērō	tērō
Plur. Nom.	ham, hamā	tam, tum, tham
Obl.	ham, mhārai	tam, thārai
Gen.	mhārō	thārō

I have not noted the use of āp, to mean 'we, including the speaker,' in this dialect.

'Own' is ap^anū, obl. ap^anā.

The Demonstrative Pronouns are yō, this, and wō or bō, he, it, that. As in Jaipurī, the nominative singular has a feminine form for each, viz.:—yā or ā, this; wā, she. The following is the declension:—

	This.	That.
Sing. Nom.	yō , fem. yā, ā	wō, bō, wōh , fem. wā .
Agent	yō (fem. yā, ā), ī, aĩ	wō, bō (fem. wā), bī, wāĩ
Obl.	aĩ	waĩ, waĩh
Gen.	aĩ-kō	waĩ-kō, waĩh-kō
Plur. Nom.	yē, yaĩ	wē, wāĩ, waĩh
Obl.	in	un
Gen.	in-kō	un-kō

The Relative and Interrogative Pronouns are thus declined:—

	Who.	Who?
Sing. Nom.	jō, jyō	kaun
Obl.	jhāĩ, jaĩh	kaĩh (ablative kit-taĩ)
Plur. Nom.	jō, jyō	kaun
Obl.	jin	kin

As elsewhere in Rajputana, the Relative often has the force of a demonstrative pronoun.

The Neuter Interrogative pronoun is kē, what? The oblique form singular is kyāĩ.

The Indefinite pronoun kōĩ, anyone, has its oblique form kah or kahĩ. 'Anything' is kimaĩ.

It will be seen that, on the whole, the pronominal declension closely follows Western Hindī.

CONJUGATION.—Auxiliary Verbs and Verbs Substantive.Present. 'I am,' etc.

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	hũ	hã
2.	hai, hā	hō
3.	hai	haĩ

Past. 'I was,' etc.

1. 2. and 3.	Sing.		Plur.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
	hō or hau or thō	hī thī	hā thā	hī thī

The following are the principal parts of the verb 'to become':—

Infinitive	whaiḥō, hōbō, whaiṇū, to become.
Present Participle	hōto, whaitō, becoming.
Past Participle	huyō, become.
Conjunctive Participle	hō-kar, hōr, having become.
Noun of Agency	whaitū, whaiṇhār, one who becomes.

Simple Present. 'I become, I may become,' etc.

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	hōũ, hũ	whã
2.	whai, whā	hō
3.	whai, whā	whaĩ

Note that (unlike Jaipurī, but like Western Hindī) the 3rd Person Plural is nasalised.

Present Definite	hũ-hũ, I am becoming.
Imperfect	whai-hō, I was becoming.
Future	hũ-gō, I shall become.

FINITE VERB.—The principal parts are:—

Infinitive	mārḥō, mārṇū, to strike.
Present Participle	mārṭō, striking.
Past Participle	māryō, struck.
Conjunctive Participle	mār-kar, mārār, mār-karhāṇī, having struck.
Noun of Agency	mārāṇ-wālō.

Simple Present. 'I strike' or 'may strike,' etc.

	Sing.	/ Plur.
1.	mārũ	mārã
2.	mārai, mārā	mārō
3.	mārai, mārā	māraĩ

Definite Present. 'I am striking,' etc.

Formed, as usual in Rājasthānī, by conjugating the verb substantive with the simple present :—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	mārũ-hũ	mārã-hã
2.	mārā-hai	mārō-hō
3.	mārai-hai	māraĩ-haĩ

Imperfect. 'I was striking,' etc.

Formed, as usual, by conjugating the past tense of the verb substantive with a verbal noun in ai. The same for all persons.

	Sing.		Plur.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1. 2. and 3.	mārai-hō	mārai-hī	mārai-hā	mārai-hī

Future. Formed with gō (compare Hindī gā), as in North Jaipurī.

	Sing.		Plur.
	Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
1.	mārũ-gō	mārũ-gī	mārã-gā	mārã-gī
2.	mārā-gō	mārā-gī	mārō-gā	mārō-gī
3.	mārai-gō	mārai-gī	māraĩ-gā	māraĩ-gī

Past. māryō, fem. mārī; Plur. māryā, fem. mārī, struck (by me, thee, etc.), as usual.

Past Conditional. mārātō, (if I) had struck, etc.

Other tenses can be formed from the above elements, as in Jaipurī.

In other respects, the dialect closely follows Jaipurī.

AHĪRWĀṬĪ.

Ahīrwāṭī, also called Hīrwāṭī and Ahīrwāl¹ (or the language of the Ahīr country) is spoken in the west of the district of Gurgaon (including the state of Pataudi).² It is also found in the Dābar tract of the district of Delhi, round Najafgarh, where it is called (not incorrectly) Mēwāṭī. This tract is geographically a continuation of the Gurgaon country. In the same direction, it covers the Jhajjar Tahsil in the south of the district of Rohtak. Further north we have the Bāngarū dialect of Western Hindī, and the Ahīrwāṭī of Delhi and Rohtak, is much mixed with this dialect.

To the east of Ahīrwāṭī, in the central part of Gurgaon, and also south of Gurgaon, in the state of Alwar, the language is Mēwāṭī, of which Ahīrwāṭī is merely a variety. We may take the centre of the Ahīrwāṭī-speaking country as Rewari in West Gurgaon.

To the west of Gurgaon lies the southern tract of the state of Nabha. Here, except in the north of the tract, where Bāngarū is spoken, the language is also Ahīrwāṭī. Again, along the west of this portion of Nabha, and still further south, along the west of the state of Alwar, lies the long narrow Narnaul Nizāmat of Patiala, which has to its north the Dadri Nizāmat of Jind, and to its west the Shēkhāwāṭī territory of Jaipur. To its south, lies the Tōrāwāṭī country of Jaipur. In Dadri of Jind the language is mainly Bāgrī. In Shēkhāwāṭī it is a form of Mārwarī; in Tōrāwāṭī it is a form of Jaipuri; in Alwar it is Mēwāṭī; and in south Nabha it is Ahīrwāṭī. The language of Narnaul of Patiala is also Ahīrwāṭī, but, as may be expected, it is much mixed with the surrounding dialects.³

We thus see that Ahīrwāṭī represents the connecting link between Mēwāṭī and three other dialects, Bāngarū, Bāgrī, and Shēkhāwāṭī. Although it has one striking peculiarity, which appears all over the area which it occupies,—I allude to the form taken by the verb substantive,—it has in other respects various local varieties due to the influence of the neighbouring dialects. Its backbone is, however, throughout Mēwāṭī, and it can only be classed as a form of that dialect of Rājasthānī.

The Ābhīras, or, as they are called at the present day, Ahīrs, or Hīrs, were once a most important tribe of Western India. On the famous stone pillar at Allahabad, Samudra-gupta (4th century A.D.) records their names as that of one of the nations whom he has conquered. When the Kāttīs arrived in Gujarat in the 8th century they found the country in the hands of the Ahīrs.

The Ahīrs owned Khandesh and Nimar, and a shepherd chief of their tribe named Āsā is said to have founded the fort of Āsīgarh in the latter district at the time of the Muhammadan invasion. Ptolemy mentioned them under the name of 'Αβίρια and, at the beginning of our era, there were Ahīr rājās so far east as Nepal. Under such circumstances it is not surprising that we find dialects named after Ābhīras in several parts of Western India. In parts of Gujarat itself there are at the present day people speaking an Ahīr dialect. The dialect of Rājasthānī spoken in Malwa is usually called Mālvi (distinct from the Mālwaī dialect of Pañjābī), but is also called Ahīrī; and that curious form of Gujarātī, which is half a Bhīl dialect, and which is generally known as Khāndēśī, also bears the name of Ahīrāṇī. Nay more, between Khandesh and the Ahīrwāṭī country of Gurgaon there lies the wild hilly territory occupied by the Bhīls, whose language is nearly allied to that of Khandesh, and it is not impossible that, according to known phonetic rules, the word Bhilla or Bhīl should be explained as an old corruption of the word Ābhira. All these colonies of Ahīrs who have been described as possessing languages of their own, have been separated so widely, and for so many centuries, that it is not reasonable to expect that at the present day they should be found using the same form of speech, nor is this the case. There are, nevertheless, some striking points of agreement between Ahīrwāṭī and Khāndēśī which deserve attention. The most important of these is the use of the word sū to mean 'I am' which is typical of Ahīrwāṭī and its connected dialects, and is also common in Khāndēśī.

² A small portion of the State of Dujana is also within Gurgaon, but no separate language return has been received for it, and it may be left out of account.

The number of speakers of Ahīrwāṭī is reported to be as follows:—

Number of speakers.
Gurgaon	159,900
Pataudi	19,000
Delhi (returned as Mēwāṭī)	18,694
Rohtak (Jhajjar)	71,470
South Nabha	43,881 ¹
Narnaul of Patiala (returned as Bāgrī-Mēwāṭī)	136,000
TOTAL	448,945

I know of no works written in Ahīrwāṭī, and of no previous account of their literature, authorities, language.

Ahīrwāṭī is written in all three characters, Dēva-nāgarī, Gurmukhī, and Persian.

The choice of alphabet lies with the writer. For instance, the specimens from the Sikh Nabha state of the Panjab are written in the Gurmukhī character, and those of the district of Gurgaon, in which there are a number of Braj Bhākhā speakers, are in Dēva-nāgarī. On the other hand, the Rohtak specimens are in the Persian character. I give specimens of Ahīrwāṭī in the Dēva-nāgarī and Persian characters. Those in the Gurmukhī character need not be printed.

In its grammar Ahīrwāṭī differs but little from Mēwāṭī. It is the stepping stone between that dialect and the Bāngarū dialect of Western Hindī spoken in Delhi, Rohtak, East Hissar, and Karnal. In south Rohtak and in the Dābar tract of Delhi as we know, the language is actually Ahīrwāṭī. It hence shows some points of connection with Bāngarū, the principal being the use of the word sū, instead of the Mēwāṭī hū, to mean I am. The following are the main particulars in which Ahīrwāṭī differs from Mēwāṭī. I take the Ahīrwāṭī of Gurgaon as the standard.

The nominative of strong masculine nouns of the a base ends in ō, with an oblique singular in ā, thus agreeing with Mēwāṭī as against Bāngarū which has ā, with an oblique ē. The same rule is followed in adjectives and in the suffixes of the genitive, it being understood that when they agree with nouns in the locative, they, as usual in Rājasthānī, end in ē, not ā. Thus, mhārē (not mhārā) gharī, in my house. Nouns of this class form the locative singular in ē or ai, as ghōrē, or ghōrai, in a horse. Masculine nouns ending in consonants form the locative in ī, as in gharī, in a house. The usual suffix of the dative is nai or nē, and the same suffix is also used for the case of the agent. The genitive suffix is kō, as in Mēwātī. The agent case is regularly used before the future passive participle, which is the same in form as the infinitive, as in tū-nē karṇō thō, it was to be done by thee. Note that the locative of the genitive is often used for the dative, e.g. mērai, to me.

As usual, there are occasional instances of a neuter gender, as in dīpū, that which is to be given.

The personal pronouns are as in Mēwātī. We have also ma-nē as well as mū-nē, by me. Note the use of nē to form the agent case of these pronouns. Tumhārō is 'your.' 'Own' is apṇū or apṇō, masculine oblique apṇā.

The demonstrative pronouns are yō or yoh (feminine yā), this, oblique singular aīh or āh, oblique plural in, often used in the sense of the singular; and wō or woh (feminine wā, that), oblique singular waīh or wāh or ū, oblique plural un, also often used as a singular. As usual the relative pronoun is often employed in the sense of a demonstrative. So jab, then, as well as 'when.'

In other respects, the pronouns follow Mēwātī. Probably the oblique singular of jō and kaun are jaīh or jāh and kaīh or kāh, respectively, but I have not come across examples.

In verbs, the only thing to note is the verb substantivē. In the present this is:—

	Singular.	Plural.
1.	sū	sā .
2.	sā , sai	sō , or saī .
3.	sai	saī .

The past is thō, was, feminine thī, masculine plural thā. In the country round Bawal of Nabha and Kot Kasam of Jaipur, sō (sī, sā) is also used, as well as thō.

The saī of the second plural present is borrowed from Bāgrī. The syllable gō is sometimes added to the present, like the gā of Panjābī. Thus, sai-gō, he is, corresponding to the Panjābī hai-gā.

In other respects verbs are conjugated as in Mēwātī.

MĀLVĪ.

Mālvī is, properly speaking, the language of Malwa, and this is very nearly a correct account of the locality in which it is the vernacular. It is spoken in the Malwa tract, i.e., in the Indore, Bhopal, Bhopawar, and Western Malwa Agencies of Central India. On the east it also extends into the south-west of the Gwalior Agency, into the adjoining Rajputana State of Kota (the main language of which is Hārāṭī), and into the neighbouring Chabra Pargana of Tonk. It is also spoken in the Nimbahera Pargana of Tonk, on the eastern border of Mewar, which is geographically a portion of the Western Malwa Agency. It has crossed the Narbada and is spoken in a corrupt form in the western part of the Hoshangabad district, and in the north of the Betul district of the Central Provinces, and also by some tribes in Chhindwara and Chanda.

On the north, Mālvī has the East Central dialects of Rājasthānī, of which we have taken Jaipurī as the standard. To the east it has the Bundēlī dialect of Western Hindī spoken in Gwalior and Saugor. On its south it has in order, from east to west, the Bundēlī of Narsinghpur and Eastern and Central Hoshangabad, the Marāṭhī of Berar, and the Nīmāḍī dialect of Rājasthānī spoken in North Nimar and Bhopawar. On its north-west it has the Mēwārī form of Mārwarī, and on its south-west Gujarātī and Khāndēśī. This description does not take into account the numerous Bhil and Gōṇḍ dialects spoken in the mountainous parts of the Mālvī area. These are shown in the map facing p. 1.

Mālvī is distinctly a Rājasthānī dialect, having relations with both Mārwarī and Jaipurī. It forms its genitive by adding kō as in the latter language, while the present tense of the verb substantive follows Mārwarī and is hū, not chhū. The past tense of the verb substantive is formed on independent lines, and is thō, thus closely agreeing with Western Hindī. The future of the finite verb is formed from the simple present by adding gā, which (like the Mārwarī lā) does not change for number or gender. The imperfect tense is formed by adding the past tense of the verb substantive to the present participle (as in Hindōstānī), and not by adding it to a verbal noun in ē or ai, as in other Rājasthānī dialects.

Mālvī is remarkably uniform over the whole area in which it is spoken. Towards the east we may see the influence of the neighbouring Bundēlī, and speak of an Eastern Mālvī, but it is hardly worthy of being considered to be a separate sub-dialect. A recognised sub-dialect, however, is Sōṇḍwārī, spoken by the Sōṇḍiās, a wild tribe who inhabit the north-east of the Western Malwa Agency, the adjoining Chaumahla pargana of the state of Jhalawar, and the neighbouring portion of the Bhopal Agency. The Mālvī of the Central Provinces is corrupt, but hardly a sub-dialect. The form of Mālvī spoken by Rajputs of Malwa proper is called Rāṅgrī. It is distinguished by its preference for Mārwarī forms.

Number of speakers. in which it is a vernacular :—

Indore Agency	183,750

No figures are available to show the number of speakers of Mālvī in other parts of India. It is true that from a few districts some speakers of Mālvī spoken elsewhere in India. Rāṅgrī are reported, but to give the number of these would only be misleading. No doubt many persons who were returned as speaking Mārṇārī really spoke Mālvī. As the main dialect of Central India, Mālvī has exercised considerable influence on the Dakhinī Hindōstānī of Hyderabad and Madras.

I do not know of any previous account of the Mālvī dialect, or of any literary Authorities and Literature. works written in it.

The Dēva-nāgarī character, usually in a corrupt form closely allied to that used for Written character. Mārṇārī, is employed for writing Mālvī.

As Mēwātī represents Rājasthānī merging into Braj Bhākhā and Panjābī, so Mālvī Grammar. represents Rājasthānī merging into Bundēlī and Gujarātī.

We may take the language of the Indore Agency of Central India as the standard form of the dialect, and the specimens given, on which the grammatical sketch which follows is based, come from the Junior Branch of the Dewas State in that area.

As stated above, Mālvī, in the Malwa country, has two forms, viz. :—Rāṅgrī (properly spelt Rāṅgrī) or Rāj-wārī, spoken by Rajputs, and Mālvī (properly spelt Mālvī), sometimes called Ahīrī, spoken by the rest of the population. There is not much difference between these two forms of speech. When they do differ, Rāṅgrī shows a tendency to agree with the dialects of central Rajputana, Mārṇārī (under the form of Mēwārī) and Jaipurī.

Mālvī, itself, is certainly a Rājasthānī dialect, although it now and then shows a tendency to shade off into Bundēlī or Gujarātī. As regards the name Ahīrī, attention has been drawn, when dealing with Ahīr-wātī,¹ to the number of localities in India to whose language this tribe has given its name.

The following brief grammatical sketch is based on the specimens from the Indore Agency. The language closely agrees with Jaipurī and Mārwarī, which have been treated at considerable length, and I now confine myself to giving only the main heads. Unless it is otherwise stated, my remarks apply both to Rāngrī and to Mālvī proper.

PRONUNCIATION.—There is the usual Rājasthānī tendency to pronounce ai as ē, and au as ō. Thus we have hē or hai, is; chēn for chain, pleasure; ōr for aur, and. As usual i and u are often changed to ā; thus, dan, a day; maṭṭī for miṭṭhī, a kiss; ṭhākar, for ṭhākur, a chieftain. So also there are numerous examples of the dropping of an aspirate. Thus, kāḍō for kāḍhō, draw (water); bī, for bhī, also; aḍāi, for aḍhāi, two and a half; dūd, for dūdh, milk; līdō or līdhō, taken (a Gujarātī form); kīdō or kīdhō, done (also Gujarātī); manak, for manukh, a man; maṭṭī, for miṭṭhī, a kiss. To this group belongs the common Rājasthānī contraction of verbs whose roots end in h, as rē-hai, for rahē-hai, he remains; kēnō, for kah^anō, a saying, an order; riyō or rayō, for rahyō, was.

Words which elsewhere begin with b sometimes follow Gujarātī in having w. Thus, wāt as well as bāt, a word.

A perusal of the specimens will show that the sound of ḍ is everywhere preferred to that of ṛ. The sound really fluctuates between these two, and the use of ḍ is rather a matter of spelling.

As compared with Rāngrī, Mālvī shows a decided, but not universal preference for dental over cerebral letters. Thus Mālvī has ap^anō, own; mār^anō, to strike; while Rāngrī has āp^anō, and mār^anō.

When a noun ends in a long vowel, it may almost be nasalised ad libitum and, vice versa, a nasal at the end of a word is commonly dropped ad libitum. Thus the oblique plural ends quite as often in ā as in ā̃, and the postposition of the locative is mē̃ or mē.

DECLENSION.—NOUNS SUBSTANTIVE.

Gender.—I have not noted any trace of the neuter gender.

Number and Case.—The usual Rājasthānī rules for forming the plural and the oblique form are followed. Thus:—

Singular.		Plural.
Nominative.	Oblique.	Nominative.	Oblique.
ghōḍō , a horse	ghōḍā	ghōḍā	ghōḍā̃ .
ṭēg^aḍō , a dog	ṭēg^aḍā	ṭēg^aḍā	ṭēg^aḍā̃ .
bāp , a father	bāp	bāp	bāpā̃ .
laḍ^akī , a daughter	laḍ^akī	laḍ^akyā̃	laḍ^akyā̃ .
wāt , a word	wāt	wātā̃	wātā̃ .

In the plural forms, the nasalisation is commonly omitted.

In Mālvī, as distinct from Rāngrī, the plural may take the suffix, hōr, hōrō, or hōnō. This is specially interesting as we meet the same plural termination in the Khas language of Nepal, under the form of haru or heru. So, also, in the old form of Kanauji preserved in Carey's translation of the New Testament published early in the nineteenth century, there is a plural termination hwār.¹ Examples of this form in Mālvī are bāp-hōr, fathers; bēṭi-hōrō, daughters; ād^mmī-hōn-sē (not ādmyā-hōn-sē), from men; ghōḍā-hōnō, horses. Each of these suffixes can be used with any case of the plural.

There is the usual locative in ē, as in gharē, in a house.

Rāngrī makes its case of the agent by adding ē or ē̃. Thus, bāpē or bāpē̃, the father (saw). This word is written sometimes बापे and sometimes बापे̃. Another example is chhōṭā laḍ^{kā}kāē̃ chalyō-gayō, by the younger son it was gone. Which shows that the ē̃ can be added to the oblique form (as in Gujarātī), and that the agent case is sometimes used before the past tense of neuter verbs, as we have often before noticed in the dialects of Rājasthānī and Western Hindī. The ē is not always used. Thus we have vī sar^ddār (not sar^ddārē) ārī karī, that sardār accepted.

Mālvī, itself, on the contrary, alone among the Rājasthānī dialects, uses nē exactly as in Western Hindī. Thus, chhōṭā chhōrā-ne bāp-sē kiyō, the younger son said to his father.

The usual case postpositions (omitting those of the agent) are as follows :—

Accusative-Dative	nē, kē.
Ablative-Instru.	sū, sē, ũ.
Genitive	kō, rō.
Locative	mē, mē.

Of these, Mālvī seldom employs nē for the accusative-dative. We have already seen that it uses it for the agent. In Rāngrī, however, it is quite common as an accusative-dative postposition. The genitive postposition rō properly belongs to Mēwārī. It is most common in Rāngrī. Mālvī prefers kō. These two postpositions are declined as in the other Rājasthānī dialects,—feminine kī, rī; oblique masculine kā, rā. As usual they generally take the forms kē and rē, when agreeing with a noun in the locative or (in Rāngrī) the agent. Thus, pitā-rē gharē, in the house of the father.

Pronouns.—The personal pronouns in Rāngrī are as follows :—

Singular.	I.	Thou.
Nominative	hū	tū.
Agent	mhaī	thaī.
Oblique	mha, mhā, ma	tha, thā, ta.
Genitive	mhārō, mārō	thārō.
Plural.
Nominative	mhē, mē	thē, thā.
Oblique	mhā	thā.
Genitive	mhā-kō, mhānō	thā-kō, thānō.

In all the above, the nasals are frequently omitted. Mālvī differs slightly. 'I' is hū or mū; 'our' is hamārō, not mhā-kō; and 'your' is tamārō, not thā-kō. 'You' is tam, not thē.

¹ e.g., ham-hwār, we, in Luke xv, 23.

Besides the above forms, the first person has, as in other dialects of Rājasthānī, a plural which includes the person addressed. I have noted the following forms (Rāṅgrī) āpā-nē, to us; (Mālvī) apan, we; apan-nē, by us.

'Your Honour' is āp, genitive āp-rō or āp-kō. Sā and jī are respectful suffixes. Thus, bhābhā-sā, a father. 'Self' is āp, genitive (Rāṅgrī) āp^anō, (Mālvī) ap^anō. Āp^anō is, however, as is common in Rājasthānī, often not used, the ordinary pronominal genitives being employed instead. Thus, while we have ō-nē ap^anā māl-tāl-kō bātō kar-diyō, he divided his property, we have in the immediately preceding sentence chhōtā chhōrā-nē.ō-kā bāp-sē kiyyō, the younger son said to his father.

The pronoun of the third person differs in Rāṅgrī and Mālvī. Its forms are as follows:—

	Rāṅgrī.	Mālvī.
Singular—Nominative	wō , he, it; wā , she; ū , he, she, it	ū .
Oblique	waṇī , waṇā , uṇī , uṇā , uṇ , vī , ū , wā	ō , unā , us .
Plural—Nominative	vī	vī .
Oblique	waṇā	un .

As usual, nasals may be omitted. The agent case in Rāṅgrī is ū, as in ū rāj^apūt karī, that Rajput did. The emphatic syllable -j is often added, as ū-j wakhat, at that very time.

The demonstrative pronoun yō, this, is similarly declined. Thus:—

	Rāṅgrī.	Mālvī.
Singular—Nominative	yō , feminine yā	yō , feminine yā .
Oblique	aṇī , iṇī , ī , yā	ē , aṇā , iṇā , is .
Plural—Nominative	yē	yē .
Oblique	aṇā , iṇā	in .

The Relative is:—

Singular—Nominative	jō	jō .
Oblique	jaṇī , jī	jē , jīs .
Plural—Nominative	jē	jē .
Oblique	jaṇā	jīn .

Similarly 'who?' is kūṇ, oblique singular (Rāṅgrī) kaṇī, etc. (Mālvī) kē, etc. 'What?' is kaī, kaī, or kāī. 'Anyone' kōī. As an adjective this does not change in inflexion, but (Rāṅgrī) kaṇī-ē nahī diyā, no one gave them. Mālvī, however, has here kōī-nē.

Pronominal adjectives often take the pleonastic suffix, k, which is so common in Jaipurī. Thus, kit^arō-k, how much? kit^arā-k, how many?

As elsewhere in Rājasthānī, the relative over and over again has the force of a demonstrative pronoun. So we have jad, 'then' and 'when'; 'jaṭhē,' 'there' and 'where.'

A number of pronominal adverbs are pure locatives as will be seen from the following:—

aṭhō, this place; aṭhā-sē, from here; aṭhē, here.

waṭhō, that place: waṭhā-sē, from there; waṭhē, there.

uthō, that place; uthā-sē, from there; uthē, there.

jaṭhō, what place, that place; jaṭhā-sē, from where, from there; jaṭhē, where, there.

kaṭhō, what place? kaṭhā-sē, from where? kaṭhē, where?

Present. I am.

Singular.	Plural.
1. hū	hā.
2. hē, hai	hō.
3. hē, hai	hē, hai.

Note that, as usual in Rājasthānī, the third person plural is not nasalised—

Past. I was.

Masc.	sing.	thō;	plur.	thā.
Fem.	sing.	thī;	plur.	thī.

As elsewhere, this tense does not change for person. Rāngrī has also a form thakō, was.

The following are the principal parts of the verb 'to become'—

	Rāngrī.	Mālvī.
Infinitive	whēnō, wēnō	hōnō.
Present Participle	whētō, wētō	hōtō.
Past Participle	whayō	huō.
Conjunctive Participle	whē-nē, wā-nē	hū-nē.
Imperative	whō	hō.
Future	waūgā, wūgā	hōūgō.

Finite verb.—Principal Parts.

Infinitive	mār^anō, mār^awō	mār^anō, to strike.
Present Participle	mār^atō	mār^atō, striking.
Past Participle	māryō	māryō, struck.
Conjunctive Participle	mārī-nē, mār-nē	mārī-nē, mār-nē, having struck.
Noun of agency	mār^awā-wālō	mār^awā-wālō, a striker.

Simple Present. This is as in other Rājasthānī dialects. It is used as a simple present (I strike); as a present conjunctive (I may strike); and as a future (I shall strike).

Singular.	Plural.
1. mārū	mārā.
2. mārē	mārō.
3. mārē	mārē.

The Present Definite. I am striking, as elsewhere in Rājasthānī.—

Singular.	Plural.
1. mārū-hū	mārā-hā.
2. mārē-hē	mārō-hō.
3. mārē-hē	mārē-hē.

The Imperfect (I was striking) is not formed on the model of the other Rājasthānī dialects with an oblique verbal noun in ē, but with the present participle, as in Gujarātī and Bundelī. Thus, hũ mār^{at}tō-thō, I was beating, and so on, as in those languages.

The Future is formed by adding gā, which does not change for number or gender, to the simple present. The gā thus follows the lā of Mārwarī. Thus :—

	Singular.	I shall strike.	Plural.
1.	mārũgā		mārāgā.
2.	mārēgā		mārōgā.
3.	mārēgā		mārēgā.

Mālvī sometimes substitutes the Bundelī gō for gā, and this gō is liable to change for number and gender. Thus : hũ mārũgō, I (masculine) shall strike ; hũ mārũgī, I (feminine) shall strike ; ham mārāgā, we (masculine) shall strike ; ham mārāgī, we (feminine) shall strike. The futures with s or h for their characteristic letters do not seem to occur.

The tenses from the past participle are formed as usual. Those of transitive verbs are construed passively. Thus :—

Rāngrī.	Mālvī.
maĩ māryō	mha-nē māryō , I struck.
hũ chalyō	hũ chalyō , I went.
maĩ māryō-hai	mha-nē māryō-hai , I have struck.
hũ chalyō hai	hũ chalyō-hai , I have gone.
maĩ māryō-thō	mha-nē māryō-thō , I had struck.
hũ chalyō-thō	hũ chalyō-thō , I had gone.

Neuter verbs are sometimes construed impersonally, with the subject in the agent case, as in lad^akāē gayō, the son went.

There are the usual irregular past participles. The only ones which require special notice are the three,—

kar^anō , to do,	past participle	karyō, kīdhō, kīdō.
lēnō , to take,	„	liyō, līdhō, līdō.
dēnō , to give,	„	diyō, dīdhō, dīdō.

The forms kīdhō, līdhō, and dīdhō, also occur in Gujarātī. Jānō, to go, has its past participle gayō or giyō.

We have seen that the conjunctive participle ends in ī-nē. When the root of the verb ends in ā, the whole becomes āy-nē in Rāngrī and ai-nē in Mālvī. Thus, pāy-nē, having got ; jāy-nē, having gone ; bulai-nē, having called ; ai-nē, having come.

Causals are formed somewhat as in Mārwarī, that is to say, they often insert a ā after the characteristic ā. Thus, jimāḍō, you cause to eat. In Mārwarī r is inserted.

A potential passive is, as usual, formed by adding ā. Thus (Rāngrī) suṇ^anō, to hear ; suṇānō, to become audible. Note that, as in Northern Gujarātī, these potential passives form their past tenses by adding nō (Mālvī nō) to the root. The past tense is accordingly the same in form as the infinitive. Thus (Rāngrī) suṇānō, it became audible ; (Mālvī) batānō, it was displayed. It may be noted that in Awadhī, all verbs in ā form their past tenses in this fashion.

Compound verbs are formed as usual. As an uncommon form of an intensive compound we may note the Mālvī dai-lākh^anō, to give away. As examples of other compound verbs we may give bhējyā karē, he sends regularly ; paḍ^awā lāgī, she began to fall. In one instance, Mālvī has the Būndēli form kēnē lagyō, he began to say.

SUFFIXES.—The suffix j (also found in Gujarātī) is very common. It intensifies the meaning of the word to which it is attached. Thus, thōḍā-j dānā-mē, in a very few days ; up^ar-aj, even upon.

The Rājasthānī suffix ḍō is also very common. It is usually employed in a diminutive or contemptuous sense. Thus, bālu-ḍā, the children ; minak-ḍī, the little she-cat ; tēg^a-ḍō, a dog. Lō is also used in the same sense as in kūkaḍ-lā, O wretched cock.

NĪMĀḌĪ.

Nīmāḍī is the dialect of Rājasthānī which is spoken in the tract known as Nīmāwar. Nīmāwar consists of the Nimar district of the Central Provinces (except the Burhanpur Taḥṣīl, which lies in the valley of the Tapti, not in that of the Narbadā, and is geographically a portion of the Khandesh plain)¹ and of the adjoining portion of the Bhopawar Agency of Central India. Nīmāḍī is not the only language of Nīmāwar. There are also numerous speakers of Bhilī. In the Bhopawar Agency, these latter entirely surround the Nīmāḍī speakers, separating them from their brethren of Nimar. There are hence two distinct tracts in which Nīmāḍī is spoken, but in both the language is practically the same.

Nīmāḍī has no literature, and has not hitherto been described. The number of its speakers is estimated to be as follows :—

Nimar	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	181,277
Bhopawar	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	293,500
TOTAL										474,777

Nīmāḍī is really a form of the Mālvi dialect of Rājasthānī, but it has such marked peculiarities of its own that it must be considered separately. It has fallen under the influence of the neighbouring Gujarātī and Bhil languages, and also of the Khāndēśī which lies to its south. The Nīmāḍī of Bhopawar, being nearer Gujarat, shows more signs of the influence of Gujarātī than does the Nīmāḍī of Nimār.

In its pronunciation Nīmāḍī is mainly peculiar in its almost universal change of every ē which occurs in Rājasthānī to a. This runs through the entire grammar.

Thus the sign of the agent case is na, not nē, and of the locative ma, not mē. So āga for āgē, before, and rahach (sometimes written rahēch, but pronounced rahach), he remains. This is also a marked peculiarity of Khāndēśī.

Nīmāḍī is not fond of nasal sounds, and frequently drops them. Thus, dāt, not dāt̃, a tooth, and ma, not mā (for mē), in. As in Mālvi and Khāndēśī, aspiration is often dropped, as in hāt, not hāth, a hand; bhūkō, for bhūkhō, hungry.

The letters l and n are interchangeable as in līm and nīm, tree.

In the neighbouring Bhil languages, both j and ch are commonly pronounced as s. In Nīmāḍī, ch seems to be pronounced according to its proper sound, but j is often interchanged with it. Thus in Nimar both jawach and jawaj means 'he goes.' In the specimens which come from Bhopawar such forms are always written with j. The letter jh is often pronounced as a z, as in the Marāṭhī of Berar, and as in some forms of Khāndēśī.

In the declension of nouns, the common form in ē, which in Rājasthānī is used sometimes for the agent and sometimes for the locative, appears in Nīmāḍī as ending in a. Thus we have ghara, in a house.

Strong masculine tadbhavas in ō, form their oblique form in ā, as in Mālvi. Thus, ghōḍō, a horse, ghōḍā-kō, of a horse. To form the plural the termination nā is added to the oblique form singular. Thus, ghōḍānā, horses; ghōḍānā-kō, of horses:

ḍāp, a father; bāp^anā, fathers; bēṭi, a daughter; bēṭinā, daughters. When no ambiguity is likely to occur, this nā is often omitted.

The case postpositions are as follows. It will be observed that many of them differ from those in use in Mālvi merely owing to the change of ē to a.

Agent, na.

Accusative-dative, ka.

Instrumental-ablative, sī, sū.

Genitive, kō, (kā, kī).

Locative, ma.

We occasionally find the Rājasthāni kā, and the Bundēli khē (under the form of kha) used for the Accusative-dative. Bundēli is spoken a short way to the east of Nimar.

The genitive postposition kō is used with a singular masculine noun in the direct form, and kā with a masculine noun in the oblique form. Kī is used with feminine nouns. In two instances I have noted kā used to agree with feminine nouns. These are—mhārā kākā-kā ēk chhōrā-kī ō-kā bahēn-sī sādī huīch, a son of my uncle is married to his sister; and ō-kō bhāi ō-kā bahēn-sī ūchō chhē, his brother is taller than his sisters.

The following are the principal pronominal forms:—

Haū, I; ma-na, by me; mha-ka, or ma-ka, to me; mhārō, my; ham, we; hamārō, our; apaṇ, we (including the person addressed); ap^anō, our (including the person addressed); apaṇ-na, by us.

Tū, thou; tū-na, by thee; thārō, thy; tum, you; tumhārō, your.

Yē, this; oblique inā or ē.

Wō, he, that; oblique unā, wō, ō, wa; Pl. wō; oblique un.

Jō, who (singular and plural); jē-kō, of whom; oblique singular jē.

Kuṇ or kun, who? kuṇ-kō, of whom; kāi, what? kōi, anyone; kaī, anything.

The influence of the Bhil dialects and of Khāndēśi is most evident in the conjugation of the Nīmāḍi verb. The present tense of the verb substantive is chhē, which (like the Khāndēśi sē) does not change for number or person.

The past tense of the verb substantive is thō (thā, thī), as in Mālvi. When used as an auxiliary verb chhē drops the final ē and its aspiration, and becomes ch, which in its turn (especially in Bhopawar) often becomes j. We thus get the following form of the present of mār^anū, to strike.

I am striking.

Singular.	Plural.
1. mārūch or mārūj	mārāch , mārāj .
2. mārēch , mārach , mārēj , māraj .	mārōch , mārōj .
3. mārēch , mārach , mārēj , māraj .	mārēch , mārach , mārēj , māraj .

Similarly the perfect is māryōch, (he) has struck. In one instance, which, however, occurs several times, we have the Khāndēśi termination sē, instead of ch. The word is husē, and it is always translated 'he became,' not 'he has become.' Khāndēśi itself usually takes a simple s in the present, not sē. The Pār^adhī Bhil dialect uses ch like Nīmāḍi.

The future (as in Gujarātī) has s for its characteristic letter, and is conjugated as follows :—

Singular.	Plural.
1. mārīs	mār^asā.
2. mār^asē	mār^asō.
3. mār^asē	mār^asē.

Sometimes we find the true Mālvi future formed by adding an unchangeable gā.

The infinitive ends in ñū, thus, mār^añū, to strike; when used as a participle future passive, its subject is put in the case of the agent. Thus, apañ-na anand manāw^añū nī khūsī hōñū, joy was meet to be celebrated and happiness was meet to be (note that the participle is masculine although agreeing with a feminine noun) by us. The oblique form of the infinitive ends in ñā, thus, mār^añā-kō, of beating.

MĀRWĀRĪ.

The following specimen of Mārwarī comes from Marwar itself. It is a version of the parable and is an excellent example of the dialect. I give it in facsimile, in order to show the form which the Dēva-nāgarī alphabet assumes in Western Rajputana. Note the differing forms for q and r. The letters l and l are not distinguished in writing, but I have marked the difference in transliteration. No difficulty should be experienced in reading it with the aid of the transliteration and translation which follows it.

EASTERN MĀRWĀRĪ.

The language of the east of the Marwar State differs slightly from the standard form of the dialect.

To the east of the State lie, in order from north to south, the States of Jaipur and Kishangarh, and the British districts of Ajmer and Merwara. Down the centre of Ajmer-Merwara, from north to south run the Arvali Hills which in Ajmer may be taken as the boundary between Mār-wārī and Jaipurī (including Ajmērī). The district of Merwara is in the south almost entirely mountainous country, and here the Bhils who inhabit the fastnesses speak a Bhil dialect locally known as Mag^arā-kī bōlī, from mag^arō, a Bhil word for "mountain." Further north in Merwara the range bifurcates, enclosing the pargana of Beawar. In this northern half of Merwara natives recognise two dialects. That on the east they call Mēr-wārī, which is practically the same as the Mēwārī of the State of Mewar immediately to the east. The dialect on the western side they call Mār-wārī. The two hardly differ. As will be seen later on, Mēwārī (and hence Mēr-wārī) is only an eastern form of Mār-wārī slightly affected by Jaipurī, and the dialect on the west of Beawar is the ordinary dialect of eastern Marwar, with its vocabulary here and there influenced by that of the neighbouring Bhil tribes. Along the common frontier of Marwar and Merwara, the hills are inhabited by Bhils, and their language is known in Marwar as the Girāsiyā-kī bōlī, or Nyār-kī bōlī.

Merwara separates the State of Marwar from that of Mewar, and the estimated numbers of speakers of its main languages are as follows:—

	Spoken by
North-west, Mār-wārī	17,000
North-east, Mēr-wārī (i.e., Mēwārī)	54,500
Mag ^a rā-kī bōlī (Bhil language)	44,500
TOTAL =	119,999

The range of the Merwara hills on the Marwar side gradually becomes higher and more precipitous as we go south till it finally meets the Vindhya mountains near the isolated mount of Abu, in Sirohi.

The relative positions of the languages of Ajmer are dealt with on pp. 200 and ff. The principal ones are Ajmērī (a mixed form of Jaipurī), in the east-centre and north-east; Mār-wārī, on the west side of the line of the Arvali hills bordering on Marwar; and Mēwārī in the country on the south, bordering on Mewar. The Mār-wārī is the same in kind as the Mār-wārī of the east of the Marwar State.

In Jaipur, where it abuts on Marwar near the Sambhar lake, Jaipurī holds its own up to the frontier, but in Kishangarh immediately to the south, Mār-wārī is spoken for a short distance from the frontier.

Returning to Marwar itself, I have said that the language of the eastern part of the State differs slightly from the standard. This only means that in the north-east it is approaching Jaipurī more and more nearly as we go eastwards. We find here and there the Jaipurī genitive in kō instead of the Mār-wārī one in rō; the Jaipurī verb substantive chhū, I am, instead of the Mār-wārī hū, and the Jaipurī future with s, instead of the Mār-wārī future ending in lā. The varying proportions of the admixture of Jaipurī have led natives to give special names to the dialects of different localities. Thus the Mār-wāri spoken in Marwar close to the Jaipur frontier is called, in Marwar, Dhunḍhārī (one of the names of Jaipurī), because the Jaipurī influence is very strong. Here indeed the language is a mixed one, and, near the Jaipur border, is probably nearer Jaipurī than Mār-wāri. In Kishangarh the local Mār-wāri is called Gōrāwāṭī, a name probably identical with the south-eastern Gōḍwāri of Marwar. Further south, in Ajmer the Mār-wāri does not seem to have any special name, nor is any such given for the Mār-wāri of Merwara.

On the east of Merwara lies the important State of Mewar. The language of Mewar and of the neighbourhood is called Mēwāri. It is only a form of Eastern Mār-wāri. On account of its historical importance it will be dealt with at greater length further on, and detailed figures will then be given.

The following are the figures of the various forms of Eastern Mār-wāri :—

Mār-wāri-Dhunḍhārī (Marwar)	49,300
Gōrāwāṭī (Kishangarh)	15,000
Mār-wāri of Ajmer	208,700
Mār-wāri of Merwara	17,000
Mēwāri (including Mār-wāri)	1,684,864
	Total = 1,974,864

I commence with the most northern of these dialects, Mār-wāri-Dhunḍhārī, and proceed southwards.

MĀRWĀRĪ OF KISHANGARH (GŌRĀWĀṬĪ) AND OF AJMER.

These two dialects may be considered together. They are much more free from Jaipurī than the dialect shown in the preceding pages.

As a specimen I give a short folk-song from Ajmer. It is not exactly teetotal in its sentiments, but its language is unexceptional as an example of dialect. Notice the frequent use of expletive additions, such as nī, jī, and rō (feminine ri). The last termination has been already discussed in the Mārwarī grammar (see p. 30). It is also employed in Jaipurī, usually in a contemptuous sense. Here it is more endearing than contemptuous. Thus, dāru-rī might be translated 'a dear little drop of wine.' We may also note the way in which the first person plural is employed in the sense of the singular.

MĀRWĀRĪ OF MERWARĀ.

The Eastern Mārwarī of Merwara also hardly differs from the Standard. There are a few strange words in the vocabulary, such as gīgō, a son; ājūkā (Sanskrit ājīvika), livelihood, and that is all. As a specimen I give a short extract from the Parable. The short Mārwarī ऐ āi is often written ए ē. In such cases I have transliterated it āi. Forms like wunā for unā, are mere varieties of spelling. Note the employment of rō in a contemptuous sense in the word sūr-rō, a pig. In bāchh, having divided, a ṭ has become chh.

MEWĀRĪ.

Turning now to the east, we come to Mewar, the proper home of Mēwārī. This form of Mārwārī is spoken over the whole of the Mewar State, except in the south-west and south, where the hill country is inhabited by Bhils, who have their own language. Mēwārī has to its east, on the north the Hārauṭi of Bundi, and further south, the Mālwi of the Malwa Agency in Central India.

Besides being spoken in the tract politically known as the state of Mewar or Udaipur, it is also spoken in two tracts which fall geographically in the same area. These are the Gangapur pargana of the Nimach district of Gwalior and the Nimbahera pargana of Tonk. It is also spoken in various areas bordering on Mewar, viz., in the north of the Partabgarh State, in the north-east of Merwara (where it is called Mēr-wārī), in the south of Ajmer, in the south of Kishangarh (where it is called Sarwārī), and in the hilly tract known as the Khairār, where the three states of Mewar, Jaipur, and Bundi meet; and where it is known as Khairārī. These various kinds of Mēwārī will be dealt with in detail further on.

The number of speakers of Mēwārī is estimated to be as follows :—

Mewar (including pargana Gangapur of Gwalior)	1,300,000
Tonk (Nimbahera)	58,000
Partabgarh	5,000
Ajmer	24,100
Merwara (Mēr-wārī)	54,500
Kishangarh (Sarwārī)	15,000
Khairārī—
Mewar	145,000
Jaipur	59,264
Bundi	24,000

The Mēwārī spoken in Udaipur partakes of the general character of all the dialects of Eastern Mār-wārī. It is really a mixture of Mār-wārī and Jaipurī. The typical Jaipurī chhū, I am, chhō, was, do not occur: instead we have the Mār-wārī hū and hō. On the other hand, the suffix of the genitive is kō as in Jaipurī, rō only occurring in pronominal forms such as mhārō, my. The other postpositions are nē or kē for the accusative dative, hū (= Mār-wārī ū) for the ablative, and mā, for the locative. The pronouns are usually declined as in Mār-wārī, but we sometimes meet Jaipurī forms like vī, the oblique form of ū, that. In the verbs there are some slight divergencies from the standard. Before the past tense of a transitive verb the nominative is sometimes used instead of the agent, as in lhō^rkyō kahyō, the younger (son) said. In one case the conjunctive participle ends in har instead of ar, i.e., kar^ahar, having done. The original form from which both the regular karar and kar^ahar are derived was karakar. The initial k of the second kar was elided, and thus arose kara'ar, from which both karar and kar^ahar are descended. In the latter an h has been inserted for the sake of euphony.

The pluperfect takes the force of the imperfect, as in khāwā-hā, they were eating; chāwō-hō, he was wishing.

The verb dēṇō, to give, makes its past tense dīdō, he gave, and similarly we have kīdō, he made.

The word for 'and' is the Jaipuri ar or har.

It will be sufficient to give a portion of a version of the Parable as a specimen of Mēwārī.

MĒWĀRĪ OF AJMER.

MĒwārī is reported to be spoken in the south of the district of Ajmer on the Udaipur border, by 24,100 people. It does not differ in character from ordinary MĒwārī, though there are slight local variations which are not worth recording. The only point which need be noted is the preference for the genitive termination rō instead of kō, which is what might be expected from the fact that this part of Ajmer borders on the Mārwarī-speaking tract. As an example I give a short folksong in honour of the Rānā of Udaipur.

The cultured King of Rāṇās, Lord of the Hindūs, has taken up his abode in my heart, the handsome and cultured King of Rāṇās.

When he wishes to go to the Jag-mandir¹ palace, and sits glorious in the state barge accompanied by his sixteen nobles, he has taken up his abode in my heart, the handsome and cultured King of Rāṇās.

As an offering to the Lord of the Earth will I give away ten million golden coins. When he comes I will make a great festival, and every moment will I spend my life breath in his service. The handsome and cultured King of Rāṇās has taken up his abode in my heart.

MĒWĀRĪ OF KISHANGARH.

Mēwārī is also reported to be spoken by 15,000 in half of parganas Sarwar and Fatehpur of the State of Kishangarh, where it borders on the Mewar State. Like the language of the adjoining portion of Ajmer it in no way differs from Standard Mēwārī, and examples of it are not necessary. Owing to its being spoken in pargana Sarwar, it is locally known as Sarwārī.

MĒRWĀRĪ.

Along the north-east frontier of the State of Mewar lies the hilly British district of Merwara. In the southern portion of Merwara the language is known as Magrā-kī bōlī, and is classed as one of the many Bhīl dialects.²

On the west side of the northern half of the district as far north as Beawar, the language is claimed to be Mār-wārī. Over the rest of the northern half of the district we find a population estimated at 54,500 speaking Mēwārī, which, owing to its being spoken in Merwara district, is locally called Mērwārī. Although it has this separate name it in no way differs from ordinary Mēwārī, and specimens are unnecessary.

² See Part III of this volume, pp. 31 and ff.

MĒWĀRĪ (KHAIRĀRĪ).

The Khairār is the name of the hill country where the three States of Jaipur, Bundi, and Mewar meet. It is mainly inhabited by Mīnās, whose speech is a corrupt Mēwārī. The Khairār extends into all three States, and the number of speakers of the Khairārī dialect is estimated to be—

Mewar	145,000
Jaipur	59,264
Bundi	24,000
TOTAL	228,264

The main language of Jaipur is Jaipurī and of Bundi Hārautī, both of which belong to the eastern group of Rājasthānī dialects. That of Mewar is Mēwārī, which belongs to the western group of the same. Hence, Khairārī is a mixture of both groups. Thus we find both the chhū of the east, and the hū of the west employed to mean 'I am.' It is, in fact, a mixed form of speech.

Full particulars regarding Khairārī will be found in Mr. Macalister's Specimens of the Jaipur dialects. Several folktales in the dialect will be found on pp. 129 of that volume, and a grammatical sketch on p. 52 and ff. of the second part of the same.

For our present purposes it will suffice to give a short extract from the Parable of the Prodigal Son (provided by Mr. Macalister). It will be seen that both the eastern and the western forms of the verb substantive are found in this brief passage.

GÖDWĀRĪ.

Along the Arvāli Hills, where they separate Marwar and Sirohi from Merwara and Mewar, we find a Bhil dialect spoken called the Nyār-kī bōlī. This extends a short distance into Marwar territory and into Sirohi. We shall deal with the latter State subsequently. In Marwar, immediately to the west of the Nyār-kī bōlī in the eastern part of parganas Sojat, Bali, and Desuri, the Mārwarī is called Gōdwārī (from the Godwar tract in which it is spoken).

As explained above it is a mixed dialect, possessing many Gujarātī (Bhil) and some Mālvi forms.

In this dialect the letter ए ē is fully pronounced, and not like āi. I therefore transliterate it ē. The letter ch usually becomes s as in sarāwō for charāwō, to graze (cattle). S becomes h. Thus, sukh-dēv, a proper name, pronounced (and often written) hukh-dēv; hārō for sārō, all.

A short extract from the Parable of the Prodigal Son will suffice, as an example of this dialect. We may note the following peculiarities borrowed from Gujarātī: bē, two; ḍikrō (Gujarātī dikrō), a son; tī (Gujarātī thī), from; hatō, he was; karē-nē (Gujarātī karī-nē), having done. The use of thō (fem. thī) for 'was' is borrowed from Mālvi. I may add that the future is as in Standard Mārwarī. Thus, jāū, I will go; kēā, I will say. Note also that transitive verbs in the past tense can have the subject in the nominative, instead of in the agent case. Thus, lōrō ḍikrō kiyō, the younger son said. In Eastern Rājasthānī, the agent can be the same in form as the nominative.

SIRŌHĪ.

The Sirŏhī dialect is spoken in the State of Sirohi and in a small tract of Pargana Jalor of Marwar, which lies on the Sirohi frontier.

Mount Abu is within the Sirohi State, and the people who live upon it, known as the Ābū lōk, speak a form of Sirŏhī, which is called Rāṭhī by the Rajputs of the plains. It does not appear to differ materially from ordinary Sirŏhī. I shall, however, give a short account of it after dealing with the main specimens of that dialect. In the south-west of the State yet another form of Sirŏhī is spoken. It is called Sāēṭh-kī Bōlī, and will also be considered separately.

The estimated number of speakers of Sirŏhī (including Rāṭhī and Sāēṭh-kī Bōlī) is as follows :—

Sirohi—
Sirŏhī .	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	161,300
Rāṭhī .	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	2,000
Sāēṭh-kī Bōlī	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	6,000
									169,300
									179,300

In the Sirŏhī dialect, the mixture of Gujarātī is very strong. Nouns usually follow the Mārṡārī declension, and the verb substantive partly belongs to that dialect, but nearly the whole conjugation of the finite verb is pure Gujarātī. The only exception is the future tense which follows Mārṡārī. The neuter gender of Gujarātī is regularly employed, and as in that language ends in ũ, with a plural in āũ. I do not propose to discuss the Gujarātī mixture at any great length. It would be waste of paper to do so, for it leaps to the eye in both the specimens; but the following peculiarities of Sirŏhī, looked at from a Mārṡārī point of view, may be noticed.

The letter w is often dropped when initial, as in wan or an, him, and it is equally often added at the beginning of a word as in wuō for (h)uō, became.

Ch, chh, ś, and sh are regularly pronounced s, and are so written in the specimens. Thus, sarāwō for charāwō, to graze (cattle); sāndan-pur for chandan-pur; sēr for śahr (جہڑ), a city; dusat, for dushṭa, wicked; but uncompounded śha is pronounced kha or ka, as in minak for manush, a man.

Aspiration is continually neglected. Thus we have dērũ for dēharũ, a temple; gar and ghar, a house; gaṇā and ghanā, many; jāḍ, and jhāḍ, jungle.

Unlike Mārṡārī, the cerebral ञ ṇa is pronounced as if it were dental.

ञ śa and स sa are both pronounced as स sa. When स sa is initial it is pronounced as ह ha, and is so written in the specimens. Thus, hārũ, all; hūr, swine. When it is final, it is not pronounced at all. Thus, दस das, ten, is pronounced da. In such cases, I transliterate the word thus, da(s).

There is a regular neuter gender as explained above. The suffix of the genitive is rō (plural, rā) fem. rē, neuter rũ, (plural rāũ). A good example of the neuter is māhādēv-rũ dērũ dēkhiũ, a temple of Mahādēva was seen. The suffix of the ablative is tī.

Amongst the pronouns, note the Gujarātī pōtō, self.

The past tense of the verb substantive is tō, was, thus :—

	Singular.								Plural.
Masc.	tō	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	tā
Fem.	tī	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	tī
Neut.	tū	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	tā

The form tō is probably a contraction of atō for the Gujarātī hatō, but it may also be considered to be a disaspirated form of thō. Tō also occurs in the distant Bundēlī dialect of Western Hindi, and in Northern Gujarātī.

In verbs note the frequent use of parō and warō (here written arō) to form compound verbs as explained in the Mārwarī Grammar (vide p. 30).

As specimens of Sirōhī, I give a short extract from the Parable of the Prodigal Son and a folktale, both of which have been prepared for the Survey by Babu Sarat Chandra Ray Chowdhury, Private Secretary to the Maharao of Sirohi.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There lived a rich merchant in a city called Chandanpur. He had a very beautiful wife. One day a jeweller said to her, 'you do not wear a royal¹ pearl. You should surely get one and wear it.' So the jeweller went home, and when the merchant came in his wife said to him that he must give her a royal pearl to put on. He said he would go off on a journey to look for one, and would bring one back to her. So he went off on his journey and at length reached the shore of a distant sea. There he fasted and prayed,² and he was told in a dream that no royal pearls were to be got there. So he got up and went on. On the road he found a temple of Mahādēva, and sat down there. The Brāhmaṇ priest of the temple came up to him and asked him who he was. He replied that he was a merchant. 'Why have you come here?' 'I am come for a royal pearl.' Said the Brāhmaṇ, 'fast and pray to Mahādēva, and he will give you a royal pearl.' So the merchant fasted and prayed to Mahādēva, and in the night the deity came to the Brāhmaṇ in a dream and told him to go down into a certain dark well where he would find a royal pearl, which he should bring up and give to the merchant. The Brāhmaṇ did so, and brought up a royal pearl which he gave as instructed.

So the merchant took the pearl and started for home. On the way he met a Thag.³ As soon as he saw him he thought to himself that the Thag would take his royal pearl from him, so he slit up his thigh, and concealed the jewel in the wound. Afterwards he went as a prisoner to the Thag's house, and, after he had eaten some food, lay down at night time to sleep. The Thag's daughter came into his room

¹ A dur^amōṭī, which I translate by 'royal pearl,' is described as a name of the rarest kind of pearl.

³ A Thag combines robbery with murder.

‘Who are you?’ said the merchant. ‘I am come to rob and murder you,’ said she. ‘All right,’ said the merchant, ‘rob away. But first hear one word which I have to say to you.’ ‘What is that?’ replied she. ‘Tell me,’ said he, ‘if the other people of the house will take their fair share of the guilt of the sin you are going to commit.’ So she went downstairs and asked the people of the house if they would share the guilt. ‘We won’t be sharers in the guilt,’ said they. Then the Thag’s daughter came up again to the merchant, and said, ‘merchant, I’m not going to rob and murder you. Leave the place, but take me with you.’ So the merchant and the Thag’s daughter that very night, mounted a camel and went off to his house, where he put the royal pearl on his wife, and they lived happy ever after.

ĀBU LŌK-KĪ BŌLĪ OR RĀṬHĪ.

The inhabitants of the villages on Mount Abu¹ consist mainly of a mixed race peculiar to the locality, who style themselves Lōk, i.e., the 'people' of Abu. Nothing definite is known about their origin. They style themselves Rājputs, and according to local tradition are the descendants of Rājputs, who settled on the mountain in the 13th century, after the building of the celebrated temple of Vṛishabha-dēva, and took to themselves wives of the daughters of the aborigines. The Rājputs of the plains call them Rāṭhī, i.e., half-castes, a title which they resent.

Their dialect closely resembles that of the rest of Sirōhī. A good example of its mixed character will be found in the specimen, in which both the Mārwarī (h)ō, and the Sirōhī-Gujarātī tō are used to mean 'was.'

As a specimen I give a short extract from an account of their customs. It may be added in explanation of it that, till lately, a young man often took his wife by stratagem. He would go out with a sārī concealed about his person, and, watching his opportunity, would throw it over her, when she became his wife, whether willing or not. The practice, of course, often led to family feuds, and retaliation frequently assumed the form of a raid on the offending lover's house and the carrying off of his cattle, household goods, etc. These feuds were generally settled by the Rāj officials through a pañchāyat of the Lōk, without bloodshed; a compromise usually being effected in the shape of a fine in grain and ghee to the Rāj, and a feast to the brethren, ending with amalpānī, opium water, to cement the friendship.

In the specimen we may note how the vowel scale is uncertain. We have ḍand for daṇḍ, punishment, and ganō for gunō, crime. The word warō used to form compound verbs in the middle voice becomes ōrō. The genitive ē-rū (neuter), of this, is used to mean 'of this kind.' Note the word jōjē, corresponding to the Gujarātī jōiyē, it is necessary. There are several Bhil words in the short specimen. Such are khōl^arū, a hut; ḍālū, a branch; puṭhē, behind.

There are several cases of disaspiration. Such are jag^arō, a quarrel, and gar, a house. Sōrī, as usual, is for chōrī, theft. Hawā-hō is for sawā-sō. Har^akō is for sarīkhō, like.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A brother secretly kept a woman in his house. It was in the house of his brother's wife that he kept her. The king's officials inflicted punishment on him for this. The personal quarrel was then settled by his paying in addition a hundred and twenty-five rupees (to the persons injured). In former times he had to weigh out thirty-five seers of opium as a fine (to them). As for the woman the quarrel remained against her (i.e., she was not re-admitted to caste) for seven years. His huts would be pulled down, and he was not allowed into caste; the branches and door leaves (of the hut) were taken away by the persons who had the quarrel with him, and not so much as a stone worth a pice did they leave behind. His guilt was established by his hut being pulled down. There was no one who would help or assist him.

Formerly the custom was that there was no punishment in the king's court, but now, if any crime is heard of, the guilty person is twice punished, and the quarrel is at once ended or extinguished for good and all.

SĀĒṬH-KĪ BŌLĪ.

Sāēṭh or Sāṭh is a tract in the extreme south-west of the Sirohi State on the Palanpur frontier. Here the Southern Mārwarī of Sirohi is so mixed with Gujarātī, that it might be classed under either language. The mixture is purely mechanical, forms of each language being used indifferently. Note the way in which, as in Northern Gujarat, ch is pronounced as s. Thus we have both chaw'rī and saw'rī, a marriage pavilion; pachē and pasē, afterwards. This form of speech is said to be spoken by 6,000 people. As a specimen of it I give an interesting folktale received from Sirohi.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time a certain king ruled in the City of Ujjain. One night he went into the bazaar, and met the God of Fate.¹ The king asked him who he was, and he answered, ‘I am Fate. I am on my way to write the lines of fortune on the brow of a Brāhmaṇ.’ The king asked him what he was going to write, and Fate said he would tell him on his way back. Then Fate went on and wrote the following lines on the Brāhmaṇ’s forehead,—‘Nine months hence let a son be born to this Brāhmaṇ, and as soon as the father hears of the birth of a son let the father die. Let the son go forth to be married, and let a tiger kill him in the marriage-pavilion.' Then Fate told the king what he had written and went home.

Then the king made the Brāhmaṇ's wife his god-sister. In process of time a son was born and the father died as it was written. By and bye, the son grew up and the king got him betrothed. Then the usual preparations for the marriage were carried out, and the son went forth to his future father-in-law's house. The king made elaborate arrangements to prevent his being killed in the marriage pavilion, and after the wedding ceremonies were concluded he shut the bride and bridegroom up in a strong iron chest like a grain bin, so that the tiger might not get at him to slay him. Then the bride began to ask the son, 'why have we two been shut up in this iron grain-bin?' The son replied that it was written in his line of fate that a tiger should kill him in the marriage pavilion, that therefore the king had made him his god-brother, and had shut them both up in the iron bin. The bride asked what a tiger was like, so the youth, seated as he was in the bin, drew a picture of a tiger. As soon as he had finished, the picture came to life and slew him. Some time afterwards the king had the bin opened, and there he found the Brāhmaṇ's son lying dead, and a great tiger leaped out of the bin and disappeared.

So the king understood that the saying was quite true that whatever was written in the lines of fate was sure to happen.

DĒORĀWĀṬĪ.

Immediately to the east of the Sirōhī dialect, we find in the Marwar State a form of speech, known as Dēorāwāṭī, and reported to be spoken by 86,000 people. This dialect is even more mixed with Gujarātī than Sirōhī. We even find the Gujarātī interrogative pronoun sū, what? appearing under the form of hū. The Gujarātī chhū, and the Mārwarī hū, both meaning 'I am,' appear with equal frequency. On the other hand, the genitive suffix seems to be always the Mārwarī rō, and never the Gujarātī nō.

It is quite unnecessary to give specimens of this mixed form of speech.

MĀRWĀRĪ-GUJARĀTĪ.

To the south of Marwar lies the Agency of Palanpur, politically attached to the Bombay Presidency, of which the main language is Gujarātī. Along the common frontier of the two States, a mixed language is spoken, which in Marwar is called Gujarātī, and in Palanpur Mārwarī. This double nomenclature well illustrates its composite nature. It naturally varies much from place to place, and in the mouths of different people.

A large number of Musalmans, whose native language is Hindōstānī, are found in Palanpur and the neighbourhood, and so we find plentiful traces of Hindōstānī in this border dialect.

The specimen which I give comes from Palanpur. It is a short folk tale. The reader will note how Hindōstānī and Mārwarī are mixed up, and also the free infusion of Gujarātī vocabulary. The only genuine dialectic forms seem to be the long vowels in the pronominal oblique forms in, jīn, etc. This does not seem to be an error of the scribe, but to be a deliberate attempt to represent the actual pronunciation.

The estimated number of speakers of this Mārwarī-Gujarātī is:—

Marwar	30,270
Palanpur	35,000

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A certain merchant had four servants, and on the day of the Diwālī festival, they came to him for the customary presents. The merchant set a table in front of them, and on it put a copy of the Bhagavad Gītā¹ and round it four piles of five rupees each. Then he asked one of his servants which he would have,—the Gītā or five rupees. ‘Sir,’ replied he, ‘I don’t know how to read. Hence, for my part, it’s five rupees that I must take.’ Then the merchant asked the second what his choice was,—the Gītā or five rupees. ‘Sir,’ said he, ‘it is true that I can read; but, for my part, rupees are what I want. Therefore I am taking them.’ So also the third servant elected to take the rupees. The fourth was a lad of fourteen years, and the merchant asked him, saying, ‘I suppose you too are going to choose the rupees.’ But the boy replied, ‘Sir, for my part, I want the Gītā, and I’ll read it to my old mother.’ So he lifted up the volume, and lo and behold, there fell out of it a golden coin. When the others saw this, all they could do was to hang their heads in shame.

WESTERN MĀRWĀRĪ.

The country to the north and west of Jodhpur in Marwar is one vast sandy plain, called the Thal or sandy waste, which, commencing in Marwar, stretches into Bikaner on the north and into Jaisalmer, Sind and Mallani on the west and south. The dialect of the Thal of Bikaner will be dealt with later on. The dialect of the rest of the Thal may be styled 'Western Mārwarī.'

Immediately to the west of Mārwarī, the language is Sindhī, and hence Western Mārwarī is Mārwarī more or less mixed with that language. Everywhere it is clearly Mārwarī in the main, the Sindhī element, even when it is most prominent, playing quite a subordinate part. We may consider Western Mārwarī under two heads:—Thalī proper and the mixed dialects.

Thalī proper is spoken in North-West Marwar and in East Jaisalmer. In West Jaisalmer the language is the Tharēlī dialect of Sindhī, and in the south centre of that State there are a few speakers of Dhat'kī, one of the mixed dialects. The dividing line between Tharēlī Sindhī and Thalī runs about ten miles to the west of the town of Jaisalmer.

To the north of Jaisalmer lies the State of Bahawalpur, in which Lahndā is the main language.

The following is the estimated number of speakers of Western Mārwarī:—

Thalī proper:—

Marwar	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	380,900
Jaisalmer	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	100,000
									480,900
Mixed dialects	.	.	.	.	.	.	.		204,749
								TOTAL	685,649

The mixed dialects will be dealt with subsequently. The principal is the Dhat'kī of Thar and Parkar and Jaisalmer.

Thalī proper is in the main good Mārwarī, it has a slight admixture of Sindhī, and also of the Gujarātī spoken further south. I give two specimens of it, both from Jaisalmer. One is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the other is a popular song. The Thalī of Marwar in no way differs.

The following are the main peculiarities illustrated by the specimens.

Amongst the signs of the influence of Sindhī we may note that a final short a is often pronounced in a monosyllabic word with a heavy vowel. Thus tīna, not tīn, three; satta, seven; aṭṭha, eight; gāya, cow; but kan, not kana, an ear, and nak, not naka, a nose, because the vowel is not a heavy one. So also, as in Sindhī, we often find short vowels where other Indian languages have long ones. Thus nak, not nāk, a nose; hath, not hāth, a hand; ākh, not ākh, an eye. The pleonastic termination ḍō or rō occurs both in Eastern and in Western Rājasthānī, but it is especially common in Thalī and Sindhī. Thus chhōṭō-rō, the younger. The word for 'one' is hēkē, compare Sindhī hik or hikṛō. The words mā-jō, my, tū-jō, thy, have the Sindhī suffix jō of the genitive.

On the other hand, the influence of Gujarātī is seen in words like bē, two: dikrō, a son, and in the future formed with ś as in jāś (pronounced jāśh), I will go.

In the declension of nouns, we may note that nouns, etc., of the form ghōrō, with a final ō, form the oblique singular in ē, not ā. Their nominative plural ends in ā and the oblique plural in ā̃ as usual. Thus, from hukkō, a hukka, we have a genitive hukkē-rō; bhalō māṇas, a good man; bhalē māṇas-rō, of a good man; bhalā māṇas, good men; bhalā māṇasā-rō, of good men; thā-rē bāp-rē ghar-mē, in your father's 'house; mā-jē kākē-rē dīk-rē-rō biyā, the marriage of the son of my uncle.

The postposition of the accusative dative is nā̃. In other respects the declension of nouns does not differ from that in Standard Mārwarī.

Pronouns.—The declension of the personal pronouns is peculiar. The words for 'my' and 'thy' (only in the singular) take the Sindhī termination jō, of the genitive, instead of the Mārwarī rō. Thus mā-jō, my; tā-jō, thy; but mā-rō, our; thā-rō, your. Another form of a possessive genitive occurs in mayālō, mine; tayālō, or teālō, thine. 'I' is hū; obl. sg. mā̃; ag. sg. mē̃; nom. pl. mē̃; obl. and ag. pl. mā̃. 'Thou' is tū or tū̃, obl. sg. tā̃; ag. sg. tē̃; nom. pl. thē̃; obl. and ag. pl. thā̃.

The demonstrative pronouns are ē, this, ō, that, as follows :—

Singular.		Plural.
Nom.	Ag. and Obl.	Nom.	Ag. and Obl.
ē , this	iyē.	ē	iyā.
ō , that, he	uwē.	ō	uwā.

Jikō, he, who, etc., as usual; kūṇ, who? kē-rō, of whom? kī, what? kī̃, anything; kyā̃, why?

CONJUGATION:

Auxiliary Verbs and Verbs Substantive.—The present tense of the verb substantive is āi, am, art, is, are, which does not change for number or person. Sometimes it appears in the form ē or i, and i is the regular form used as an auxiliary.

The past is hātō, fem. hātī, plural (masc.) hātā, (fem.) hātī. We also have tō instead of hātō.

Finite Verb.—The present definite is formed by adding the auxiliary i to the simple present. Thus—

Singular.	Plural.
1. mārā-i	mārā-i.
2. mārē-i	mārō-i.
3. mārē-i	mārē-i.

The imperfect is formed with hātō or tō. Thus mār^otō-hātō or mār^otō-tō,

The Future is formed on the Gujarātī system. Thus—

Singular.	Plural.
1. mārīs	mār^ośā̃
2. mārīs	mār^ośo
3. mār^ośē	mār^ośē

It will be observed that the second person singular is the same as the first person singular, thus agreeing with some of the dialects of north Gujarat. In south Gujarat it is the third person singular which is the same as the second person.

In other respects the regular conjugation does not differ from that of Standard Mārwarī.

There are, as usual, many contracted forms, such as kayō, said ; rayō, remained ; rē-ī, is remaining ; payō, fallen ; mō, dead.

The termination ar of the conjunctive participle is often written as a separate word. Thus uth-ar (उठ-अर) instead of उठर uthar, having arisen.

The Rājasthānī negative kō-nī or kōy-nī is common. Kōy dēw'tō kōy-nī, no one used to give ; thā kō-diyō-nī, thou gavest not.

I give two specimens of Thālī, both from Jaisalmer. One is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the other is a folk song.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Wife addresses husband.—O my intimate friend! A merchant has arrived with packages of Kāthiāwār tobacco laden on bullocks.

O my intimate friend! He has put down the packages under a fig tree which seems adorned (by the tobacco) as if it were studded with numerous pearls.

It will be purchased by Sardārs and a little by the Brahmaṇs and Baniās of my intimate friend.

Wife to the tobacco merchant.—O Baniā! tell me the circumstance of the tobacco and at what rate you will sell it.

Wife to her husband.—O my intimate friend, the tobacco is an excellent one.

Tobacco merchant replies.—O my beautiful damsel. I have sold half a chittack of tobacco for a rupee and one quarter of a seer for a gold mōhar.

Wife addresses merchant.—O my friend, have the scales and the beam made of gold and silver and weigh the tobacco properly.

After a few days the husband having come home late at night the wife says.—O my intimate friend, my darling! Why have you come so late as when half the night has passed?

Husband answers.—O fair coloured, true, and beautiful damsel! I had gone for a walk with my friends and there we smoked a hukka worth a thousand rupees.

Wife with an anger.—A fetid smell of a hukka comes from your breath. Turn your face to the other side and sleep. I would throw away the hukka on the open ground and its bowl on the public cross-road.

Husband's answer.—I am displeased with you, O fair coloured and beautiful damsel, I will now get the Padminī from Pugal and marry her.¹

¹ Pugal or Pungal is a famous fortress of West Rajputana. Padminī is the name of the most excellent kind of women.

Wife says.—Never mind, O my lover, you may marry five or twenty-five such women. I am a darling daughter of my father.

The husband then goes to marry and returns with his new wife. The former wife says.—Numerous horses are in front, and in the rear is heard the sound of the carriage of my rival wife and enemy.

I may catch my husband by the reins of the horse ridden by him or by the dagger fastened by him at his loins.

I will strew mung grain on the courtyard so that my rival may slip and break her leg.

I will get a millstone set up in the courtyard and have it worked, so that I may not hear the voice of my rival.

I will get a wall built across that I may not see my rival walking about.

The wife gets courage again and says.—I have played with venomous snakes and I am not afraid of a scorpion sting.

Then again becomes softened and entreats her husband.—Let me get a carpet spread and let me invite your companions to sit on it with you: having lit the burning charcoal, let me myself fill the bowl of your hukka with cloves and cardamoms.

Let me get you a hukka made of gold and silver, and let me have its bowl studded with pearls.

MIXED MĀRWĀRĪ AND SINDHĪ.

The word Dhāt means 'desert,' and it is applied specifically to the desert tract of the Sind district of Thar and Parkar as well as to the adjoining portion of the State of Jaisalmer. Native authorities say that it includes the following towns:—

In Thar and Parkar—

Umarkot.

Chhor.

Gadhra.

Mitti.

Rangdar.

Chachra.

Jaisinghdar.

Chelar.

Parno.

Naursar.

Gundra.

In Jaisalmer—

Mayajlar.

Khuri of Samkhabha Pargana.

The district of Thar and Parkar consists of three tracts, (1) the Pat or plain of the Eastern Nara, in the North-West and Centre-West of the district; (2) the Parkar tract to the South-East; and (3) the Thār or desert (corresponding to the Dhāt). The language of the Pat is Sindhī. That of the Parkar tract is Sindhī, and, in the extreme South, Gujarātī.

To the East of the district of Thar and Parkar lies the Marwar State of Mallani. The main language of Mallani is Mārwārī, but along the common frontier there is a narrow tract in which the language is said to be 'Sindhī'; no specimens have been received from this tract, but we may safely conclude that it is a mixture of Mārwārī and Sindhī in which Sindhī predominates. To the North-East of this tract there is an acknowledged mixture of the two languages. North of Mallani, up to the frontier of Jaisalmer, the language is described by the Marwar officials as a mixture of Thālī and Sindhī. This tract is really a continuation of the Dhāt, and the language in no way differs from Dhāt'ki.

Dhāt'ki, or the language spoken in the Dhāt, is simply Thālī with a stronger infusion of Sindhī forms than elsewhere. It is a mixed dialect and necessarily varies from place to place. In Thar and Parkar, the influence of Sindhī is naturally stronger than in Jaisalmer.

To sum up, we have in South-West Marwar-Mallani, and in the Dhāt of Jaisalmer a number of forms of speech all of which are mixtures of Standard Mārwārī or of Thālī with Sindhī in varying proportions. It is unnecessary to consider them separately. All that we need do is to record the estimated number of speakers of each, which are as follows:—

Marwar-Mallani so-called 'Sindhī'	46,960
Mārwārī and Sindhī mixed	15,000
Thālī and Sindhī mixed	70,000
		131,960
Jaisalmer Dhāt'ki		150
Thar and Parkar Dhāt'ki ¹		72,639
TOTAL mixed dialects of Mārwārī and Sindhī		204,749

¹ Standard Mārwārī is also spoken in Thar and Parkar, but by immigrants.

I do not propose to give specimens of all these varieties. It will suffice to print two popular songs in Dhāt'kī, one from Thar and Parkar, and the other from Jaisalmer. Dhāt'kī is also known by other names, such as Tharēchī, or Tharēli, the language of the Thar. The employment of these latter names leads to confusion with the true Tharēli dialect of Sindhī, and I therefore avoid their use.

The specimen from Thar and Parkar, while in the main Mār-wārī, or rather Thalī, shows many Sindhī peculiarities. Such are the employment of the Sindhī letters ब (ڀ) and ग (ڳ) which I transliterate bba and gga respectively. The letter ॠ la, which is strange to Sindhī, but is common in Mār-wārī, does not occur. Note also the Sindhī termination u in sharamu, shame, bichāru, a pretext. It is worthy of remark that nāhar (we should read nahār according to the metre) means (like the Sindhī nāharu) 'a wolf,' while in Rajputana it means 'a tiger.' As in the Bhil dialects, and also as in the Pisāca dialects of the North-Western Frontier and in Sindhī, there is a tendency to confuse cerebral for dental letters (e.g. dijē for dijē, give, khēt for khēt, a field) and to harden soft ones, as in kawalī for gāw, a cow.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

DIALOGUE BETWEEN A WOMAN AND A KING.

Woman.—Why have you come today at this late hour; what business have you with me? I am an honest woman and my husband, who is your clerk, is not in the house.

King.—I have walked over the whole of Ujjain city and at last today have come to your quarter. That is why I have come so late to converse with you.

Woman.—The moon has gone to her abode. You, O king, go to your own abode. What converse can you have with a humble woman like me? You are the lion, I the cow.

King.—The lion devours the cow, the wolf the goat. You may put forward a thousand pretexts, but your life will only be imperilled.

Woman.—O fearless lion, roaring alone so bravely, are you not ashamed to come searching the houses of mice?

King.—O Sahēchī, put on your best apparel for so the king desires. You may make a thousand pretexts, but you will only imperil your life.

Woman.—Round the field is put a hedge. Does that hedge swallow up the field (by overgrowing it)? If the king injures his subjects to whom can they go for redress?

King.—Do not complain, Sahēchī; what will you gain by complaint? Have you ever heard that a goat, once in the lion's mouth, escaped?

Woman.—I hold you on your honour, do not transgress your oath. I am the cow, you are the Brāhmaṇ. I am the daughter, you my father.

The following song is sung in the Dhāt at marriage festivities. It is in praise of a Sōḍhā Rajput, of Khūrī, named Hāthī Singh, the son of Daulat Singh. It tells how he visited Haidarabad in Sind, where he was honoured by the Mīrs. On his return to Khūrī he learns from Bhagwān Singh, the son of Aṇḍā Singh of Chhor (in Thar and Parkar) how Bhagwān's uncle Hēm-Rāj had been arrested by Jōdhā the Hākīm (i.e. Maharajah) of Jodhpur in Marwar. Hāthī Singh was sufficiently powerful to meet Jōdhā on equal terms and to settle the dispute without a conflict.

Hāthī Singh lived in the time of Mūl Rāj, the Chief of Jaisalmer, who died in the year 1820.

This specimen of Dhāt'kī is not so strongly influenced by Sindhī as that which comes from Thar and Parkar. The Sindhī letters ब (ब) and ग (ग) do not occur, and there is one instance of a cerebral ल la. The verb 'to give' is, however, spelt with a cerebral ḍ, as in ḍinhō, given. The mixed nature of the dialect is well shown by the use of the Āikānērī chhē to form the present tense of verbs. The oblique form rā of the genitive is employed to form an accusative in mōjā-rā pāwē, may they obtain pleasures.

8. Hāthī Singh mounted his horse and returned to his own country, and all Dhāt rung with festivities.

9. Then Bhagwān, the son of, Aṇḍā, came to him from Chhor, and gave him a letter from his uncle Hēm Rāj.

10. As soon as he read it he became inflamed with rage, and cried 'I know no one who would act so.'

11. So mighty are the Sōdhās that when any of them returns displeased (there is great trouble). So Hāthī Singh sent a letter to Jōdhā, the Hākim of Jodhpur.

12. Hāthī Singh and the Hākim met, and the matter was decided (favourably to Hēm Rāj).

13. Well done ! Daulat Singh's son is a good son. Let us receive him with a dish filled with pearls.

14. Bards and Panegyrists sing his virtues, may they obtain camels, horses, and every pleasure as their reward.

NORTHERN MĀRWĀRĪ.

BĪKĀNĒRĪ-SHĒKHĀWĀTĪ.

To the north of the Marwar State lie the State of Bikaner and the Shēkhāwāṭī tract of the State of Jaipur.

Bikaner is bounded on the west by the State of Bahawalpur, the main language of which is Lahndā, and on the north by the Cis-Sutlej Panjab districts of Firozpur and Hissar, which are, in the main, Pañjābī speaking. The language, however, of the portion of Hissar which lies along the north-east of Bikaner is Bāgrī.

In the north-west of Bikaner in the triangle enclosed by the Bahawalpur and Firozpur frontiers, there is a mixed dialect spoken. It is called Bhaṭṭiānī, and is a compound of Lahndā, Pañjābī, and Bīkānērī. It is dealt with under the head of Pañjābī.¹ In the north-east of Bikaner, in the country near Hissar, the language is Bāgrī. Over the rest of the State the language is Bīkānērī. Bīkānērī is also spoken in Bahawalpur along the common frontier of the two States.

Immediately to the east of the Bikaner State, lies the Shēkhāwāṭī tract of Jaipur. The language of the adjoining portion of Jaipur is Jaipurī, which has been discussed on pp. 31 and ff. The language of Shēkhāwāṭī bears the same name as the tract in which it is spoken. It will be observed that it is conterminous with the Bīkānērī spoken to its west.

In the north-east of Bikaner, and in the neighbouring tract of the Panjab, Bāgrī is spoken. This is Bīkānērī merging into Pañjābī and Bāngarū, but as it possesses some peculiarities of its own, it will be dealt with separately.

Bīkānērī and Shēkhāwāṭī are the same language. They are simply Mārwarī with an infusion of Jaipurī, which naturally increases as we go eastwards. We may call the joint Bīkānērī-Shēkhāwāṭī dialect, together with Bāgrī, 'Northern Mārwarī.' The approximate number of speakers of this form of Mārwarī is :—

Bīkānērī—
Bikaner	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	533,000
Bahawalpur	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	10,770
									543,770
Shēkhāwāṭī	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	488,017
Bāgrī	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	327,359
TOTAL									1,359,146

A version of the New Testament in Bīkānērī was published by the Serampore Missionaries in 1820. The language is the same as that now about to be described.

The following points may be noted in connexion with this Bīkānērī-Shēkhāwāṭī dialect.

In the declension of nouns the oblique form of strong tadblava nouns in ō, like ghōṛō, a horse, often ends in ai, (especially in the ablative) as in bīkai-sū, from Bīkā (nom. Bīkō) ; pōtai-hū, from a grandson. In Bīkānērī, the postposition of the genitive is the Mārwarī rō, while in Shēkhāwāṭī it is the Jaipurī kō. This is one of the few points of difference between the two dialects. It will be remembered that kō is also met in Eastern Mārwarī.

In the pronoun of the first person, the form of the genitive varies, we have mhārō, mhār^olō, mērō, and mēr^olō, 'my,' so we have thārō, thār^olō, tērō and tēr^olō, 'thy.' With mhār^olō, thār^olō, etc., compare the Western Mārwarī mayālō, tayālō. In Shēkhāwāṭī we often find Jaipurī forms of the pronoun of the third person, such as bō, 'he; bē, by him. In Bikanēri, the Mārwarī forms are used. Kē is 'what?'

Over the whole tract, both the Mārwarī and the Jaipurī forms of the verb substantive are in constant use. Both hū and chhū, I am, and hō and chhō, was.

In the finite verb, the future is usually formed with s, as in mār^osyū, I shall strike. In Shēkhāwāṭī we also now and then find the Jaipurī (Tōḥāwāṭī) form with gō (mār^ogō). Tōḥāwāṭī is the form of Jaipurī spoken immediately to the east of Shēkhāwāṭī. In other respects, the verb is conjugated as in Mārwarī.

I give examples of this Northern Mārwarī from both Bikaner and Shēkhāwāṭī.

The following account of the fortunes of Bikā and of the founding of Bikaner comes from the State of that name. The language is the same as that just explained. Both chhai and hai are used as verb substantives and the oblique forms of strong masculine tadbhava nouns in ō often end in ai. The only peculiarity which may be noted is the Gujarātī fashion of making the participle of a transitive verb in the past tense agree in gender with the object even when in the impersonal construction. Thus jātā-rī jātā-nai jītī (not jītō), tribes of Jāts were conquered.

As the original MS. is a good example of the writing of this part of India, I give it in facsimile. In the transliteration I have silently corrected the numerous instances in which the vowels are incorrectly written.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Prince Bikā set out from Jodhpur on the 10th of the bright half of Āsōj of the Sambat year 1522, and made his first halt at Mandor. Thence he went to Desnok where he presented himself to mother Karnī.¹ Thence he went on to Chandasar. From Chandasar he went to Kodamdesar, where he stayed three years, and built a small fort. Thence he went to the village of Janglu where he dwelt for ten years. At that time this country was under the rule of the Bhātīs, the over-lord of whom was Sēkhō Bhāṭī of Pugal. Bikā married Sēkhō's daughter Rang Kūwar.

When Bikā thought of building the fort in Kodamdesar the Bhātīs objected, and a war arose on this score, in which the Bhātīs were defeated, and Bikā was victorious. But the Bhātīs, ever and anon as they found opportunity, kept attacking him.

Subsequently Bikā went on to the Rātī valley, where now stands the city of Bikaner, and there he determined to build a fort. Its foundations were laid on the third of the dark half of Baiśākh Sambat 1545, and from that date Bikā made Bikaner his capital.

After this, as he saw opportunity, he conquered the Gōdārā Jāṭs of Saiksar Roniya, and also brought other Jāṭ tribes under subjection, and after taking possession of their villages, brought the inhabitants to Bikaner where he settled them. The Jāṭs admitted their defeat, and acknowledged Bikā as their ruler.

After this Bikā conquered several villages of the Khichī Rajputs, and brought them under his rule.

After this Bikā's younger brother Bidā was in the territory of the Mōhal Rajputs of Chhapar Dronpur. He conquered them and took possession of their villages. The over-lord of the Mōhals had been Ajīt Mall Mōhal, who had been slain by Bidā's father Jōdhā, and Jōdhā gave the territory to his son Bidā. For a long time the Mōhals continued to attack Bidā. The reason of this was that they were encouraged by the Emperor of Delhi. Sārang Khān was Sūbadār of Hissar on behalf of the Emperor, and he it was who gave them assistance.

¹ Karnī was a Chāran woman, whose supernatural power secured the country to Bikā and his descendants. She is much worshipped and her chief shrine is at Bikaner.

MĀRWĀRĪ (SHĒKHĀWĀTĪ).

From Shēkhāwātī I give two specimens. One is a portion of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the other is a folktale, curiously like our nursery story of the old woman and the bonny bunch of black berries.

Both have been provided by the Rev. G. Macalister, to whom I am indebted for so many excellent specimens from the Jaipur State.

For further information regarding Shēkhāwātī, the reader is referred to that gentleman's Specimens of the Dialects spoken in the State of Jeypore. Specimens of the dialect will be found on pp. 1 and ff. of Part I, and a grammar on pp. 1 and ff. of Part II of that work.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There were a hen-sparrow and a crow who were sworn friends. It chanced that the sparrow found a pearl and the crow a ruby. The crow asked the sparrow to show him the pearl, and then flew away with it to the top of a neem tree.

Said the sparrow, 'O neem tree, neem tree, shake the crow off his perch and make him fly away.'

Said the neem tree, 'why should I make him fly away? What has he taken of mine?'

So the sparrow went to a carpenter. 'O carpenter, carpenter, cut down the neem tree.' 'Why should I cut it down? What has it taken of mine?'

So she went to the king. 'O king, king, fine the carpenter.' 'Why should I fine him? What has he taken of mine?'

So she went to the queens. 'O queens, queens, be angry with the king.' 'Why should we be angry with him? What has he taken of ours?'

So she went to the mice. 'O mice, mice, gnaw the clothes of the queens.' 'Why should we gnaw? What have they taken of ours?'

So she went to the cats. 'O cats, cats, kill the mice.' 'Why should we kill them? What have they taken of ours?'

So she went to the dogs. 'O dogs, dogs, kill the cats.' 'Why should we kill the cats? What have they taken of ours?'

So she went to the sticks. 'O sticks, sticks, beat the dogs.' 'Why should we beat? What have they taken of ours?'

So she went to the fire. 'Fire, fire, burn the sticks.' 'Why should we burn them? What have they taken of ours?'

So she went to the pond. 'Pond, pond, quench the fire.' 'Why should I quench it? What has it taken of mine?'

So she went to the elephants. 'Elephants, elephants, suck the pond dry.' 'Why should we suck it dry? What has it taken of ours?'

So she went to the ants. 'Ants, ants, crawl up the elephants' trunks.' 'Why should we crawl up the trunks? What have they taken of ours?' 'If you don't crawl up the elephants' trunks, I will kill you.'

Then said the ant, 'why kill me, I will crawl up the elephants' trunks.'

Then said the elephants, 'why crawl up our trunks? We will suck the pond dry.'

Then said the pond, 'why suck me dry? I will quench the fire.'

Then said the fire, 'why quench me? I will burn the sticks.'

Then said the sticks, 'why burn us? We will beat the dogs.'

Then said the dogs, 'why beat us? We will kill the cats.'

Then said the cats, 'why kill us? We will kill the mice.'

Then said the mice, 'why kill us? We will gnaw the queens' clothes.'

Then said the queens, 'why gnaw our clothes? We will be angry with the king.'

Then said the king, 'why be angry with me? I will fine the carpenter.'

Then said the carpenter, 'why fine me? I will cut down the neem tree.'

Then said the neem tree, 'why cut me down? I will make the crow fly away.'

Then said the crow, 'why make me fly away? I will give the sparrow back her pearl.'

BĀGRĪ.

The word Bāgrī, or more correctly Bāgrī, literally means the language of the Bāgar country. A range of rocky hills intersects nearly the whole of Shekhawati in the Jaipur State, in a north-eastern direction, and close upon its eastern frontier. The country on the east side of these hills is called Dhundhār (a name which was formerly applied to a large part of Rajputana), while that to the west is called Bāgar, which includes nearly the whole of Shekhawati, and is generally applied to the sandy country where water is only procurable at a great depth.¹ This Bāgar tract extends to the north-west, far beyond Shekhawati, and it is this tract, outside Shekhawati, which is the home of Bāgrī. The language of Shekhawati, etc., though closely allied to Bāgrī, is not that dialect, and has been already dealt with on pp. 130 and 140 and ff.

Meaning of name.

The word Bāgar² also appears under the form Bāngar, and this, in its turn, gives its name to the dialect of Western Hindī called Bāngarū which is mainly spoken in East Hissar, Delhi District, and Karnal. Bāngarū is a form of speech quite different from Bāgrī. The latter is a dialect of Rājasthānī.

Bāgrī has to its north Pañjābī, to its east Bāngarū, to its south-east Ahīrwātī, and to its south and west the Bīkānērī-Shēkhāwātī form of Mārwarī. It represents Mārwarī merging into Pañjābī and Bāngarū, and though it is certainly affected by these two forms of speech, its backbone is essentially Mārwarī.

The home of Standard Bāgrī is in the north-east corner of the Bikaner State.

Where spoken:

Immediately to its east and north lies the Panjab district of Hissar. The part of Hissar which lies to the north is mainly the Sirsa Tahsil, in the south of which Bāgrī is also spoken. In the north of Sirsa we have Pañjābī. Bāgrī is also spoken in that part of the rest of the Hissar district which lies to the east of Bikaner. It extends north even into a small tract of the Patiala State.³ Here it has to its north Pañjābī, and to its east Bāngarū. The western boundary of Bāngarū may be defined as a line passing through Fatahabad, Hissar, and Kairu. There is, however, no hard-and-fast division between the two forms of speech. West of the line just described there is a good deal of debateable ground, a considerable portion of the tract being held by Bāgrī immigrants, and the effect of their immigration has been to introduce a decidedly Bāngarū element into their Bāgrī rather than the reverse. True Bāgrī, as distinguished from Bāngarū, is found close to the Bikaner frontier.

South of Hissar lie the State of Loharu and the Dadri Nizāmat of the Jind State. In Loharu the language is Bāgrī, and so it is in Dadri, except at the eastern end, where it is Bāngarū.

² Many derivations have been proposed for this word, but the above is the most probable one. It has been connected with bagar, a kind of coarse grass, used for making mats, which grows in the tract, and with the Panjābī bakar or bakkar, a goat.

South, again, of Loharu and Dadri lies the Narnaul Nizāmat of Patiala. Here a mixed language is spoken, which I have classed as a form of Ahīrwātī.

Bāgrī is also reported to be spoken in the south-west of the Fazilka Tahsil of the district of Ferozpur. An examination of the specimens received shows that it is not a true Bāgrī, but is rather a mixture of Bīkānērī and Pañjābī. It has none of the peculiar characteristics of Bāgrī. Specimens of it will be found in the section devoted to Pañjābī (Vol. IX, Pt. I).

Shēkhāwātī, which is spoken immediately to the south of Bāgrī, is often said to be the same as that dialect, but that is not the fact. It is true that a great part of the Shēkhāwātī area consists of Bāgar country, and hence it is not incorrect to speak of Shēkhāwātī as Bāgrī, but the dialect which is known as Bāgrī is not Shēkhāwātī, although it is closely allied to it. Shēkhāwātī represents Bīkānērī Mārwarī merging into Jaipurī, while Bāgrī represents it merging into Pañjābī and Bāngarū.

The number of speakers of Bāgrī is estimated to be as follows:—

RAJPUTANA—
PANJAB—
Hissar	.	271,820
Anahadgarh of Patiala	.	13,000
Loharu	.	20,139
Dadri of Jind	.	19,400
	TOTAL	327,359

I know of no literary work written in Bāgrī. The only account of the dialect with which I am acquainted is in Mr. J. Wilson's Final Report on the Revision of Settlement of the Sirsā District in the Punjab, 1879-83. In Section 100 (pp. 120 and ff.) there is a general account of the dialect, and Appendix II gives a brief grammar, and some short verses in the dialect.

Some of the specimens of Bāgrī which I received were written in the Persian character, others in the Dēva-nāgarī, and others again in that form of the Dēva-nāgarī character which is used in Marwar, and which has separate signs for q̣ and ṛ (see p. 20).

The pronunciation¹ of Bāgrī mainly differs from that of the neighbouring Pañjābī and Bāngarū in being broader in its vowel sounds. The vowel ā sounds almost like the a in 'all.' Thus kākā, an uncle, is pronounced cauccaw, and the people themselves often spell this sound with ō, not ā. Similarly in pronouncing the other vowels a speaker of Bāgrī makes them as broad as he can, while a speaker of Pañjābī often cuts them short, at the same time often doubling the following consonant, e. g., Bāgrī tābar, a child, Pañjābī tabbar, a family; Bāgrī tibā, Pañjābī tibbā, a sandhill; Bāgrī kūṭ, Pañjābī kutṭ, a bruise. The Mārwarī pronunciation of ē or ai like the a in 'hat' also prevails, and so much is this the case that ṛ ē is quite commonly written a. Thus the suffix ṛ gē (sign of the conjunctive participle) is as often as not written ṛ ga.

¹ Much of this is taken from pages 121 and ff. of Mr. J. Wilson's Sirsā Settlement Report.

In the pronunciation of consonants k is often pronounced as g. This is most noticeable in the suffix of the genitive गे gō, which is often written को kā or even kā, but is always pronounced gō, the ō having a tendency to be pronounced like aw.

As in Standard Marwārī, a medial h is commonly dropped, as in kasū, for kah^{sū}, 'I will say'; kayō, for kahyō, said; chāyō, for chāhyō, he wished.

In Bikaner, the Bāgrī often prefers an initial b to w or v. Thus bō, not wō, he. Mr. Wilson observed the same peculiarity in Sirsa, but in other parts of the Bāgrī area which are more under the influence of Pañjābī, Bāngarū, or Ahīrwātī, the w or v sound is retained. This will be noted in the specimen from Hissar.

Bāgrī having Pañjābī to its north, and Bāngarū and Ahīrwātī to its east, varies considerably from place to place, as it comes under the influence of these languages. I give two specimens, one of which is in what I may call the Standard Bāgrī of Bikaner. The other comes from the Punjab district of Hissar, and shows the language as influenced by Bāngarū. I do not propose to give a complete grammar. Bāgrī closely resembles Mārwarī, and reference can be made to the grammar of that language, on pp. 19 and ff., for further particulars. As already stated, I take the Bāgrī of Bikaner as the standard.

The declension of nouns closely follows Mārwarī. Strong tadbhava nouns of the Declension. a base, have their nominative singular in ō, as in Mārwarī. Thus :—

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	ghōrō , a horse	ghōrā
Obl.	ghōrā	ghōrā̃
Voc.	ghōrā	ghōrō

The ō of the nominative is sometimes written ā, under the influence of Pañjābī or Bāngarū, but its sound is that of ō, or of the aw in 'caw' (see above).

The case of the agent of these nouns ends in ē in the singular, and ā̃ in the plural. Thus, ghōrē, ghōrā̃. The suffix nai or nē is not used for this case except under the influence of neighbouring languages. In the case of other nouns, the Agent Singular is the same as the nominative, while the plural ends in ā̃. Thus bāp mār̄yō, the father struck; bāpā̃ mār̄yō, the fathers struck. The oblique plural of all nouns ends in ā̃.

The Rājasthānī locative in ē or ā̃ is also common. Thus gharē or gharā̃, in a house.

For the case-postpositions, the Dative-Accusative suffixes are gē, nē, and (in Hissar) nai, nū̃. The last is borrowed from Pañjābī. गे gē is often written ग ga. This does not affect the pronunciation (see above). It is really, as usual, the locative of the genitive postposition gō.

The suffixes of the Instrumental-Ablative are sū̃ and tā.

The Locative has a variety of suffixes, of which the commonest are mā̃ and mē̃.

The Genitive suffix is peculiar to Bāgrī, and is typical of the dialect. It is gō, oblique gā, locative and agent masc. gē, fem. gī. As usual gē is used before a noun in the agent or locative case singular, and gā before other oblique cases. Thus rājā-gē man-mē̃, in the king's mind; rājā-gē āgē, before the king; rājā-gē bāp dēkhyō, the king's father saw; rājā-gā hāt-sū̃, from the king's hand; rājā-gā rupaiyā, the king's rupees. As the influence of Panjābī and Bāngarū is stronger, the use of gē increases, and it is often used instead of gā, and becomes the general form of the oblique genitive masculine, following the example of Pañjābī and Hindōstānī.

In writing, gō sometimes appears as gā, and gē as ga, but this does not affect the pronunciation. Similarly, k is sometimes written for g, thus kō, kā, kē, kī. This again does not affect the pronunciation, which is that of g. If k is heard in such cases, it is an instance of borrowing from Bāngarū.

Instead of gō, gā, gē, gī, the true Mārwarī forms rō, rā, rē, rī also often appear, and are subject to the same rules, mutatis mutandis. Rō is sometimes written rā, and rē is sometimes written ra.

Adjectives require few remarks. Strong tadbhava adjectives of a-bases, end in ō, and are treated exactly like the genitive terminations.

Pronouns.—The pronouns of the first and second persons are as follows :—

	I.	You.
Sing. Nom.	hū	tū
Agent	mañ	tañ
Genitive	mērō	tērō
Oblique	ma	ta
Plur. Nom. & Agent	mhē	thē
Genitive	mhārō , mhā-gō	thārō , thā-gō
Oblique	mhā , mhā , mhē	thā , thā , thē

Mañ and tañ are only used in the Agent case, not in the nominative. Thus hū karū, I do; mañ karyō, I did. In both pronouns the plural is frequently used in the sense of the singular.

The Demonstrative Pronouns are yō or ō, this, and bō, that. They have feminine forms in the nominative singular only, viz., yā or ā, this; bā, that. The Hissar forms differ slightly from the Standard Bāgrī ones. The latter are as follows :—

	This.	That.
Sing. Nom.	yō , ō ; fem. yā , ā	bō ; fem. bā
Agent	ī , a , iya	bī , ba , uwa
Oblique	ī , iya	bī , uwa
Plur. Nom.	ai	bai

The Hissar forms are :—

Sing. Nom.	yeh ; fem. yā , ā	woh ; fem. wā .
Agent	ī	vī , fem. wā
Obl.	ī	vī
Plur.	ai	wai
	ā , in	wā , vin , un

The Relative pronoun is jakō (gen. ji-gō), fem. jakā. It is often used in the sense of a demonstrative pronoun, as all over Rajputana.

The Interrogative Pronouns are kun (genitive ki-gō) who? and kē, what? In Hissar, we have kihyā and kāñ for 'what?' Kūhī is 'anything' and kōī (oblique forms the same) is 'anyone.'

CONJUGATION—Auxiliary Verb and Verb Substantive.

Present—I am.

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	hũ	hã
2.	hai	hō
3.	hai	hai

It will be seen that it follows Mārwarī. Note that the third person plural is not nasalized.

In Sirsa, and other parts affected by Bāngarū or Ahīrwātī, we have,—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	sũ	sã
2.	sai, sē	sō
3.	sai, sē	san

The past is—

	Sing.	Plur.
Masc.	hō	hā
Fem.	hī	hī

In Hissar and other parts affected by Bāngarū and Ahīrwātī, we have thō, thā, thī.

Finite Verb.—As usual in Rājasthānī the tense which in Hindōstānī is the present subjunctive is used in its original sense of a present indicative. Thus:—

Present.—I strike, etc.—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	mārũ	mārã
2.	mārē	mārō
3.	mārē	mārē

In Hissar, the third person plural is mārē.

The Definite Present is formed by conjugating the preceding tense (not the present participle) with the verb substantive. Thus:—

Definite Present.—I am striking, etc.—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	mārũ-hũ	mārã-hã
2.	mārē-hai	mārō-hō
3.	mārē-hai	mārē-hai

The Imperfect is formed by conjugating the past tense of the Auxiliary verb with a verbal noun in ē. It does not change for person. Thus:—

	Sing.	Plur.
Masc.	mārē-hō	mārē-hā
Fem.	mārē-hī	mārē-hī

In Hissar and the neighbourhood, the present participle is used, as in Hindōstānī. Thus, hũ mār-tō; thō.

The Future, as in Bikaner and elsewhere in Rajputana, has the letter s as its characteristic. It is conjugated as follows :—

Future.—I shall strike, etc.—

Sing.	Plur.
1. mār^asyũ	mār^asã
2. mār^asĩ	mār^asō
3. mār^asĩ	mār^asĩ

In Hissar the s becomes ś, pronounced like an English sh, and we have the following conjugation :—

Sing.	Plur.
1. mār^aśũ	mār^aśã
2. mār^aśĩ	mār^aśō
3. mār^aśĩ	mār^aśan

The following are the Verbal Nouns and Participles :—

Infinitive, mār^abō, mār^anō, māraṇ, to strike.

Present Participle, mār^atō, striking.

Past Participle, māryō (often written māriō), struck.

Conjunctive Participle, mār-gē, mārar, mār-kar, having struck.

Noun of Agency, māraṇ-ālō, mār^anē-ālō, a striker.

From these elements the remaining tenses can be formed as in Hindōstānī. Tenses formed from the past participle of a transitive verb require, as usual, the subject to be in the case of the agent.

Regarding the three forms of the conjunctive participle, mār-gē is the true Bāgrī form. Mārar is Mār-wārī and mār-kar is Bāngarū. We may note the form bulā-ar in the second specimen, meaning 'having summoned.'

As regards irregular verbs, they are as usual, except that the past participle of karaṇ, to do, is karyō.

The Mār-wārī compound verbs with parō and warō occur in Bāgrī. Thus parō-gayō, he went away. Cf. pp. 30 and ff.

The Mār-wārī termination rō is common with adjectives and participles. Thus mōṭō-rō, the elder son; bādhō-rō, fem. bādhō-rĩ, tied up; equivalent in meaning to the Hindōstānī bādhī-huĩ.

A common form of the negative is kō-nĩ, which is also frequently met elsewhere in Rajputana. Thus kō gayō nĩ, he did not go at all.

VOCABULARY.—In Vocabulary, we may note sō or sō-kũ (sab-kōĩ), all; kanē, near, from near, from; dhōrō, from; gail, with; aṭhē, iṭhē, here; baṭhē, there; kaṭhē, where? ēsō, such; hambē, yes. In the second specimen, the phrase ghaṭē na badhē, neither diminishes nor increases, deserves notice. The negative na, not, refers both to the preceding and to the following verb. In such a case it is known as dēhālī-dīpak, threshold-illuminating, as it gives light backwards as well as forwards, like a lamp set in a doorway.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There was once upon a time a king who got news of a merchant who was reputed to possess five or ten crores of rupees. So the king thought to himself that he must get this money out of the merchant, but in such a way that the latter could not complain of injustice being done to him.

So the king sent for the merchant, and told him he wanted four things, namely (a) a thing which is ever decreasing; (b) a thing which is ever increasing; (c) a thing which neither decreases nor increases; and (d) a thing which both decreases and increases. The merchant promised to bring these four things in six months, and signed a bond that, if he did not do so, all his property might be confiscated. He then went home and wrote to each of his agents abroad to procure these four things for him, no matter at what cost. The agents searched as best they could, but had to report that they could not get the things at any price, and that, in fact, no one knew of them. Then the merchant fell into great anxiety. 'What am I to do?' thought he. 'The king will confiscate my property, and I shall be a ruined man.'

His wife noticed his anxiety and asked the cause. The merchant at first refused to tell her. 'What is the use,' he said, 'of explaining this to a woman?' But she persisted and the merchant gave in and told her how the king had asked for these four things, how his agents had failed to find them, and how his property would be confiscated. She replied, 'why should your property be confiscated on this account? I brought these four things from my father's house when I was married, and have them safely tied up in my bundle.' The merchant asked to see them with his own eyes, but she said, 'go now to court and say, "why did Your Majesty ask me for these things? These are the kind of things that are got from a woman."'

(The merchant did so), and the king replied, 'you agreed to provide the things with your eyes open, but now you say that they are only to be found with a woman. So send for your wife.' Then the king sent a messenger for the merchant's wife. When the messenger came to her, she said, 'let His Majesty send some trusty woman from among his maid servants. I will give her the things. She will give them to the Queen, and the Queen will give them to the king.' The king refused to accept this reply, and sent the messenger again with the same result. Four times did the messenger go and return, and at last the merchant's wife came to the court. She brought with her a tray on which was a cup of milk, a grain of gram, a grain of vetch, and a blade of grass.

She laid the blade of grass, or one of the grains before each of the courtiers, and the cup of milk before the king. The king said to her, 'I look upon you as my daughter. Before you give me the four things, explain to me what you have just been doing.' She replied, ' Cherisher of the poor, first accept the four things. You ask for a thing that is ever decreasing. That is life. You ask for a thing that is ever increasing. That is ambition, which is never satisfied. The thing which never increases or diminishes is one's fated lot; and the thing which both increases and diminishes is the created universe.'¹ Then the king asked her the meaning of her actions. She said, some of your courtiers seated here, are asses, some are horses, and some are brutes, for they had not the sense to remonstrate against bringing a millionaire's wife into public view in open court. (Hence I offered them their appropriate food). And you, sire, are a baby, therefore please drink this milk which I have brought. But you are also my Lord and King, and hence I cannot say more to you. But go to my father's kingdom, and there Your Majesty will also be pointed out as a brute.

¹ Here there is a pun. The Hindī *ghaṭ*ṇā barh*ṇā* means 'to change.' Creation is always changing.

The following two specimens of Jaipurī come from Jaipur itself. They are a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son and a portion of a folktale, and illustrate the grammatical sketch given on pp. 33 and ff. They have been prepared for this survey by the Rev. G. Macalister. On pages 34—74 of that gentleman's Specimens, the student will find a further number of excellent examples of this form of speech.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there was a king who had two sons. By the will of God it was so ordained that he died while they were yet children. On his deathbed he called to him his younger brother and entrusted to him the care of his two children and of his queen. He said to him, ‘as long as these children are too young to understand the business of the state, you must rule the kingdom, but as soon as they have reached years of discretion, you must make over the throne to them.’ So after the king’s death the brother performed all the duties of the state and became complete master of the throne. After a short while he thought to himself that in course of time his nephews would grow up and take the kingdom from him. So he determined, if it were possible, to get them murdered beforehand. He therefore sent for his domestic barber and bribed him to murder the two princes. The barber, it is true, consented to do the deed, but in his heart of hearts he sorely repented of his task. As instructed by the uncle he provided himself with poisoned implements for hair cutting and repaired to the inner apartments to cut the princes' hair. The two brothers came to get their hair cut, and the barber, while he was taking the implements out of their case, and laying them out, began to weep. Then the Queen Mother asked him why he was weeping. 'The king is dead and gone,' said she, 'and regrets are unavailing. Please God, these boys will soon be kings themselves.' 'Your Majesty,' said he, 'that is not why I am weeping. I am weeping for something altogether different.' 'And what is that?' asked the queen. The barber replied, 'Your Majesty, I have been given poisoned barber's tools by their uncle with which to kill these two princes. But, Your Majesty, I can't do it. To me, it is only these two who are king. And that is why I am weeping.' So the queen gave the barber five gold sequins and sent him away. Then she considered that it was no longer safe to stay there, and that she had better take the two lads somewhere else.

(The above is only the commencement of a long story. The reader who wishes to learn the rest, how one brother found two rubies, how the other slew an ogre and married his daughter, and how both finally came by their rights and pardoned the wicked uncle, will find it on pp. 71, and ff. of Mr. Macalister's book on the Jaipur dialects.)

JAIPURĪ (TĒRĀWĀṬĪ).

The hilly district in the north of Jaipur state is known as Tērāwāṭī, the ancient home of the Tōmar or Tuar Rājputs of Delhi. To its east lies the state of Alwar, the main language of which is Mēwāṭī. To its north lies a portion of the state of Patiala of which also the language is a form of Mēwāṭī. To its west and north-west lies the Shēkhāwāṭī district of the state of Jaipur, the language of which is Shēkhāwāṭī. The number of its speakers is estimated at 342,554.

As might be expected, Tērāwāṭī differs from Standard Jaipurī in being mixed with Shēkhāwāṭī and Mēwāṭī. It represents Jaipurī shading off into these two dialects. We note the typical Jaipurī disuse of aspirates in the word mē for mēh, cloud or rain. We may also note that k and g are interchangeable as in the root thāk or thāg, to be weary. This is a very old peculiarity, dating from at least the 12th century.

The genitives singular of the first and second personal pronouns are mērō and tērō, 'my' and 'thy' respectively. The plurals are mārō, our, and thārō, your. The oblique plural of the first personal pronoun is mā.

The proximate demonstrative pronoun is ō, au, or yō, this, plural ai. Its singular oblique base is ai or aĩ. Its plural oblique base is ā̃.

The remote demonstrative pronoun is bō, that, plural bai, bā̃, or bãi. The obl. sing. is bai, bãi, or bā̃i, and the oblique plural is bā̃.

The relative pronoun is jakō, who, obl. sg., jakā, jãi, or jā̃i; nom. pl. and obl. pl. jakā̃.

The interrogative pronoun kun, who? has an obl. sg. kãi. Kē, obl. sg. kyā̃, is 'what'? Kōi or kayō is 'any,' with an obl. sg. kãi.

Jaṇā̃ is 'then.'

In the conjugation of the verb, the noun of agency ends in tū, as in mār^otū, one who strikes. The future takes gō, as in mār^ogō, I will strike. We may note the irregular causal verb, pāy^obō, to cause to drink.

The negative is kōnyai.

In other respects the grammar follows that of Standard Jaipurī, and standard forms are also freely used instead of those given above. For further particulars the student is referred to Mr. Macalister's grammar in his Specimens.

The following specimen of Tērāwāṭī is a portion of a folktale, and has been provided by Mr. Macalister.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Phul-ji Bhati was the King of Sindh. Now the Pandits of Merta tied up the rain in the kingdom of Sindh. For seven years no rain fell, so that the country was ruined, and a famine arose. Then the Tellers said, 'In your kingdom of Sindh the Pandits of Merta have tied up the rain. There is a herd of deer amongst which there is a muskdeer. They have tied the rain to its horn. So you must kill that musk-deer, and then rain will fall in your kingdom.' So the King took thousands of horses and pursued the herd of deer. All the horses became tired, and they and the herd of deer stopped running. Only the musk deer went on for some hundreds of leagues pursued by the King. At last it too wearied and halted, and the King slew it. Then all the rain which had been stored up for seven years, fell like a pestle in torrents. It struck the King, so that he had to cling to the pommel of his saddle. He was so wearied that he lost consciousness, but the horse retained its consciousness. There was a hamlet of an Ahir there in the wild forest, and the horse, hearing the voice of men, came near the hamlet, and, halting, neighed. Cried the Ahir, 'what is that horse which neighed? Let us go outside, and see.' Open the door and look.' So three or four people went outside, and there they saw a horse, with a man clinging to the pommel of its saddle. So they brought him inside, and gave the horse some fodder. The King they wrapped in cotton and put to bed. At about midnight he became warm and asked for food. A Jat's daughter fetched some milk from her mother, and after giving him a drink put him to sleep. At dawn he got up and they asked him who he was and he told them. 'Who art thou?' they asked, 'and whence art thou come?' He replied that he was the King of Sindh, and that his name was Phul Bhati.

(The rest of this interesting folktale will be found in Mr. Macalister's Specimens, pp. 17 and ff.)

JAIPURĪ (KĀṬHAIRĀ).

The dialect of that portion of the Jaipur state which lies to the south of the Sambhar lake and to the north-east of the Kishangarh state, is known as Kāṭhairā, and is spoken by an estimated number of 127,957 people. I have no information as to the origin of the name.

It is Jaipurī, with a few very minor variations. I give as an example a folktale contributed by Mr. Macalister. In Kāṭhairā kũ may be used as the sign of the accusative-dative and syũ as that of the ablative. The agent case of the second personal pronoun is taĩ, the nominative being tũ. The oblique form is also taĩ. The proximate demonstrative pronoun is ai or ō (fem. ā), this; obl. sg. ĩ; nom. pl. ai, obl. pl. yā. The remote demonstrative pronoun is wai or bō (fem. bā), obl. sg. wai or bĩ; nom. pl. bai or wai, obl. pl. wā.

All pronouns, except those of the first and second persons, form the agent by adding the postposition nai. This is not used with substantives. Thus, bānyũ (not bānyā-nai, which would mean 'to the shopkeeper'), by the shopkeeper; mai, by me; taĩ, by thee; ĩ-nai, by this; wai-nai, by that, and so on.

In verbs, the verb 'to become,' has the following irregular forms hair, having become; haitā-ĩ, immediately on becoming; haibālō, one who becomes; kai (not khai) is 'he said'; kiyō is 'a thing said.' Jāyō or jājē is 'be good enough to go.' Jānũ is translated 'you know.' 'Gone' is giyō, gayō and gyō.

In other respects Kāṭhairā is the same as Standard Jaipurī. We may note the change of i to a in forms like bakai-lĩ, it will be sold; bachārĩ, considered; paṇḍ for piṇḍ in paṇḍ chhūtabō, to be rid off; and jad for jid, then. There is the usual disaspiration in āḍĩ, half, baṛ for barh, enter, and even bagat as well as bhagat, time.

An excellent example of the locative of the genitive occurs in āp-kai ghar-kai bārai, lit., in the outside of the house of herself, i.e., outside her own house.

In the specimen we find an example of a construction which I have not noticed in Standard Jaipurī, though it probably occurs in that dialect, as I have met it in the Dāng dialects still further to the east. I allude to the Gujarātī way in which the impersonal construction of the past tense of a transitive verb is perverted by making the verb agree in gender with the object. Thus, bānyũ āp-kĩ lugāi-nai jagāi (not jagāyō), by-the-shop-keeper his-own wife-as-to she-was-wakened. Strictly speaking the impersonal construction requires the verb to be in the neuter or (when that gender does not occur) in the masculine. Here, however, jagāi is put in the feminine to agree with lugāi. This is the regular idiom of Gujarātī.

Further examples of Kāṭhairā will be found in Mr. Macalister's Specimens.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there was a shopkeeper. He and his wife were asleep one night in their house, when at midnight a thief broke in. Just then the shopkeeper awoke and noticed the presence of the thief. So he woke his wife and said to her, 'letters have come from foreign parts to the merchants here that the price of mustard is going to rise. To-morrow it will be worth its weight in silver. You must take great care of the jars of mustard.' The wife replied that the mustard was lying in the corners of the outer verandah, and that she would make it all right to-morrow. When the thief heard this he thought to himself, 'I must pack up and carry off the jars of mustard. What is the use of touching anything else?' So he tied up the jars of mustard in a packet and went off with himself, leaving the shopkeeper happy in the knowledge that his other goods were not touched.

At daybreak the thief filled a bag with mustard and went to the bazaar to sell it. They only offered him at the rate of two and a half seers for one of the pice current in the bazaar. Then the thief understood that the shopkeeper had played a trick on him and thereby saved his property. So he made up his mind to visit his house again, and this time steal something of real value. After waiting a month or twenty days he accordingly broke into the shopkeeper's house again. The shopkeeper awoke this night also, but by this time the thief had tied up all his property in a bundle. The shopkeeper understood that, if he raised a noise the thief would probably murder him, and if he did not raise a noise he would have all his property stolen. So he woke his wife. The thief thereupon climbed into a granary and sat hidden there. The shopkeeper lit a lamp and said to his wife, 'I am going straight off now to visit the River Ganges.' Then he tied up a few clothes in a bundle and became ready to set out. His wife replied, 'this is not the time to go and visit the Ganges. Wait till daybreak and then go.' These words were all heard by the thief as he sat in the granary. Then the wife went outside and awoke the neighbours. 'My husband,' said she, 'is going off to visit the Ganges, and wants to start at once. Please come and persuade him to wait till daybreak.' So ten or twenty men assembled in the house of the shopkeeper and remonstrated with him saying, 'Now it is night. At daybreak, if you still wish to go, you can.' The shopkeeper replied, 'I am quite ready to do what you recommend, but there is this thief sitting there with his bundle. Is he to remain in possession of everything in my house?' So by this trick the shopkeeper got the thief captured.

JAIPURĪ (CHAURĀSĪ).

The Chaurāsī form of Jaipurī is spoken immediately to the south of Kāṭhairā, on the border of the Kishangarh State, in the Thakurate of Lawa, and in the portion of the Tonk State which forms an enclave in the Jaipur State. It is spoken by the following estimated number of people:—

In Jaipur Territory	98,773
In Lawa Territory	3,360
In Tonk Territory	80,000
TOTAL	182,133

Chaurāsī differs hardly at all from Standard Jaipurī.

The only peculiarities of grammar which I have noticed are that the second personal pronoun is tū, not tū, and that the interrogative pronoun kun, who? has an oblique form kunā. Further particulars will be found on pp. 54 and 55 of Mr. Macalister's Grammar.

The specimen is a portion of a folktale, and has been provided by Mr. Macalister.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A Jāt got on his mare and started off to see Delhi. After going on for some days, he came to within three kos or so of the city. There he passed the night, and went on again in the very early dawn. When he was still about a kos from Delhi he met a shopkeeper. Now this shopkeeper had made a vow that if any one should speak to him before sunrise he would look upon it as a bad omen. Hence he himself spoke to no one. As the Jāt passed by he said 'good morning' to the shopkeeper. All the answer he got was a string of abuse. So the Jāt took off his shoe and gave him a drubbing with it. Then he got off his mare, and they went along, he beating, and the shopman cursing. By the time they got to the city gate the sun had set, and the guards asked them what they were fighting about. Said the shopkeeper, 'I have been beaten with a shoe, and if you, Sir, had eaten as many blows as I have, who knows what would have happened.' The Musalmān soldier said to him, 'why should they fall on me? It is you they have fallen on. Where do you intend to go to while you are fighting?' Said the shopkeeper, 'Sir, I'll take him straight to the police-court.' Replied the Musalmān, 'don't do that. Here is this innkeeper here. Tell the Jāt to stay for the night with her, and do you go to your home. In the morning you can fetch the Jāt from his lodging and take him to the police-court, where you'll find justice waiting for you. If you both go now you'll only find yourselves locked up, and you won't get your justice till the morning.'

So the Jāt went off to the inn and the shopkeeper to his own house. The innkeeper cooked some nice bread for his dinner, and then went to sleep. At daybreak the shopman turned up and called to him to come along to the police-court. He answered that he would do so as soon as he had finished his breakfast. So the shopkeeper sat down while the Jāt ate and drank till he got quite tipsy. Then he asked the innkeeper for the reckoning. 'Give me something,' said she, 'that I shall remember all my life.' The Jāt considered to himself, 'what is it that I can give her that she will remember all her life?' So he gave her fifty rupees. She threw them on the ground crying, 'it's something that I shall remember all my life that I want.' Then the Jāt got angry and laid hold of the innkeeper and cut off her nose.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A certain king had a daughter, who was possessed by an evil spirit that used to eat a man every day. In order to keep him supplied with food the king arranged for one of his subjects to come in turn to be eaten up. One day it was the turn of a potter's son. It chanced that the potter had then a guest in his house. The latter asked them why they were all weeping. The potter's wife explained that she had an only son, that the king's daughter was possessed by a man-eating demon, and that it was now the turn of her son to go and be eaten. The guest told her not to cry, as he would go instead. So when night fell he started off and went to the princess. When he arrived he sprinkled some medicine on the fire, and immediately the demon departed from her. Next morning when the sweeper-woman came to sweep up the place, she found the princess in her right mind, and went and told the king. The king sent a messenger to call the potter, and when he came, asked him what his son had done when he went on the preceding night to be eaten up. The potter explained, that he had sent a guest instead of the son. So the king sent for the guest, and learnt from him all that had occurred. Then he gave the princess to him in marriage, and bestowed half his kingdom upon him.

JAIPURĪ (NĀGARCHĀL).

The Nāgarchāl variety of Jaipurī is spoken in the centre of the south of the state of Jaipur, and in that part of the state of Tonk which lies immediately to the east. The estimated number of speakers is—

Jaipur	53,575
Tonk	18,000
TOTAL	71,575

It differs very slightly from Standard Jaipurī. The pronoun of the first person is mhū, as well as maĩ and the pronoun of the second person is taĩ, as well as tū, 'with an oblique form tha, as well as ta. The relative pronoun is jē, not jō. As a specimen, I give a portion of a folktale, for which I am indebted to Mr. Macalister. For further particulars as to vocabulary and grammar, that gentleman's work can be consulted.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there were a crow and a deer, who were great friends. Every day they would go out, each where he thought fit, to feed, and at night they met at a tree in whose branches the crow used to roost, while the deer stayed at its foot. In this mutual affection a long time passed. One day the deer met somewhere or other a jackal. The jackal said to himself, 'this is a fine fat fellow. I must make friends with him, so as to get him caught in a net and killed.' So he said to the deer, 'come along, let us also start a friendship.' The deer replied that he had already become the friend of a crow, and that he could not start a new friendship, as the jackal suggested; without first consulting the crow. 'Very well,' said the jackal, 'to-morrow you can consult your friend. Then I will join you, and we shall all be friends together.' So at even-tide, when they met at the tree, the deer said to the crow, 'my friend, I met a jackal to-day, and he wants to join me as a friend. I shall answer yes or no just as you say.' The crow said, 'if you follow my advice, you won't take the jackal for a friend. Some day he will treacherously get you caught in a net.' Next day the jackal again met the deer. Said the jackal, 'well, have you spoken to your friend? Come along, and let us become friends.' Replied the deer, 'brother jackal, my friend won't agree that you also should be a friend.' But the jackal insisted, and said that they should certainly swear friendship. So he accompanied the deer to his tree, and the latter again said to the crow, 'this gentleman here insists on becoming a friend.' The crow said, 'if you follow my advice, you won't become his friend. These jackals are a deceitful lot. Some day he will treacherously get you killed.'

(The rest of the story will be found on pages 124 and ff. of Mr. Macalister's Selections. The jackal does get the deer trapped. The crow releases him, and the jackal is ultimately killed.)

JAIPURĪ (RĀJĀWĀṬĪ).

To the north-east of the area in which Nāgarchāl Jaipurī is used, and lying to the east of the portion of the Tonk State which is itself to the east of the Chaurāsī area, in the heart of the Jaipur territory, we find Rājāwāṭī Jaipurī spoken. Towards the north it is more mixed with Standard Jaipurī. The number of its speakers is estimated to be—

Pure Rājāwāṭī	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	133,939
Mixed dialect	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	39,510
TOTAL										.	173,449

Rājāwāṭī has immediately to its east the Dāṅg dialects which I have grouped under Braj Bhākhā. It hence presents some irregularities. They nearly all appear in the conjugation of the verb haiḃō (Jaipurī whaiḃō), to become. Its principal parts are as follows:—

Infinitive, haiḃō or hāiṇū, to become. Present participle, haitō. Past participle, hīyō, obl. masc. hīyā, fem. hī. Conjunctive participle, hair. Adverbial participle, haitāi. Noun of agency, haibālō.

Present tense:—

Sing.	Plural.
1. hū	hā
2. hai	hō
3. hai	hai

The future is hū-lō, etc., or haisyū, etc. The other tenses can be formed from these elements.

We may note in the specimen the occurrence of the Gujarātī form of the impersonal construction in which the verb is attracted to agree with the object with nai. Thus, charī bachchā-nai dēkhyā (not dēkhyō), the hen-sparrow saw the young ones. Similarly, charī charā-nai kīyō, the hen-sparrow said to the cock; but rājā kī, the king said, in which kī agrees with the feminine bāt understood.

The following specimen has been provided by Mr. Macalister, to pages 45 and ff. of whose grammar reference may be made for further information regarding the dialect.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time a pair of sparrows made their nest in a king's palace, and by the favour of God had some young ones. The queen, who could understand their language, used to look with much pleasure on the love they showed to their children. One day the hen-sparrow said to the cock, 'if I chance to die, you will take care of our young ones, will you not?' He replied, 'why should you die, and why should our young ones suffer? I shall never find another hen like you, and I hereby make a vow that, if, by chance, you do die, I will not marry again, and will support the chicks.' You must know that the queen had listened to all this talk and knew how they had settled it. A few days afterwards the hen-sparrow died and the queen kept watching the cock and the young ones.

Four days had hardly passed before the cock-sparrow brought home a new mate. Directly she caught sight of the chicks fire blazed up in her heart. 'Aha,' cried she, 'these are the chicks of a co-wife.' Well, the cock-sparrow kept bringing good healthy food for the young ones, but the new hen used to pick up rotten thorns from the hedge and give them to eat, so that in two days they all died.

Now the queen thought to herself that if she died, the king would in this way marry again, and her successor would kill her children. 'For if,' said she, 'there is so much jealousy among uncivilised animals, it is certain that there will be plenty of it among queens.' So she became filled with sorrow over the fate of the sparrow chicks. One day the king asked why she was so full of sorrow. 'You don't bathe, you don't sit quiet, there is no life in you. What sorrow is in your heart? Tell me.' The queen replied, 'Your Majesty, I have no cause of sorrow.' 'Then,' said the king, 'why are you so sorrowful?' So she confessed 'Your Majesty, I have one only son. He is now five years' old, and I am full of sorrow about him.'

(The rest of the story will be found on pp. 112 and ff. of Mr. Macalister's Selections. We there learn how the king promised, in the event of the queen's death, never to marry again, and to take care of the son. How the queen died, and how, after a time, the king did marry again. How the new queen hated the young prince, and persuaded the king to banish him, and how (sad moral!) the king and his new queen lived happy ever after.)

AJMERĪ.

The British district of Ajmere is bounded on the east and north by the state of Kishangarh, of which the language is the Kishangarhī variety of Jaipuri already described on pp. 188 and ff. To its north it also has Kishangarh. To its west it has Marwar, of which the language is Mārwarī, and to its south Mewar, of which the language is Mēwarī. All three dialects are spoken in Ajmere. In the extreme north-east, where Ajmere juts out into Kishangarh, the dialect is Kishangarhī, and is locally known as Dhundārī, one of the names of Jaipuri. In the west of the district the language is a form of Mārwarī. In the south it is Mēwarī. In the centre of the eastern half of the district a mixed dialect is spoken, which differs very slightly from ordinary Jaipuri. It is known as Ajmērī. In the city of Ajmere the Musalmāns speak ordinary Hindōstānī. We thus get the following figures for the languages spoken in Ajmere :—

Ajmērī	111,500
Jaipuri (Kishangarhī)	23,700
Mārwarī	208,700
Mēwarī	24,100
Hindōstānī	41,000
TOTAL	422,359

It will suffice to give as a specimen of Ajmērī the first half of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. The following are the only points in which the language differs from Standard Jaipuri. Mha-nai is 'to me.' Besides the standard forms the pronoun of the third person takes the forms wai and wa both in the nominative and in the oblique cases. The negative is kōna, instead of kōnai.

HĀRAUṬĪ.

Hārauṭī is the language spoken in the states of Bundī and Kota, which are mainly inhabited by Hārā Rajputs. It is also spoken in the adjoining states of Gwalior, Tonk (Chabra), and Jhallawar.

Taking these states one by one, the population of Bundī in 1891 was 359,321. Of these 330,000 were estimated to speak Hārauṭī. Of the remainder, 24,000 speak the Khairārī form of Mēwarī employed by the Minās of the Khairār or hill country in the north-west of the state. The remainder speak languages belonging to other parts of India.

The languages of Kota are as follows :—

Hārauṭī	553,395
Mālvi	80,978
Others	84,688

Mālvi is spoken in the south-east and south-west of the state where it borders on Malwa, and in the Shahabad pargana. A few years ago portions of the Jhallawar State were transferred to Kota, and the above figures allow for the change.

In Gwalior, Hārauṭī is spoken along the Kota frontier, between Shahabad and Chabra of Tonk, and also (in a less pure form known as Shiopurī or Siparī) in the Shiopur pargana, which lies to the north of Shahabad. In the Chabra pargana of Tonk, which lies to the south-east of Kota, the main language is Mālvi, but along the Kota frontier we meet Hārauṭī.

In the Jhallawar State, as now constituted, Hārauṭī is spoken in the Patan Pargana in the north of the state, which has Hārauṭī-speaking areas of Kota on its east, west, and north.

We thus arrive at the total number of speakers of Hārauṭī :—

Bundī (including the Chiefship of Shahpura)	330,000
Kota	553,395
Gwalior	17,000
Gwalior (Shiopur)	48,000
Tonk (Chabra)	17,000
Jhallawar	25,706

TOTAL . 991,101

As a dialect, Hārauṭī belongs to the group of Eastern Rājasthānī dialects of which we have taken Jaipurī as the standard. It has to its east and south the Bundēlī dialect of Western Hindī and the Mālvi dialect of Rājasthānī, and any peculiarities which it possesses are due to the influence of these two forms of speech.

We may take the dialect of the states of Bundī and Kota and of the north of Jhallawar as being the standard form of Hārauṭī, and here we recognize the following peculiarities. Over the whole of this area it hardly changes.

The vowel ē is often preferred to ai. Thus, where Jaipurī has kai, to, Hārauṭī has kē. The letter w is preferred in infinitives like hōwō, to become, and in other words, such as as^wwāb for asbāb, property.

The influence of Bundēlī is most marked in the case of the agent, which regularly takes the postposition nē, while in Jaipurī the agent never takes this suffix. Thus we have chhōṭ'kyā-nē kahī, the younger son said. Nē is, however, also used as a sign of the dative-accusative, like the nai of Jaipurī, as in kōi ũ-nē kãĩ nhai dētō, no one used to give anything to him. In one instance the termination hē is employed to indicate the dative. It is kētā-'k mhan'tyā-hē rōṭī milē-chhē, to how many servants is bread got. Nearly the same termination occurs in the Mālvi of Bhopal (pp. 258 and 263). Sometimes kū is the sign of the dative-accusative, as in ēk-kū gōḍē bulār, having called near (him) one (servant).

Verbs of saying do not govern the dative with nai of the person addressed, as in Jaipurī, but take the ablative with sũ, as in Western Hindī. Thus, bāp-sũ kahī, he said to the father.

The pronouns show greater divergence from Jaipurī. All the Jaipurī forms occur, but we have also mhũ or mũ, I; mhā, we; mũĩ, mhāĩ, or mēĩ, to me; ma-nē, by me (agent); mhā-kō, of me; tēĩ, to thee; ṡāĩ or ũĩ, to him; wāĩ, to them. For 'this' (besides yō, feminine yā) we have ĩ used in the nominative as well as in the oblique form; similarly, ũ is both nominative and oblique for 'he,' 'that.'

The genitive of the reflexive pronoun is both āp'ṡō and āp-kō, but āp'ṡō also means 'our' (including the person addressed).

Saving for a few words peculiar to its vocabulary, Hārāuṭī does not otherwise differ (if we allow for the frequent preference of ē to ai) from Standard Jaipurī.

As samples, I give a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and a folktale from the state of Kōtā. The former I give in facsimile, just as it was received, as it is an excellent example of the form which the Mārwarī alphabet takes in Eastern Rajputana. It will be seen that the letters are much deformed. The spelling is erratic, and vowels which ought to be written above or below the line are quite commonly omitted. This is a peculiarity of the alphabets of Rajputana, and has spread all over India, in the so-called Mahājani script, which is really the vernacular character of Mārwarī merchants. In the transliteration I have corrected the mis-spellings which are only due to the carelessness of the writer (such as gōḍhē for gōḍē), and have supplied omitted vowels.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

In a certain city there was a poor Brahman who lived on daily grain doles; but if he begged in one village he could get only three seers of corn, and if in two still not more than the same quantity.

As he had a daughter to be married his wife said to him 'Mahārāj; such is this fate of ours! How shall we be able to marry this daughter?' On this the Brahman said 'What can I do? If I beg in one village I get only three seers of grain, and if in two no more than the same quantity. I can do nothing more.'

Then the wife of the Brahman said 'Cannot you follow some other calling? You must do something else. Work hard and everything will come all right. Nothing can be done without hard work.'

A long dispute and quarrel took place between them. The Brahman thereupon lost his temper, and he left his home on a journey to a distant country.

After having travelled a distance of some twenty kōs, he began to consider to what direction he should turn his steps.

After walking a little further he entered a forest and came upon a beautiful little garden and a tank where a saint was seated absorbed in his devotions.

The Brahman thought, I shall not go any further now that I have found a sage. I will serve him and God is sure to support me.

Having thus made up his mind he dusted the place and sat down to wait upon the holy man.

Many days he passed in the service of the saint. At length the saint opened his eyes and said to the Brahman, 'As thou hast served me for so many days ask a boon.'

Then the Brahman said, 'What boon can I ask? I have a grown up daughter of eighteen or twenty years. There was a quarrel between me and my wife and I have left home in consequence having no means for arranging her marriage.'

On this the saint spoke, 'Take this piece of paper and sell it in a city. Do not covet much, but accept only so much money as may suffice for thy daughter's marriage.'

On the paper was written, 'A sister only loves her brother in prosperity, but a brother loves him even in adversity. A wife away at her father's house is beyond the control of her husband. He is living who is wide-awake, and a man asleep is practically dead. Happy is he who controls his passions.'

Having taken this piece of paper the Brahman went to a city where he asked the son of a merchant to buy it for Rs. 200. The merchant's son was so struck with the moral instruction contained on the paper that he at once purchased it for the sum demanded.

The Brahman returned home with the money and performed the marriage of his daughter.

HĀRAUṬĪ (SIPĀRĪ).

The western portion of the state of Kota consists of the pargana of Shahabad, lately transferred to it from Jhallawar. In Shahabad and the Gwalior country to its east and south the language is Mālvi, mixed with the Hārauṭī and Bundēli spoken in its neighbourhood. A little further south of Shahabad lies the Chabra pargana of Tonk, in which the dialect is also Mālvi, mixed with the Hārauṭī of Kota immediately to its west. Indeed more than twenty-four thousand people of this part of Gwalior and of Chabra, who dwell on or near the Kota border, speak Hārauṭī itself.

The Shahabad country is mostly mountainous, and the mixed Mālvi there spoken is hence locally known as Dangihaī or Dhandērī.

North of the Shahabad pargana lies the Shiopur pargana of Gwalior. Here, as well as in the adjoining part of Kota, the language is Hārauṭī, but is mixed with the neighbouring Bundēli and Dāngī. The Gwalior people call this form of Hārauṭī Shiopurī, while the Kota people call it Sipārī, from the river Sip, a tributary of the Chambal in this locality.

As a specimen of this Sipārī or Shiopurī dialect I give a short folktale, which comes from the Gwalior State. It will be seen that it is in the main Hārauṭī. Instances of borrowing from Bundēli are the use of hō, as well as chhō, for 'was,' or hū, as well as chhū, for 'I am.' In bachchān-kū, to the children, we have an oblique plural and postposition borrowed from Dāngī.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There lived a jackal and his she-jackal. One day they felt thirsty, so the jackaless said to the jackal, 'Come, jackal, let us drink water. But do you know any stories or not? There is a den of a tiger. If you know any stories, then will we drink water. I am dying of thirst.' So they went on and on to the water-place, when the jackaless said, 'Jackal, do you know any story or not.' As soon as they were there the tiger caught their eye. Then said the jackal, 'I have forgotten all.' Then said the jackaless, 'Jackal, what mean you standing here. Take a drink and make an obeisance to our worthy uncle.' The jackal on his part instantly fell to drinking water, and when refreshed he said, 'Uncle, good-morning.' Then turning to the jackaless he said, 'Jackaless, what are you at? You also drink water and bow down to our worthy uncle.' When refreshed by her draught the jackaless spoke to the tiger, 'Worthy uncle, come to our dwelling; there are two cubs of ours. This jackal says they are his and I say they are mine. So come and make a fair division.' Then the tiger said to himself, 'These are two and there are two cubs. I will devour all four simultaneously.' So they returned. - Going on and on they gained their dwelling. Then the jackaless said to the jackal, 'Drag them out hither so that the revered uncle may make his division.' The jackal went inside, but was afraid to come out again. The jackaless in her turn said, 'I myself will bring the cubs.' She ran into the hole, and the tiger remained standing all alone outside. Then the jackaless put her head out of the burrow and said, 'Worthy uncle, we are reconciled. He has taken one and given me the other.' The tiger returned to the forest, and they escaped, for they drank water safely by engaging him in talk.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

An Ahir, a crow, a tiger, and a donkey had all fallen together into a blind well. It chanced that a king was hunting in the neighbourhood, and came to the well to quench his thirst. There he saw the four animals. The crow said to him, 'if you take me out, I'll be of use to you if ever you fall into trouble.' So he took the crow out. Then the crow said to him, 'take all the others out, except the Ahir.' When the donkey saw that the crow had got out, he said, 'if you take me out, I'll be of use to you if ever you fall into trouble.' So the king took him out. Then said the donkey, 'don't take out the Ahir, but take out the tiger.' When the tiger saw that the donkey had been taken out, he said, 'take me also out.' The king said he could not do that, as he was afraid of the tiger eating him up. The tiger replied, 'I won't eat you up. If you take me out, I'll be of use to you if ever you fall into trouble. If ever you fall into trouble, come straight to me.' So the king took him out. Then said the tiger, 'don't take out the Ahir.' Then the Ahir also said, 'take me out too,' and the king, moved by pity, took him out. Then said the Ahir, 'if ever you fall into trouble, come to me.' Then the four went each to his own house, and the king finished his hunting and went home.

After some days had passed, the king fell into trouble. He went to the tiger. The tiger gave him a bracelet and girdle of silver, and a necklace and an earring of gold. In short, he tied a great heap of valuables in a bundle and gave them to the king. It was so heavy that the king had to confess that he could not carry it home. 'Never mind,' said the tiger, 'tie the bundle on to my back, and ride on me yourself, and I'll take you back to your village.' So the king tied the bundle on the tiger's back and mounted himself, and in this way was conveyed back to his village, where the tiger set him down. Then the king took the bundle into his own house, and the tiger went back to the forest.

Next day the king went to the crow. The crow said, 'sit down, and I'll bring something for you.' So the king sat down, and the crow flew off to the village. A woman there had just taken off her nose-ring and her anklet of gold and put them down. These the crow snapped up and flew off with them to the king. The king took them and brought them home.

Next day the king went to the Ahīr. The Ahīr told him to sit down. Now in that village the Earth-God used each day to take a man, house and house about, as a sacrifice, and that very day it was the turn of the Ahīr to provide the victim. So he gave the king some food, and locked him up in an inner room. Then he ran off to the village saying, 'come quickly to my house. I've got a man there, and we can sacrifice him.' So they all hurried to the Ahīr's house. They set up a sacrificial lamp, and laid out an offering of sweetmeats. Then they took the king and after tying his hands and feet they threw him down and began to whet the sacrificial knife.

Just at that time his friend the crow flew by and saw what was happening. He flew at once to the tiger and said, 'the king after all has gone to that Ahīr, and they are going to sacrifice him to the Earth-God. Come along at once, and take the donkey with you.' So they started and took the donkey with them. They began to consult, and asked the crow what he intended to do. 'I'll take the wick of the sacrificial lamp,' said he, 'and will set fire to the village with it. All the men will run off to the village, and only four or five will remain behind.' Then the crow said to the tiger, 'what do you intend to do?' The tiger said, 'as there will be only four or five men, I will eat them up. I am quite famished with hunger.' Then the tiger asked the donkey what he would do. The donkey replied, 'do you put the king on my back, and I'll gallop off with him to a safe place.' By this time they had arrived at the scene of the sacrifice and found the king lying, with the knife actually being applied to his throat. Then the crow carried off the burning wick of the lamp and set fire to the village. When the men saw the conflagration, they ran off to the village, and only three remained behind. These the tiger ate up. Then they mounted the king on the donkey, and the donkey galloped off along with the tiger and the crow. They left the king in his own house, and then they all went off each to his own home.

The other specimen of Ahīrwāṭī comes from the Jhajjar Taḥṣīl in the south of Rohtak. It is a folktale illustrating the reputed avarice of people of the Ahīr (or as they are often locally called Hīr) caste. An Ahīr promises to give his son-in-law whatever he asks for. When the son-in-law asks for a very petty present, the Ahīr invents all kinds of excuses to get off giving it.

The specimen is written in the Persian character, as received from Rohtak. It well shows the mixed character of the Ahīrwāṭī of this district. The first sentence, ēk Ahīr dukhālō parō thō, is good Ahīrwāṭī, and the second, us-kā jamāi bēre-nai āyā, is equally good Bāngarū. So throughout the whole specimen Bāngarū and Ahīrwāṭī forms are found side by side, often in the same sentence. Sometimes we have words like bōlō, for the Ahīrwāṭī bōlyō, and sometimes words like the Bāngarū bōlā. The only local peculiarity is the dropping of the y in the past participle (bōlō for bōlyō) which is general over the whole of the Rohtak district. In one place the oblique form āih is used for the nominative yō, this.

There was a certain Ahīr, who had fallen sick. His son-in-law came to visit him. It happened that that day he was a little better. He asked his brother who the young fellow with the red turban was. 'A guest,' said he. 'Who is he?' 'Its Jai-kaṭi's husband.' Said the Ahir, 'are you Jai-kaṭi's husband?' 'Yes, sir.' 'Then, brother, to-day I feel better. Ask me for a present.' 'Sir,' said the son-in-law, 'your soul is tightened now. If I ask for anything, you will not give it.' 'Why should I not give it? What you have heard are the truthful words of a dying man.' Very well, if you give anything, give me that four-pronged corn-rake that used to hang there.' 'That,' said the Ahir, 'is just what I can't give you, my fine fellow. It has three rings on each joint. I have had it by me for one-and-twenty years. It is the one which my dear old uncle Hukamlō used to work with. It's a regular bit of my liver. I have broken off three marriages for each (joint) rather than part with it. How on earth can I give it you?'

 Ah! chanticleer, ah! chanticleer sounds a pæan of escape, O Beloved.
 I shall make thee drink fresh milk, O she-cat.
 Ah! beat, ah! beat chanticleer and make him flee, O she-cat.
 (The cock is now put to flight), let the drum sound in the courtyard, O Beloved.
 Ah! chanticleer, ah! chanticleer, thy defeat hath resulted in triumph-song.

¹ There are eight pahars or watches, in the twenty-four hours.

² This is the first watch after sunset.

³ In Indian poetry, a husband and wife are often represented as playing chess far into the night.

⁴ This is the last watch before dawn. After cock-crew, a husband cannot stay with his wife.

⁵ The termination lō, like ḍō, signifies contempt.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

In the Aravali hills in the territory of Udaipur was a state by name Jūdāmērpur, yielding a revenue of twenty or twenty-five thousand rupees. There, a certain bard having come, and having received a gift of two or two and a half thousands, began to go back. Then being afraid of the neighbouring freebooters, Mērs, Mīnās, and Bhīls, he requested the Thākur and got from him a Pariyār Sardār to accompany him. Then the freebooters came from all sides to loot them.

Rajput freebooters do not plunder a bard, a saint, a Brahman, a woman, or one or two armed soldiers. But these freebooters were Bhīls and Mīnās; these, too, have an objection to plunder a bard; but himself being a true Rajput, the Sardār who formed the escort, did not like to take advantage (of the above-mentioned Rajput custom), as he held it disgraceful to covet life by avoiding a skirmish, by representing himself for fear of the enemies to belong to the bard tribe. At last the fight ensued. By the hand of the Pariyār Sardār twelve persons fell to the ground. By the sword stroke from one freebooter's hand, the head of the Pariyār Sardār, too, was separated from the body. But the headless trunk strode over the field, and this time even the sword broke to pieces in striking the enemies. Then drawing out its dagger the headless body ran, and going a certain distance, killed the enemy, and again returning from that place came to where the head lay lopped off, and sat down (firmly) on its knees. Then wiping the dagger clean on the outer face of the skirt of his robe, he put it into the sheath, and having made clayballs with the flow of his welling life-blood, laid itself down near the head. All this the bard was witnessing, standing aloof. The Rajput was killed, but the property of the bard was saved.

He, walking onwards from this place and reaching a state by name Khinwaj in the district of Sirohī, belonging to the Devdā Chāhuwān Sardār, related all that had happened. Then the Thākur Harbamji hearing this tale, praised that Sardār exceedingly. Hearing this Prince Nārpāl Dēoji came at that very time into the court of his father, and on being asked the bard again related the whole story. Hearing it, the Prince said, 'it is all very well that the body, after the head was cut off, killed the enemy, and again coming near the head cleansed the dagger with the skirt of the robe and put it into the sheath. But was the dagger wiped clean on the inside of the skirt or on the outside? If it was wiped on the outside of the skirt, then what is there (worthy of high praise)?' Hearing this remark of the Prince and thinking it foolish, all began to laugh. The Thākur Sāhib, too, did not like that the exploit of a brave warrior Sardār should be shown at a disadvantage, out of crooked malice and high conceit of one's own prowess. So he said 'Listen, O Prince, what difference can the inner and the outer side make? As to that Rajput, whatever he did was splendidly accomplished; and with regard to what you have said of wiping the dagger clean on the inner side, when you yourself achieve any Rajput-like valour then you may do as you say; we will then acknowledge it to be well done. He had evidently done what he could.' Hearing such harsh words from the mouth of his father, the Prince, even at that very time, and in the very presence of his father, vowed never to live even for one month after the age of thirty, and like that Pariyār Sardār after a fight when his head should be cut off, to brandish the steel, to come near the head, to wipe clean the dagger on the inner side, to put it into the sheath, and then to fall on the ground.

MĀLVĪ OF KOTA AND GWALIOR.

Mālvī is spoken in the east (the Shahabad Pargana) and south-east of the state of Kota, in the adjoining portion of the Tonk State, known as Chabra Pargana, and in the south-west of the Gwalior Agency, immediately to the east of Kota and to the north of the Bhopal Agency.

The estimated number of speakers of Mālvī in this locality, after allowing for the portion of Jhalawar lately transferred to Kota, is as follows :—

Kota	80,978
Tonk (Chabra)	20,000 ¹
Gwalior Agency	395,000
TOTAL	495,978

This appears under various names. In the forest tract in the south-west of the Gwalior Agency and in the neighbouring portion of the Shahabad Pargana of Kota, which is known as the Dāṅg, the language is known as Dāṅgihaī, Dāṅgēsā or Dhaṇḍērī, with a reported number of speakers as follows :—

Gwalior	95,000
Kota (Shahabad)	6,000
TOTAL	101,000

Further, inquiry, however, shows that this does not differ from the ordinary Mālvī spoken in the neighbourhood, and I have therefore included the figures in those given above for the Mālvī of Kota and Gwalior. In Kota the Mālvī is locally known as Kuṇḍalī.

The Mālvī spoken in this locality has Bundēlī immediately to its north-east and east, and the Hārautī form of Jaipurī to its north-west and west. It is hence affected by these two dialects. As a specimen of it I give a folktale (familiar to readers of the Arabian Nights) which comes from Kota. In the Gwalior Agency, the language is similar, but more influenced by Bundēlī, and examples are not needed.

In the specimen the following are the principal points of divergence from Standard Mālvī. I also draw attention to a few points which are typical of that dialect.

There is the usual tendency to disaspiration and uncertainty of the vowel scale. Thus we have būjī, for būjhī, enquired; sāt for sāth, a companion; riyō, remained. Note khēr, for kahar, having said. As examples of vowels, see gar^anō, for gir^anō, to fall; dan, for din, a day; giyō, for gayō, gone; rōhō-hō, for rahō-hō, you remain.

The cerebral ṇ is more common than in Standard Mālvī. Thus, mār^anō, instead of mārⁿnō, to strike.

In the declension of nouns, we have a locative in hē in the word chhōrīhē, in the daughter. This form also occurs in the neighbouring Hārautī and in the Mālvī of Bhopal, see pp. 204 and 263.

In pronouns, we have mhaī, to me. The plural is regularly used for the singular in mhā, we, for I; thā, you.

In the conjugation of verbs, the past tense of the auxiliary verb is hō (hā, hī), not thō, thus following Bundēlī. The imperfect of the finite verb is built on the central ¹ This is a very rough estimate. No separate figures for the Mālvī speakers of Chabra have been reported.

Rājasthānī system, with a verbal noun in ē, and not with the present participle as in regular Mālvī. Thus, rahē-hō, not rah'tō-hō, was dwelling. The Jaipurī verbs compounded with āw'nō, to come, with y as a junction semi-consonant, are common. Thus, lāgy-āi, she has become attached.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A gentleman was going to a village. On the way he met another man who asked him his name. The gentleman replied his name was 'Good.' The gentleman asked the other man in return what his name was, and he was told that it was 'Wicked,' and that now they could travel in company. They had not gone far when Wicked said that he was thirsty, and suggested that they should go to a well. They came to a well and Good lowered his brass vessel to draw out water, when Wicked pushed him down into the well.

In the well there was a pīpal tree, on which he fell and stopped the whole night. There were two demons living in the well, and while conversing together the one asked the other, 'Brother, where are you staying now-a-days?' He replied that he was in possession of the body of the daughter of the king. The other thereupon said that he for his part was watching a great treasure which was buried under the mouth of that well. The latter then asked the former, 'Would you anyhow leave the princess if an endeavour be made to that effect?' He replied, 'Not by any ordinary means, but only when the water of this well is sprinkled over the body of the princess.' The other remarked that he too would not obstruct anybody from carrying away the treasure if he only sprinkled the water of that well over the spot. Good overheard all this conversation.

Next day some travelling merchants came to the well and took out Good, who after resting a little took a vessel of water from the well and carried it to the palace of the king where the possessed princess was. The king had vowed that he would give the princess in marriage to whoever expelled the demon from her body. Good sprinkled his water over the eyes of the princess and she was immediately dispossessed and cured. The king thereupon gave his daughter to Good in marriage. Good subsequently secured the treasure buried under the mouth of the well after sprinkling water over the spot, and thus became blessed with wife as well as wealth.

MĀLVĪ OF THE BHOPAL AGENCY.

The Mālvī which is spoken in the Bhopal Agency by 1,800,000 people, and is the main language of the tract, differs but little from the standard of the Indore Agency. As a specimen I give a folktale which comes from the Narsingharh State. The following points may be noted.

There is the usual disaspiration, as in ūbō for ūbhō, standing up. On the other hand we have phē for pē, on. There is also the usual interchange of vowels as in nījar for najar (naṣr), a present; kāwar for kūwar, a prince. In the specimen the vowels are often written long when they ought to be short, and nasals are frequently omitted. These are only instances of carelessness on the part of the writer, and such have been silently corrected in the transliteration.

In the infinitives of verbs, the letter b is preferred to w. Thus we have pūj^hbō, to worship; kūd^hbō, the act of leaping; chhōr^hbō, the act of releasing.

In the declension of nouns we meet the termination hē, used both for the accusative-dative and for the locative. We have also noticed the same termination in the Kota specimen and in Hārautī (pp. 258 and 204). Examples of it here are bhēsāhē, to the buffalo; khāl^hhē, into the river; ghōrāhē, to the horse.

As the specimen is a good example of the written hand current in Malwa, I give it in facsimile. The writing is not always careful. Sometimes the termination ā is erroneously written for ō as in khusī-kā (for kō) amal-panī hōyā (for hōyō), opium-water of happiness took place (i.e. was drunk).

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Thirty or forty years ago, Prince Bhawānī Singh (then heir-apparent of the Narsingharh State) went to Rājgarh, when some of the courtiers who attended on the Rāwatjī¹ thought of witnessing the Prince's horsemanship on the race course. So they fed a he-buffalo. When the *Parwā Pāṭī*² came and a procession went out for worshipping the acacia and jujube trees, the buffalo was brought with his legs tied. As soon as his legs were loosened the Rāwatjī struck him with his spear, whereupon the buffalo ran so far that he reached the foot of the Jālpājī Hill. The Rāwatjī then said to Prince Bhawānī Singh, 'I thought you had followed the heels of the buffalo.' Thereupon the Prince pulled his horse's reins and whipped him twice or thrice. The horse galloped and overtook the buffalo. As he (the buffalo) jumped into the stream, Prince Bhawānī Singh gave him a blow with his sword and cut him asunder, the two pieces falling apart as those of a drum, half on one side and half on the other. Prince Bhawānī Singh holding the reins stood still. We searching for him among the acacia and jujube trees arrived thither and called out for him. The Prince replied, 'I am standing here.' All of us then went to him. Then a goat was sent for and after beheading it, the blood was poured into tubs and was rubbed on the horse. Four grooms, two torch-bearers, and two sepoy who accompanied the horse, were directed to walk the horse to the stable slowly, while both the Sardārs, the Prince and the Rāwatjī, returned to the camp and took dinner together. After dinner the Rāwatjī returned to his palace and Prince Bhawānī Singh went to sleep in his camp.

² This festival is held on the day after the Diwālī, and is celebrated by horse-races.

Next day a Darbār was held when opium was distributed and rejoicings made. Offerings and presents were made, rewards were given, and the Prince was highly praised for killing the buffalo.

MĀLVĪ OF BHOPAWAR.

Mālvī is spoken in the north-east of the Bhopawar Agency of Central India by about 147,000 people. The language of the rest of the Agency is either Bhili or Nimārī.

The Mālvī of Bhopawar is practically the same as that of the Indore Agency. As a specimen I give a Rāngrī version of the famous tale of Śrāvāṇa or Sarwan, the son of the sister of Daśaratha or Dasrath, the father of Rāma Chandra. Dasrath killed Sarwan by mistake. The lad's parents cursed Dasrath, to die from sorrow at the loss of a son, even as they did, and the fulfilment of this curse is the foundation of the whole story of the Rāmāyaṇa.

The specimen comes from the state of Jhabua, and the following points in the language may be noted.

There is the usual loss of aspiration as in āḍō for āḍhō, blind. As usual, also, vowels are interchanged, as in phar'tō, for phir'tō, wandering; lakh'nō, for likh'nō, to write. An initial s becomes h, as is common in other Rājasthānī dialects. Thus, harāp, for sarāp, a curse; hun'nō for sun'nō, to hear.

In nouns, as elsewhere in Rājasthānī, the locative of the genitive is used as a dative, as in Sar'wan-rē, to Sarwan; thānē, to you.

Verbs have an imperative in jō or jē, which is not necessarily honorific; thus, pāw'jō, give to drink; mar'jē, die. The past participle of kah'nō or kēnō, to say, is kīdō. The causal of pīnō, to drink, is pāw'nō.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There was a man named Sarwan. His parents were blind. Sarwan used to carry them from place to place. While going along on the road the blind man and the blind woman became thirsty. Then they said to Sarwan, 'Son! give us water to drink. We are thirsty.' He made them sit there, and went to a tank to fetch water. Rājā Dasrath was on a watch at the tank. When Sarwan commenced drawing water, Rājā Dasrath saw him from a long distance and thought it was a deer who was drinking. He accordingly shot an arrow which wounded Sarwan in the breast. Sarwan then began to cry 'Rām, Rām.'¹ The Rājā then understood that it was a man. He therefore went to Sarwan. When he saw that it was his nephew he began to lament. Then Sarwan said to him, 'Lament not, my death was destined to take place by your hands. Now give (this) water to my parents to drink.' Having said this, Sarwan died, and Rājā Dasrath took the water and came to his sister and brother-in-law, the parents of Sarwan, to give them to drink. Then the blind pair said, 'Who art thou? Dasrath replied, 'What have you to do with (that)? Drink water.' Then his sister said that they would not drink water which was not fetched by Sarwan. Dasrath said: 'I am Dasrath. Sarwan was unknowingly killed by me.' The blind pair hearing of the death of Sarwan cried aloud and cursed Rājā Dasrath, 'Let the very same arrow, which has caused the death of our son, kill you.' Having thus cursed him, the blind man and the blind woman also breathed their last.

¹ Rām was not yet born. Sarwan's calling on him is therefore as great an anachronism, as the Irish legend which makes Pharaoh's daughter teach Moses 'the Bible and the Testament.'

MĀLVĪ OF THE WESTERN MALWA AGENCY.

The Western Malwa Agency of Central India had in 1891 a population of 1,619,368. The Musalmans speak Hindōstānī. The Bhils speak Bhilī, and nearly all the rest speak Mālvī. Adjoining the Agency are the Rajputana States of Tonk and Jhallawar, in both of which Mālvī is spoken on the Malwa border. In Tonk in Rajputana,¹ it is spoken in the Nimbahera pargana, which is situated on the south-eastern border of Mewar. In Jhallawar (after allowing for the recent transfer of part of the territory of that state to Kota) it is spoken in the Chaumahla tract, which lies in the south-west of the state.

The Chaumahla tract is a part of the Sondwar country. The Sondwar country extends into the Western Malwa Agency and even into the adjoining portion of the Bhopal Agency. In the Western Malwa Agency it comprises Pargana Pirawa of Tonk in Central India, and Parganas Satkheda and Garot of Indore. In this Sondwar tract a special form of Mālvī is spoken which is called Sōṇḍwārī. It will be dealt with subsequently. Over the rest of the Western Malwa Agency the language is ordinary Mālvī. We thus arrive at the following estimated language figures for the Western Malwa Agency, and the neighbouring Rajputana States:—

Mālvī—
Western Malwa	1,241,500
Nimbahera of Tonk	4,000
Mālvī (Sōṇḍwārī)—
Western Malwa	115,000
Chaumahla of Jhallawar	86,556
Bhopal	2,000
Bhili (Western Malwa)		56,000
Hindōstānī (Western Malwa)		190,000
Other languages spoken in Western Malwa		16,868
	TOTAL	1,711,924

I now proceed to deal with the Standard Mālvī of Western Malwa (including that of Nimbahera of Tonk), of which the estimated number of speakers is 1,245,500. As a specimen I give a Rāṅgrī folktale which comes from the state of Ratlam. As may be expected from the geographical position of the Agency, the language is somewhat affected by Central Rājasthānī. There is the usual loss of aspiration as in wayō, for whayō, he became. In Eastern Marwārī there is a tendency for an initial s to be pronounced as h, and this is, as we shall see, also a marked peculiarity of Sōṇḍwārī. It also appears in the Mālvī of Western Malwa, as in hājē, for sājē, in the evening; hunⁿō, for sunⁿō, to hear; ham^jāḍī-nē, for sam^jhāḍī-nē, having persuaded. There is the Central Rājasthānī preference for a cerebral ṇ, as in sunⁿō quoted above. There is the Standard Mālvī preference of w over b, as in wāt for bāt, a word.

In pronouns there is the Central Rājasthānī āp^ā, meaning 'we, including the person addressed.'

In verbs, there is an imperative in jē, as we have noted in Bhopawar. Thus, kijē for kahijē, say. There is an instance of the Mēwārī h-future in watāihū, I will show. There is the Mārwarī causal with ḍ in ham^ajāḍī-nē, having persuaded, and rōwāḍ^ajē, cause to cry (an imperative in jē).

There is also an instance of the Gujarātī custom of making the past tense of a transitive verb, used in the impersonal construction, agree in gender and number with the object with nē. Thus, chhōrā-nē rōwāḍyā (not rōwāḍyō), she caused the cubs to cry.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There was once upon a time a she-jackal who was in the family way, and she asked her husband where he intended to arrange for her lying-in on this occasion. 'In a tiger's den,' said he. 'But the tiger will come and eat us up?' The jackal replied, 'when the tiger comes I will cough, and then you must pinch the young ones and make them squeal. I will ask you why they are crying, and you must answer that they want some tiger's liver.'

A few days afterwards the two went into a tiger's den, and there she was delivered of her cubs. In the evening the tiger came home, and sniffed about saying, 'there seems to be someone in my house.' Then the jackal cleared his throat. His wife then pinched the cubs and made them squeal. The jackal said, 'O Kanak Sundarī,¹ why are the children crying.'

'O Dar Bhañjan, my prince,' she replied, 'the babies want some tiger's liver.' When the tiger heard this his soul flew away, and he ran back as fast as he could; for he thought that there was some animal in his den who was mightier than he was, and who would gobble him up. So he spent the whole night thinking about this. Next day he came again to his den, and the same thing happened, so when he heard the same conversation he ran away.

As he was going along, he met a monkey who asked him why he was wandering about in this way. Said the tiger, 'there's some one in my den who wants to gobble me up.' When the monkey heard this he went off to investigate, and soon returned saying, 'My lord, it is only a jackal who is there. Why dost thou fear him?' But the tiger refused to believe him. Then the monkey said, 'let us tie our tails together and go into the den, and I'll show you the jackal there?' So the two tied their tails together and approached the den. The jackal saw them and coughed. Then the she-jackal made the cubs squeal and her husband asked her why they were crying. 'They want some tiger's liver,' said she. He replied, 'don't let them cry. Make them hold their tongues.' My uncle, the monkey, is gradually persuading a tiger to come in for them.' When the tiger heard these words, he thought that the monkey was meditating treachery. He bounded backwards and fled for his life. The monkey's tail was tied to his, so the monkey was soon dashed to pieces and died; while the jackal lived happily for the rest of his life in the tiger's den.

¹ He gives his wife a grand name, and so does she him, in order to impress the tiger.

SŌṆḌWĀRĪ.

'Sōṇḍwārī' is the language of the Sōṇḍiās, a wild tribe, which inhabits the tract known as Sōṇḍwār, in the north-east of the Western Malwa Agency, and in the Chaumahla, the southern portion of the Jhallawar State. In the Western Malwa Agency, it includes the Pirawa Pargana of the State of Tonk, and Parganas Satkheda and Garot of Indore.

Besides this, some two thousand speakers of Sōṇḍwārī are found in the adjoining Agency of Bhopal. These latter have emigrated from the Sondwar tract. The number of speakers of Sōṇḍwārī is estimated as follows:—

Western Malwa Agency—
Tonk and Indore	115,000
Chaumahla of Jhallawar	86,556
Bhopal	2,000
TOTAL	203,556

The following account of the Sōṇḍiās is taken from pp. 200 and ff. of 'Vol. II. of the Rajputana Gazetteer :—

Their chief clans are Rahtor, Tawur, Jādon, Sesodia, Gehlot, Chohān, and Solankhi. The Chohāns are said to have come from Gwalior and Ajmer, the Rahtors from Nagore of Marwar, and the Sesodias and others from Mewar from seven to nine centuries ago. The Chaumehla Sōṇḍiās consider themselves as descended from Rājputs of the different clans, and assert that the families they are descended from are now in several instances holders of influential jagirs in the States from which they emigrated. One account makes out that the people derived their name from the country which, being bounded by two rivers of the name of Sind, was called Sindwārā, corrupted into Sōṇḍwārā, which caused the inhabitants to be called Sōṇḍias. The other account makes the people give the name to the country, their name being a corruption of the Hindi word Sandhia—twilight, i.e. mixed (neither one thing nor the other). A Sōṇḍia, with his comparatively fair complexion, round face, shaven chin, and peculiar large, white turban, is at once distinguishable from other classes. Though given to quarrelling among themselves, more particularly over land, they can combine, as was recently seen when a deputation from a pargana, consisting of over one hundred persons, retired in sulks owing to one of their number having had his turban knocked off by a sepoy, which was considered as an indignity to the whole body, and resented as such. They are simple and very ignorant, and still given to taking what belongs to others, which now chiefly shows itself in cattle-lifting. They have taken to agriculture, and some of the Chaumehla patels are well-to-do, but, as a class, they do not appear thrifty, and their village expenses are very high. A few villages are held in jāgir, the remains, it is said, of considerable possessions granted originally by the Muhammadan emperors as an inducement to settle. The following is the account given by Malcolm in his Central India of the Sōṇḍias in his time :—

"They are often called Rājputs, but are mixture of all classes, or rather descendants of a mixed race. In their origin they were probably outcasts; and their fabulous history (for they consider themselves as a distinct people) traces them from a prince who, in consequence of being born with the face of a tiger, was expelled to the forests, where he seized upon women of all tribes, and became the progenitor of the Sōṇḍias, or, as the term implies, 'mixed race,' some of whose leaders soon after settled in Malwa, where they have ever since maintained themselves as petty Zamindars, or landholders, as well as plunderers.

"That the Sōṇḍias have a claim to antiquity, there can be no doubt; but we have no record of their ever having been more than petty robbers, till the accident of their lands being divided among four or five local authorities, always at variance and often at war with each other, combined with the anarchy of Central India during the last thirty years, raised them into importance as successful freebooters. Though often opposed to the Grassias, who are settled in the same tract, a congeniality of pursuit has led to their being much associated with the latter, and particularly since the insanity of Jeswant Rao Holkar. From that date, neither life nor property was secure within the range of the lawless bands of Sōṇḍwārā, most of whom, from breeding their own horses, were well-mounted. At the peace of Mundesar, the Sōṇḍias were estimated in number at 1,249 horse and 9,250 foot, all subsisting by plunder, for the possessions they claimed as their own were in a state of complete desolation."— (Vol. I.)

"The principal among the illegitimate, or, as they are often termed, half-caste, Rājputs in Central India, are the Sūdis, who have spread from Sōṇḍwāra (a country to which they give the name) to many adjoining districts. A short history of them has been given. They are Hindus, and take pride in tracing their descent from Rājput heroes; but their habits have led them, on many points, to depart from the customs of their fathers, and, except refraining from the flesh of buffaloes and cows, they little observe the peculiar usages of the Hindus. This tribe is divided into many classes or families, which take their names from Rājput ancestors; but all intermarry. Second marriages among their women are very common; and, from the strict usages of the Rājput upon this point, there is none on which they deem the Sōndias to have so degraded the race from which they are descended.

"The Sōndias have been either cultivators or plunderers, according to the strength or weakness of the government over them; but they have always had a tendency to predatory war, and have cherished its habits, even when obliged to subsist by agriculture. Their dress is nearly the same as that of the other inhabitants, though they imitate in some degree the Rājput in the shape of their turbans. They are, in general, robust and active, but rude and ignorant to a degree. No race can be more despised and dreaded than the Sōndias are by the other inhabitants of the country. They all drink strong liquors, and use opium to an excess; and emancipated, by their base birth and their being considered as outcasts, from the restraints which are imperative upon other branches of Hindu society, they give free scope to the full gratification of every sensual appetite; consequently, vices are habitual to this class which are looked upon by almost every other with horror and disgust. There is little union among the Sōndias; and acts of violence and murder amongst themselves are events of common occurrence, even in what they deem peaceable times. Their usual quarrels are about land, and each party is prompt to appeal to arms for a decision. This race has not been known to be so quiet for a century, as at present. When the Pindāri war was over, their excesses gave the British Government an opportunity of seizing their strongholds and compelling them to sell their horses, which has in a great degree deprived them of the ability to plunder; but still the presence of troops is essential to repress their turbulent disposition; and a long period of peace can alone give hopes of reforming a community of so restless and depraved a character. The women of this tribe have caught the manners of their fathers and husbands, and are not only bold, but immoral. The lower ranks are never veiled, appear abroad at visits and ceremonies, and many of them are skilled in the management of the horse, while some have acquired fame in the defence of their villages, or, in the field, by their courageous use of the sword and spear.

"At their marriages and feasts the Sōndias are aided by Brāhmans, but that caste has little intercourse with them, except when wanted for the offices of religion. Among this rude race Chārans are treated with more courtesy; but the Bhāts, who relate the fabulous tales of their descent, and the musicians, who sing their own deeds or those of their fathers, are the favourites, on whom they bestow the highest largesses."

I give two specimens of Sōṇḍwārī, both of which come from the State of Jhallawar. One is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. The other consists of two songs sung by women. The following are the main peculiarities of the dialect. In other respects it is the same as ordinary Mālvī.

The most typical peculiarity of Sōṇḍwārī is the universal change of an initial s to h. Its speakers call themselves Hōṇḍiā, not Sōṇḍiā. There are several examples of this in the specimens, amongst which we may quote, hag^alō or hag^arō, for sag^alō, all; hāt^arō, for sāt^arō (a Gujarātī word), a daily portion of food; hāū, for sādhū, good; hāmal^anō, for sābhal^anō, to hear; ham^ajār^anō, for sam^ajhānō, to remonstrate. On the other hand chh is pronounced as s, as in sūk^alō, for chhōk^alō, chaff.

There is the usual Mālvī loss of aspiration, as in lōrō, for lhōrō, young; tī or thī, from; dīdō or dīdhō, given; wayō, for whayō, became; hāmal^anō, for sābhal^anō, to hear (another Gujarātī word); ham^ajār^anō, for sam^ajhānō, to remonstrate.

In the declension of nouns, the ablative suffix is tī or thī. The accusative-dative has the usual kē and nē, and also hē, as in other Mālvī-speaking tracts. The agent also takes nē, as in bētā-nē kahī, the son said. In the following passage, nē is used once to form the agent, and once to form the accusative, ma-nē pāp kīdhō ma-nē thē hālī-wāl^adīā bhēlō nākhō, I have sinned, keep thou me among (thy) servants.

The suffix hē is also used for the locative. Examples of its use are, (dative) waṇā-hē wāṭ-dī, he divided to them; (locative) thā-hē rūkam-pāt bāchh^oryā-dūm^oryā-hē urāi-dīdī, he wasted your substance on singers and dancers.

As regards the pronouns, āpī or āp^onē means 'we, including the person addressed.' Ap^onō is 'own.'

The past tense of the verb substantive is usually thō, but sometimes we find the Bundeli form hō. Besides hē, we have hāi for 'he is.' The imperfect tense of finite verbs is not made with the present participle as in Mālvi, but with the oblique verbal noun as in Central Rājasthānī. Thus, bharē-thō, he was filling, literally, was a-filling. Causal verbs are formed with ḍ or ṛ as in Mārwarī. Thus, ham^ojāryō, he remonstrated, literally, he caused to understand.

Sōṇḍwārī has a peculiar vocabulary, many words being strange to other Rājasthānī dialects. The following instances occur in the specimens:—jī, a father; māḍī, a mother; wāṭ-dī, a servant; war, a year; rōṭhō, bread, plural rōṭhā, a feast; banō, a bridegroom; bīrō, a brother.

On the whole Sōṇḍwārī possesses a distinctly Bhil character, as the above notes have shown. Nearly all these peculiarities also occur in Bhil dialects.

TWO SONGS SUNG BY WOMEN.

(1) O Bridegroom, there is a bell-necklace on your mare's neck, and her anklets sound musically.

O Bridegroom, you have a green kerchief in your hand, and your feet are fast-dyed with henna-colour.

O Bridegroom, you mounted and started at midnight, and awakened my sleeping village.

(2) O Brother, on the garden-boundary is a pīpal tree, and I climb upon it, and watch for your coming.

(Refrain) The son of my mother has brought a scarf.

O Brother, pawn the nose-ring of my sister-in-law (your wife), and thus save your sister's dignity in the village assembly.

(Refrain) The son of my mother, etc.

THE BROKEN MĀLVĪ OF THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.

Mālvī is spoken, but in a corrupt form, being much mixed with Bundēlī and Nīmāḍī, in parts of the Hoshangabad and Betul Districts. With this may be classed the corrupt forms of Mālvī used by the Bhōyars and Katiyās of Chhindwara, and the Paṭwās, or silk-weavers, of Chanda. I shall deal briefly with each of these. The following is the estimated number of speakers of these broken dialects:—

Mālvī of Hoshangabad		126,523
Mālvī of Betul (called Dhōlēwārī)		119,000
Bhōyari of Chhindwara		11,000
Katīyāi of Chhindwara		18,000
Paṭwī of Chanda		200

MĀLVĪ OF HOSHANGABAD.

The main language of the district of Hoshangabad in the Central Provinces is Bundēlī, and has been described in Vol. IX., Pt. I. The western end of the district, including the Tahsil of Harda, and the State of Makrai does not speak Bundēlī, but a corrupt form of Mālvī. The number of speakers is estimated at 126,523.

This tract has the Bundēlī-speaking portion of Hoshangabad to its east. The Mālvī-speaking tract of Central India to its north, the Nīmāḍī of Nimar to its west, and the Marāṭhī-speaking district of Ellichpur to its south. The language is a mixture of Mālvī, Bundēlī, and Nīmāḍī, the basis being Mālvī. As usual in these border dialects, there does not appear to be any mixture of Marāṭhī.

A detailed examination of this mixed dialect is not necessary. It is sufficient to give, as an example, a short fable. Examples of the use of Bundēlī expressions are khē for the sign of the accusative-dative, and gō for gayō, gone. The Nīmāḍī idioms are more numerous. Such are āga for āgē, in front; chhē, is; jāch, he goes. We may also note the peculiar form līs-kē, meaning 'having taken.' This is Bhilī. In the Bhilī of Khandesh lī-s is 'having taken.'

A man once went into a forest with his son. As the boy was running in front of him, he called out, 'see, father, how this great big tree has been uprooted by the wind, and is lying fallen. How did it fall?' The father said that it had been blown down by a storm. Then the son said, 'but see, here is this cane-tree, so thin and high. Why did not the storm uproot it too?' His father replied, 'my son, the stiffness of the teak tree was the cause of its fall. It was proud of its branches and of its great size. When the wind came, it refused to sway or rock. But this poor little cane-tree bends at once to the slightest breeze, and hence it escapes.'

DHÖLĒWĀRĪ OF BETUL.

South of the central portion of the Hoshangabad district, in which Bundēli is spoken, with Nimar to its west, the Bundēli-speaking Chhindwara to its east, and the Marāṭhī-speaking districts of Ellichpur and Amraoti to its south, lies the district of Betul. In the north of Betul a mixed language, very similar to that of Harda in Hoshangabad, and locally known as Dhōlēwārī, is spoken by an estimated number of 119,000 people. In the south of the district, the language is Marāṭhī. The line of division between the two languages is an ethnological one. The Mārāṭhī speakers are Kunbīs, who originally came from the Deccan. The Dhōlēwārī speakers are principally Bhōyars and Dhōlēwār Kurmīs. The former say that they came from Dhārā-nagarī in Central India, and the latter came partly from Malwa and partly from Unao in the United Provinces. Besides Marāṭhī and Dhōlēwārī, there are also in Betul, Kūrkū spoken by 31,400 persons, and Gōṇḍī by 94,000. The Marāṭhī speakers number 75,000.

Like the language of Harda, this Dhōlēwārī is a broken mixture of Mālvi, Bundēli, and Nīmārī, the first predominating, but here Bundēli is stronger than in Harda. The past tense of the verb substantive is both thō and hatyō, the latter being the Bundēli hatō, with a Mālvi termination. Note also the Marāṭhī sāthī, for,

BHŌYARĪ OF CHHINDWARA.

We have just seen that the Bhōyars of Betul claim to have come from Dhārā-nagarī, and speak a broken Mālvi. In the adjoining district of Chhindwara the local Bundēlī is often mechanically mixed with Marāṭhī, and examples have been given in Vol. IX., Pt. I. The Bhōyars of Chhindwara have retained their original Mālvi, but, in the same way, have mixed it with Marāṭhī, so that it has become a broken patois. A few lines of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son will be sufficient to illustrate it. The number of speakers is estimated at 11,000. Note the way in which a final ē is often represented by a. This is borrowed from Nimāḍī and also agrees with the practice of the Marāṭhī of Berar.

PĀṬ'VĪ OF CHANDA.

The Paṭ'wās, or silk-weavers, of Chanda in the Central Provinces speak another of these broken dialects. It looks as if the original language of these people was Marāṭhī and that they had abandoned it for Rājasthānī. As a specimen, I give a few lines of a version of the Parable. The vocabulary is full of Marāṭhī words, and there are a few Marāṭhī inflexions, but most of the grammar seems to be Rājasthānī (with here and there some Bundēli), and for convenience sake we may class the language as a form of Mālvi. The number of speakers is said to be about 200. In the Deccan, the dialect of the silk-weavers is called Paṭ'ṇūli or Paṭ'wēgāri, and is a form of Gujarātī. It is described below on pp. 447 and 448.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There was a king. He used to go for hunting in the early morning. (One day) when he was hunting he felt thirsty. He was thinking of drinking water if it could be got somewhere, when he caught sight of a shady nīm tree. Thinking there might be water there, he made his horse gallop, and approached the nīm. On going there he found that there was a dry tank, and by it a devotee seated with his eyes closed. His disciple had gone to the village for begging flour. The king said to himself that there was neither water nor anything there and that it was a strange place for a devotee to sit in. At that time the king was wearing a crown of gold, in which abode the demon Kali,¹ and through its influence the king could not understand what he was doing; so he took up a dead serpent which was lying there, and folded it round the devotee's neck. By this time the disciple returned after doing his begging. Seeing the serpent folded round his preceptor's neck, he said to the serpent, 'Go and bite at night him who has folded you round the neck of my preceptor.' In the meanwhile the king had returned to his palace and the moment he took off the crown and sat down he remembered that he had folded the serpent round the devotee's neck, and that it was a very wicked action. So he resolved to go back at once and take it off. So thinking, the king set out.

GUJARĀTĪ.

The word 'Gujarātī' means the vernacular language of Gujarat, and this name very accurately connotes the area in which it is spoken.

Name of Language. It is spoken in the province of Gujarat, and also in the peninsula of Kathiawar.

Area in which spoken. It is the court and business language of Cutch, and has even extended a short distance into Sind. The name 'Gujarat' is derived from the Sanskrit Gurjaratrā,¹ which apparently means 'the country of the Gurjaras.' The ancient Gurjaratrā only covered that portion of the modern Gujarat which lies north of the river Mahi, i.e. Kaira, Ahmedabad, Mahikanta, Palanpur, and Kadi of Baroda. The country got this name under the dynasty of the Chāwadhās, who ruled in Anahilawāda between 720 and 956 A.D. The country south of the Mahi was known to Sanskrit geographers as Lāṭa, and the extension of the name of Gujarat to this tract seems to have taken place under Musalmān rule.²

The Gurjaras (or, in the modern vernaculars, Gūjars) were a foreign tribe who passed into India from the north-west and gradually spread (A.D. 400—600) as far south as Khandesh and Gujarat.

The present Gūjars of the Punjab and of the United Provinces preserve more of their foreign traits than the Gūjar settlers further to the south and east. Though better looking, the Punjab Gūjars in language, dress, and calling so closely resemble their associates the Jāts or Jats as to suggest that the two tribes entered India about the same time. Their present distribution shows that the Gūjars spread further east and south than the Jāts. The earliest Gūjar settlements seem to have been in the Punjab and in the United Provinces from the Indus to Mathura, where they still differ greatly in dress and language from most of the other inhabitants. From Mathura, the Gūjars seem to have passed to east Rajputana, and from there, by way of Kota and Mandasor to Malwa, where, though their original character is considerably altered, the Gūjars of Malwa still remember that their ancestors came from the Doab between the Ganges and the Jamna. In Malwa they spread as far east as Bhilsa and Saharanpur. From Malwa they passed south to Khandesh and west, probably by the Ratlam-Dohad route to the province of Gujarat.³ In the other direction, the Gūjars extended north and are now found roaming over the Himalayas north of the Punjab and over the hills of Kashmir. It is an interesting fact that where they have not been absorbed into the rest of the population as in the plains of the Punjab (where two districts, Gujarat and Gujranwala, are named after them), they are always found to speak some dialect of one and the same language, closely connected with eastern Rājasthānī and with Gujarātī. The grammar of the Gūjars of Swat is almost the same as that of the Rajputs of Jaipur.

The following is taken from pp. 1 and 2 of the Early History of Gujarat, already quoted. The richness of Mainland Gujarat, the gift of the Sabarmati, the Mahi, the Narbada, and the Tapti, and the goodliness of much of Saurāshtra,¹ 'the 'Goodly Land,' have from the beginning of history continued to draw strangers to Gujarat both as conquerors and as refugees.

By sea probably came some of the half-mythic Yādavas (B.C. 1500—500); contingents of Yavanas (B.C. 300—A.D. 100) including Greeks, Bactrians, Parthians, and Scythians; the pursued Pārsīs and the pursuing Arabs (A.D. 600—800); hordes of Sanganian pirates (A.D. 900—1200); Pārsī and Nawāyat Musalmān refugees from Khulagu Khān's devastation of Persia (A.D. 1250—1300); Portuguese and rival Turks (A.D. 1500—1600); Arabs and Persian Gulf pirates (A.D. 1600—1700); African, Arab, Persian and Makrān soldiers of fortune (A.D. 1500—1800); Armenian, Dutch, and French traders (A.D. 1600—1750); and the British (A.D. 1750 and thenceafter).

By land from the north have come the Scythians and Huns (B.C. 200—A.D. 500); the Gurjaras (A.D. 400—600); the early Jādējās and Kāṭhis (now of Kathiawar) (A.D. 750—900); wave upon wave of Afghān, Turk, Mughul, and other northern Musalmāns (A.D. 1000—1500); and the later Jādējās and Kāṭhis (A.D. 1300—1500).

From the north-east the prehistoric Aryans and their descendants till almost modern times (A.D. 1100—1200) continued to send settlements of Northern Brāhman; and since the 13th century have come Turk, Afghān, and Mughul Musalmāns.

From the east have come the Mauryans (B.C. 300); the half-Scythian Kshatrapas (B.C. 100—A.D. 300); the Guptas (A.D. 320); the Gurjaras (A.D. 400—600); the Mughuls (A.D. 1530); the Marāṭhās (A.D. 1660—1760); and the British (A.D. 1780 and thenceafter).

It will thus be seen what heterogeneous elements go to form the Gujarat population.

To the north, Gujarātī extends almost to the northern frontier of the Palanpur state beyond which lie Sirohi and Marwar, of which the language is Mārwarī. Gujarātī has also encroached into Sind, where it is found near the southern coast of the district of Thar and Parkar, here also having a form of Mārwarī to its north. On the west it is bounded by the Ran of Cutch, and, further south, by the Arabian Sea. It does not extend into Cutch, as a vernacular, although it is there employed for official and literary purposes. It has, however, occupied the peninsula of Kathiawar. It extends as far south as the southern border of the district of Surat, where it meets the Marāṭhī of Daman. On both sides of the border line, the country is bilingual. The two nationalities (the Gujarātīs and Marāṭhās) are mixed, and each preserves its own tongue. The boundary runs east so as to include the State of Dharampur, and then runs north along the foot of the hills which form the eastern boundary of Gujarat, till it joins the eastern frontier of Palanpur. These hills, here known as the Ārāvali Range, extend further north, as far as Ajmer, dividing Marwar from Mewar, and are throughout inhabited by Bhil tribes. These Bhils have also settled in the plains at the foot of the hills and all of them speak one or other of the dialects which I have grouped together as Bhilī.² Further east beyond the Bhils lie Eastern and Southern Rajputana, of which the important dialects are Jaipuri and Mālvi. Jaipuri and Mālvi are both closely connected with Gujarātī, and the Bhil dialects may be considered as linking them together.

¹ Saurāshtra of ancient history corresponds to Peninsular Gujarat, or the Modern Kathiawar.

The following is the number of persons reported for the purposes of this Survey to speak Gujarātī in the tract in which it is a vernacular :—

Name of District, State or Agency.	Reported number of Speakers.
Ahmedabad	840,000
Mahikantha	541,500
Palanpur	606,000
Cutch	205,500
Kathiawar	2,571,000

Baroda	2,025,759
Surat Agency	56,000
TOTAL	9,313,459

Gujarātī is spoken by settlers in nearly every province and state of India. The Pārsīs, whose adopted language it is, are enterprising merchants, and most of the speakers outside Gujarat are of this nationality. In Madras there is also a large colony of silk weavers who immigrated centuries ago from Gujarat, many of whom still (see pp. 447 ff.) retain the language of their original home.

The following are the figures for Gujarātī in areas in which it is not a vernacular. Most of them are taken from the tables of the Census of 1891, but those for Kashmir, Rajputana, and Central India are only estimates, as no language census was taken of these tracts in that year.

The following is therefore the total number of speakers of Gujarātī in all India, according to the figures compiled for this Survey :—

Gujarātī spoken at home	9,313,459
„ „ abroad	1,330,977
„ „ by wandering tribes	1,791

In 1901 the total number of speakers of Gujarātī was 9,165,831.

The only true dialectic variation of Gujarātī consists in the difference between the speech of the uneducated and that of the educated. That of the latter is the standard form of the language taught in grammars. That of the former differs from the standard mainly in pronunciation, although there are a few “clipped” or contracted verbal forms, especially in the present tense. The differences of pronunciation are nearly all the same over the whole Gujarātī tract, but, as a rule, though they are the same in kind, they are much less prominent in south Gujarātī, and become more and more prominent as we go north. Amongst these we may mention the pronunciation of ī as ē, of k and kh as ch and chh, respectively, of ch and chh as s, of s as h, and a Cockney-like habit of dropping h. There is also a general tendency to confuse cerebral and dental consonants and to substitute r for ḍ and ḷ, to double medial consonants, and to pronounce the letter ā as a broad o, something like the sound of a in all. The Pārsīs and Musalmāns are usually credited with special dialects, but in pronunciation and inflexion these generally follow the colloquial Gujarātī of their neighbours. Musalmān Gujarātī is noticeable for its entire disregard of the distinction between cerebrals and dentals. Most Musalmāns, however, speak Hindōstānī. The Gujarātī of Pārsīs and Musalmāns mainly differs from the ordinary colloquial language of the uneducated in its vocabulary, which borrows freely from Persian and (generally through Persian) from Arabic. Natives give names (based upon caste-titles or upon the names of localities) such as Nāgarī, the language of the Nāgar Brāhmans, or Charōtarī, the language of the Charōtar tract on the banks of the Mahi, to various sub-divisions of these dialects, but the differences are so trifling that they do not deserve special mention, although a few of them have been recognized in the following pages. From the nature of the case, it is impossible to give figures for the number of people speaking these dialects or sub-dialects. We can say how many people belong to a certain tribe, or how many live in a certain tract, but we cannot say how many of these speak the standard dialect and how many speak the dialect of the uneducated.

There is one kind of Gujarātī, consisting of several dialects, which is not dealt with here. I allude to the many forms of the Bhil languages. These are dealt with separately.¹ They form a connecting link between Gujarātī and Rājasthānī, and are most closely connected with the former language. The total number of speakers of Bhil languages is 3,942,175, and if we add this to 9,313,459, the number given above for speakers of recognized Gujarātī, we get a total of 13,255,634, which may be taken as the estimated number of speakers of Gujarātī in every form in its proper home.

Gujarātī (with Western Hindī, Rājasthānī and Panjābī) is a member of the Central Group of Indo-Aryan Vernaculars. As explained in the General Introduction to the Group, it is probable that the original language of Gujarat was a member of the outer circle of Place of the language in connection with the other Indo-Aryan languages.

Indo-Aryan speeches, but that immigrants from the east, speaking a form of the language of the Central Group, came into the country and imposed their language upon it. How well this agrees with the actual facts of history so far as they are known, is shown by the paragraphs above¹ in which an account is given of the curious mixture of races which now inhabits Gujarat. Even the name of the country is derived from that of a foreign tribe who invaded it from the north and east—the Gurjaras. At the same time, although Gujarātī belongs to the central group of languages, it still shows, like Rājasthānī, only more so, many survivals of the old outer language, such as the loss of power of pronouncing s and h, the use of an oblique form of nouns which ends in ā, and the frequent employment of a past participle of which the typical letter is l, as in Marāṭhī and the Aryan languages of Eastern India. As might have been expected, these peculiarities (especially the incorrect pronunciation of s and h) are more prominent in the vulgar language of the uneducated than in the literary form of speech. The latter is more under the influence of the traditions of the central group.

We are fortunate in possessing a remarkable series of documents connecting the modern Gujarātī with its immediate parent the Nāgara form of Śaurasēna Apabhraṃśa. This was the Apabhraṃśa with which the Grammarian Hēmachandra (fl. 12th century A.D.) was acquainted, and which he made the basis of his work on the language. The Nāgar Brāhmaṇs form an important part of the learned Hindū community of Gujarat, and one form of Gujarātī (according to some, its purest literary and certainly its most sanskritized form) is called Nāgarī after them.² It is probable that the Nāgara Apabhraṃśa also derives its name from this literary caste. Hēmachandra himself lived in north Gujarat and the language which he explained, though most likely dead in his time, was only an old form of the language spoken in the country round him.

The learning of Anahilawāḍa Paṭṭaṇ did not die out with Hēmachandra, and so early as the end of the 14th century (only two hundred years after his death) we find the earliest book written in what can be called Gujarātī. It is a grammar of Sanskrit written for beginners in their vernacular language. Fifty years afterwards modern Gujarātī literature commences with the poetry of Narsīṅgh Mētā. We have thus a connected chain of evidence as to the growth of the Gujarātī language from the earliest times. We can trace the old Vedic language through Prakrit down to Apabhraṃśa, and we can trace the development of Apabhraṃśa from the verses of Hēmachandra, down to the language of a Pārsī newspaper. No single step is wanting. The line is complete for nearly four thousand years.³

The Nāgara Apabhraṃśa described by Hēmachandra was most closely connected with that form of Prakrit known as Śaurasēnī, or the Prakrit of the central Gangetic Doab. From this it follows, as is also borne out by history, that the supersession of the old language of the Outer Circle by the one belonging to the Central Group had taken place long before his time.

² See pp. 378 ff. Some authors derive the name 'Nāgarī' of the well-known Indian alphabet also from this tribe. At the present day, they employ the Nāgarī and not the Gujarātī character for their writings.

³ Owing to the interest which attaches to this unique characteristic of Gujarātī, I give at the end of this introduction a note on the connexion between Old Gujarātī and Apabhraṃśa (see pp. 353 ff.). The connexion is very close. Indeed some of Hēmachandra's verses are recognized by natives as only old Gujarātī.

Gujarātī closely agrees in its main characteristics with Western Hindī and still more closely with Rājasthānī.¹ It has the same analytic method of conjugating its verbs and declining its nouns that we find in Western Hindī. There is, however, one noteworthy exception to this remark in which Gujarātī agrees with Western Rājasthānī. It is the fact that the genitive and dative of the noun are formed synthetically and not analytically. As this point has not been remarked before, it deserves to be treated at some length.

One of the most striking differences between the languages of the Central Group and of the Outer Circle is that in the former the procedure of declension is conducted analytically, i.e., by the addition of help-words, while in the latter it is conducted synthetically, i.e., by means of terminations. For example in Hindōstānī (belonging to the Central Group) 'of a horse' is ghōrē-kā, and 'to a horse' is ghōrē-kō, in which the help-words kā and kō are added to the word ghōrē. On the other hand, in Bengali, 'of a horse' is ghōrār, and 'to a horse' is ghōrārē, in which the terminations r and rē are suffixed to the word ghōrā, and in each case ghōrār or ghōrārē becomes one simple word, pronounced as one whole, and not a compound like ghōrē-kā and ghōrē-kō.

The explanation of this is that the analytic languages are in an earlier stage of development than the synthetic ones. The latter were once also analytic, but in the process of linguistic development the two members of the compound became united into one word. What was a soldered joint is now a welded one. This can be best explained by an example, but before doing so, it is necessary to explain a certain phonetic law which existed in Prakrit and in Apabhraṃśa. This is that certain consonants (of which k and t are two) are liable to be elided when they fall between two vowels in the middle of a word, but are not liable to elision when they are at the commencement of a word, even though the preceding word ended in a vowel. Thus the word chalaṭi, he goes, becomes chalaṭi in Apabhraṃśa, through the t, which is in the middle of a word and between two vowels, being elided; but in the phrase kāmaṣṣa tatta, the essence of love, the first t of tatta is not elided, because, although between two vowels, it is at the beginning of a word. It will thus be seen that the elision of a k or t (amongst other letters) in Apabhraṃśa is an infallible sign that it is in the middle of a word, and not at the beginning of one.

For our present purpose we may consider three old words which have become suffixes or terminations of the genitive. These are kiaa, kara or karaṭi, and taṇaṭi. The Hindōstānī ghōrē-kā is derived from the Apabhraṃśa ghōḍai-kiaa. Here it will be seen that the k of kiaa has not been elided in becoming kā. The k is therefore the initial letter of a distinct word, which has not become one with ghōrē, and kā is a separate postposition, and is not a grammatical termination.

On the other hand, the Bengali ghōrār is derived from ghōḍaa-kara, through an intermediate form ghōḍaa-ara. Here the initial k of kara has been elided. It had therefore become medial, and kara was therefore not a separate word, but was part of one word without a hyphen, thus ghōḍaakara. The r is therefore a termination and not a postposition. Bengali grammarians quite properly write ghōrār as one word, and not ghōrā-r, as if it were two, and the declension is no longer analytical, but has become synthetical.

The case is exactly the same with the Western Rājasthānī ghōḍārō, of a horse, usually, but wrongly, written ghōḍā-rō. It is derived from ghōḍaakarau, and the elision of the k shows that ghōḍaakarau and ghōḍārō are each one word and not two. The syllable rō is therefore a termination and not a postposition and the declension is here, also, synthetical and no longer analytical.

Finally, let us take the Gujarātī ghōḍānō, of a horse. This is derived from ghōḍaa-taṇaṭi, through ghōḍaanaṭi. Here again the elision of the t shows that taṇaṭi has ceased to be a postposition, and has become a termination, just as the letter i in equi is a termination and not a postposition. Ghōḍānō is therefore one word and not two. Nō, like rō, is a termination, not a postposition, and it is wrong to write ghōḍānō, with a hyphen as is usually done, just as it would be wrong to write equ-i instead of equi.

The case of the suffixes of the dative follows that of the genitive, because in all these languages, the dative is always merely the genitive, put into the locative case. Kō is the locative of kā, as rē is that of r or rō, and as nē is that of nō.

It will thus be seen that while the typical language of the Central Group, to wit Hindōstānī, forms its genitive and dative analytically, Gujarātī and Western Rājasthānī² depart from the standard by forming these cases synthetically like the languages of the Outer Circle.

¹ In mediæval times, Gujarat was simply a part of Rajputana. Its separation at the present day is only because one is mostly British territory and falls within the Bombay Presidency, while the other is not British territory, but is owned by native chiefs.

² So also Pañjābī. The Pañjābī dā is a contraction of kidā.

In its pronunciation of the vowels, Gujarātī has several characteristic peculiarities.

When a vowel is followed by a double consonant it generally prefers to simplify the consonant and to lengthen the vowel.¹ Thus, the Hindī makkhan, butter, is mākhāṇ in Gujarātī; so the Apabhramśa mārissañ, I shall strike, becomes mārīs in literary Gujarātī.

Arabic and Persian words, which contain the letter a followed by h, when borrowed by Gujarātī change the a to e, while in Hindōstānī the a is retained. Thus Hindōstānī śahr but Gujarātī śeher, a city.

Gujarātī, like Sindhī and Rājasthānī, usually has e and ō where Hindōstānī has ai and au. Thus Hindōstānī baiṭhā, Gujarātī beṭhō, seated; Hindōstānī laundī, Gujarātī lōṇḍī, a slave-girl. It will be observed that in beṭhō, the e is short, not ē.

Gujarātī has a short e as well as a long ē. A list of words containing this short e will be found on p. 344. It will be remembered that Western Rājasthānī has a similar short pronunciation of e. Gujarātī has no short ō, but, on the other hand, in some words ō is pronounced broadly, like the a in 'all.' A list of them will be found on pp. 345 and ff. In such cases, the letter is transliterated ō.

Many words which contain i in Hindōstānī have a in Gujarātī. Thus Hindōstānī bigarṇā; Gujarātī bugaḍṇā, to be spoilt; Hindōstānī likhṇā, Gujarātī lakhṇā, to write; Hindōstānī mīlṇā, Gujarātī maḷṇā, to be met; Hindōstānī adhik, Gujarātī adakhū, more.

In colloquial Gujarātī, ā frequently becomes the broad ō, and ī becomes ē. This is especially common in North Gujarāt. The change of ī to ē is a very old one, and occurred in Prakṛit. Examples of these changes are pōṇī for pāṇī, water; and mārīs for mārīs, I shall strike.

In Gujarātī we sometimes have a, where we have u in Hindōstānī. Thus Hindōstānī tum, Gujarātī tamē [compare Mēwātī (Rājasthānī) tam], you; Hindōstānī mānus, Gujarātī mānas, a man; Hindōstānī huā, Gujarātī hatō, was. In colloquial Gujarātī hatō is often pronounced hutō.

As regards consonants, we may observe in the first place the preference for cerebral letters which Gujarātī shares with Rājasthānī, Pañjābī, Sindhī, and Marāṭhī. The cerebral letters ḍ and ḍh in literary Gujarātī usually preserve their pure sounds, but in colloquial dialects when they come between vowels they often have the Hindī sounds of r and rḥ. In Northern Gujarātī, moreover, ḍ is often dentalized to a pure r, as will be explained below. The cerebral ṇ and the cerebral ḷ are unknown to Hindōstānī, but are extremely common (only as medial or final letters) in Gujarātī. The rule is that when ṇ and ḷ represent double nn or double ll in Apabhramśa they are dental, but when they represent medial single letters they are cerebralized. Thus Apabhramśa sonṇā, Gujarātī sōṇā, gold, with a dental ṇ; Apabhramśa ghaṇā, Gujarātī ghaṇā, dense; Apabhramśa challai, Gujarātī chālē, he goes; Apabhramśa chalai, Gujarātī chalē, he moves. As already explained, Gujarātī prefers to simplify a double consonant and to lengthen the preceding vowel at the same time. It thus happens that the dental letters, when medial, almost always follow long vowels. In colloquial Northern Gujarātī there is a strong tendency to dentalize cerebral letters and even to cerebralize dental ones.

In such cases, d, dh, and l generally become r. Thus, mātē for māṭē, for; dīthō for dīṭhō, seen; thōrā or ṭhōḍā for thōḍā, a few; lōrū for lōḍhū, iron; tēnē for tēṇē, by him; mar^awū for maḷ^awū, to mingle; ḍāh^adō for daḥāḍō, a day; tū for tū, thou; dīḍhō or ḍīḍhō for dīḍhō, given. In fact we may say that in this form of the language dentals and cerebrals are often absolutely interchangeable, much as is the case in the Piśācha languages of the North-Western Frontier.

In colloquial Gujarātī there is a strong tendency to pronounce ch and chh as s, and, as we go north, this gradually becomes the rule. Thus, pās for pāch, five; usō, for ūchō, high; sār^awū, for chār^awū, to feed cattle; sōrū for chhōrū, a child; pusyō, for puchhyō, asked. In some northern tracts, j and jh are similarly pronounced as s, as in zād for jhād, a tree. In the Charōtar country, on the banks of the river Mahi, this s and z are pronounced as ts and dz respectively, so that the name of the tract itself is called by the people who live in it 'Tsarōtar.' A similar pronunciation is found in Marāṭhī.¹

While ch and chh become s, on the other hand k, kh, and g, especially when followed or preceded by i, e, or y, become ch, chh, and j, respectively, in Northern Gujarātī. Thus, dākrō, a son, becomes dāch^arō; khētar, a field, becomes chhētar; the verb lāg^awū, to begin, makes its past tense lājyō, not lāgyō; pagē, on foot, becomes pajē. A similar change is observable in the Marāṭhī of the Northern Konkan.² This ch or chh is further liable to become s, under the preceding paragraph. Thus, nākhya, on being thrown, becomes, first nāchhya, and then nāsyā.

In Hindōstānī, w or v regularly becomes b, but in Gujarātī it is preserved. Thus, Hindōstānī baniā, Gujarātī wāniō, a shop-keeper; Hindōstānī binā, Gujarātī vinā, without; Hindōstānī parbat, Gujarātī parwaṭ, a mountain.

In colloquial Gujarātī, the letters s and ś are often pronounced h, and this is the rule in the north (compare Western Rājasthānī). Thus, māṇah, for māṇas, a man; hō, for śō, a hundred; hūraj for sūraj, the sun; hū for śū, what? dēh, for dēs, a country; ham^ajāyō, for sam^ajāvyō, caused to understand. In Kathiawar, an initial s is aspirated, so as to sound like s'h, which bears the same relationship to s, that kh does to k (see p. 426).

On the other hand, also especially in the north, h itself is elided. Thus, utō, for hutō (i.e., hatō), he was; ū, for hū, I; āthī, for hāthī, an elephant; kaū, for kahū, I say. This even occurs in the case of aspirated consonants, so that we have, in the north, words like ēkatu, for ēkaṭhū, in one place; hātē or hātī, for hāthē, on the hand; adakhū, for adhikū, more. Even in standard Gujarātī an h is often omitted in writing, although it is still slightly audible. Thus the word amē, we, is sometimes pronounced aḥmē, in which h represents a faint aspirate. A list of the words which contain this faint h is given on pp. 347 and ff. Some dictionaries indicate this unwritten h by putting a dot under the syllable after which it is pronounced. Thus, keḥwū, to speak, but this orthographical device is now no longer in vogue. Furthermore, in standard Gujarātī, when h has the same vowel before and after it, the first vowel is not pronounced. Thus, mahārānī, a queen, pronounced m'hārānī. Again, ahu is pronounced 'hau, as in bahu, much, pronounced b'hau, and ahi is pronounced 'hai, as in lahiyō, a scribe, pronounced l'haiyō. Similarly, words like rahyō, he remained, kahyū, it was said, are pronounced r'hayō, k'hayū, etc.

In the Surat and Broach districts there are a few peculiarities of pronunciation. There is a tendency to double consonants, even at the beginning of a word. Thus, diṭṭhō for dīthō, seen; nōkkar for nōkar, a servant; amṃē for amē, we; nāllō for nālō (i.e. nānō), small; mmārō, my. As in nāllō, just quoted, there is a tendency to change n to l. This exists throughout Gujarat, but is specially strong in these two districts. In the same districts the letter y when it follows a consonant is pronounced before it, as if it were i. Thus, māryō, struck, is pronounced māirō. Even in standard Gujarātī such forms as āvvyō, lāvyō, are pronounced āivvyō, lāivvyō.

In Gujarātī we often meet cases of metathesis, i.e. of the interchange of consonants in the same word. Thus, ṭip^awũ or piṭ^awũ, to beat; so kharāvēs for kharōārēs, I will give to eat; dēt^awā for dēw^atā, fire. The two last come from Gogo in Kathiawar. In Ahmadabad and the Charōtar tract we meet jambūt, for majbūt, strong; mag, for gam, towards; and nuskān, for nuksān, injury.

The last remark leads us to the Gujarātī spoken by uneducated Musalmāns, who do not speak Hindōstānī. Their vocabulary is, naturally, full of Persian and Arabic words, and they have also many peculiarities of pronunciation which will be described in the proper place.¹ The principal is the incapability of distinguishing between cerebral and dental letters.

Very similarly the Gujarātī spoken by Pārsis often exhibits the change of cerebral letters to dentals.

Gujarātī differs from Hindōstānī in having a neuter gender. It is true that in Hindōstānī there is a neuter interrogative pronoun, and that in other dialects of Western Hindī sporadic instances occur of the survival of the old neuter gender, but, as a general rule, in all forms of Western Hindī, words which in Sanskrit and Prakrit were neuter have now become masculine. In Rājasthānī these instances cease to be sporadic, and become more and more frequent as we go westwards; till we find the neuter gender firmly established in Gujarat. In this respect Gujarātī agrees with Marāṭhī, which is a language of the Outer Circle. The neuter is often used to denote the common gender. Thus, chhōk^arō (masc.), a boy; chhōk^arī (fem.), a girl; chhōk^arũ (neut.), a child (male or female).

The suffix ḍō (masc.), ḍī fem., and ḍũ neut. added to nouns, is as common in Gujarātī as it is in Rājasthānī. It is a direct survival from Apabhraṃśa in which it also occurs. It is generally pleonastic in its signification, but sometimes (especially in the neuter) gives an idea of contempt. Examples of its use are kuk^aḍō, a cock; bīlāḍī, a cat; gad^ahēḍũ, an ass.

In the declension of nouns Gujarātī agrees with Western Hindī (except with the Hindōstānī dialect, which in this respect follows Pañjābī) and Rājasthānī in having the nominative singular of strong masculine a-bases ending in ō. Thus, ghōḍō, a horse. It follows the Outer Circle, however, in one of its most persistent characteristics, viz. in having the oblique form in ā, which is quite strange to Western Hindī. Thus, ghōḍānō, of a horse, but Western Hindī ghoḍē-kā. Another peculiarity of Gujarātī declension is the optional employment of the syllable ō to form the plural.

In the declension of pronouns Gujarātī has several peculiarities which have been already alluded to under the head of pronunciation. To this we may add the use of the word śū, to mean 'what?' The Hindōstānī kyā is also used, especially in the north where it appears under the form chīyā.

Gujarātī has one important peculiarity in its syntax which is also sometimes found in Rājasthānī, but which I have not noted elsewhere in India. It is in the use of the past tenses of transitive verbs. These are used either as passives, as in other Indian languages, or impersonally. In the former case, the participle which forms the tense agrees in gender and number with the object. Thus, tēnē rāj-dhānī karī, he founded a capital city, literally, by him a capital city was founded. In Hindōstānī (to take an example) there is also an impersonal passive construction, in which the object is put in the dative case, and the verb is put into the neuter or, as there is no neuter gender, into the masculine. Thus, us-nē rānī-kō chhōṛā, he released the queen, literally by him, with reference to the queen, it was released (or releasing was done). In Gujarātī, in such cases, the verb is not put into the neuter, but is attracted to agree in gender and number with the object. Thus, tēnē rānīnē mukī, he left the queen, literally, by him as for the queen, she was left. This idiom should be carefully noted, as it is very characteristic of the language. Here, again, we may note that the same idiom is found in the Marāṭhī of the Konkan.¹

Gujarātī has not a large literature, but it is larger than it has sometimes been credited with. Most of the books written before the introduction of printing were, as in the case of other Indo-Aryan Vernaculars, in verse. The earliest, and at the same time the most famous, poet whose works have come down to us in a connected form was Nar-siṅgh Mētā, who lived in the 15th century A.D. Before him there were writers on Sanskrit Grammar, Rhetoric, and the like, who employed an old form of Gujarātī for their explanations. One of these grammars, the Mugdhāvabōdha-mauktika, was written in 1294 A.D. and has been printed. Nar-siṅgh Mētā (or Mēhētā) himself does not appear to have written any long continuous work. His fame rests upon his short songs, many of which exhibit considerable elegance. He was a Nāgar Brāhman by caste, and was born at Junagarh in the year 1413 A.D.² His father was a worshipper of Śiva, but his mother was devoted to Viṣṇu, and at her knee he gathered the first elements of the doctrine which he subsequently preached so gracefully in his numerous songs. He died in the year 1479, in the sixty-sixth year of his age. Other poets followed him, amongst whom we may mention Prēmānand Bhaṭṭ (fl. 1681 A.D. Author of the Nar-siṅgh Mēhētānū Māmērū), Vallabh,

² For an account of Nar-siṅgh Mētā, see the Indian Antiquary, Vol. xxiv (1895), p. 74.

Kālidās, Pritam, Rēwaśaṅkar (translated the Mahābhārata), Muktānand, Sāmal Bhaṭṭ (author of Akōlā-Rāṇī, Barās Kastūrī, Murdā Pachīsī, Nand Batrīsī, Padmāwatī, Strī-charitra, Vikram-charitra), Brahmānand and Dayārām. All these are admittedly inferior to Nar-siṅgh Mētā in grace and feeling. Gujarat has not yet produced a great poet, approaching in excellence the mediæval Masters of Hindōstān. A more important side of Gujarātī literature is the corpus of bardic histories, none of which have, so far as I am aware, been published, but of which the contents have been utilized by Forbes in his well-known Rās Mālā.

The name 'Gujarat' has been known in Europe since the time of Marco Polo (1254—1324 A.D.), but the first mention that I find of the name 'Gujarātī' as applied to a language is in 1731. In November of that year the great Berlin librarian La Croze writes to his friend Theophilus Bayer a Latin letter in which he mentions the various languages of India, one of which is the 'Gutzeratica lingua.'¹ The next reference to the language which I have seen is a version of the Lord's Prayer in the 'Lingua Guzuratica,' with a transcription into the Roman character and an interlinear translation in Latin, taken from manuscript papers of the celebrated Danish missionary Schultze, and published by Johann Friedrich Fritz (1748 A.D.) in that remarkable compilation entitled the Orientalisch und Occidentalischer Sprachmeister. The version in the vernacular is in the ordinary Gujarātī character, and not in Dēva-nāgarī, as well as in Roman letters. A few lines of this version are here given as a specimen,—

Paramand	alo	tzé	amará	Pitá
Cælo	in	qui es	noster	Pater
Tumára	namā	púsa-karwáne
tuum	nomen	sanctificetur
Tumára	ratschia	áwé
tuum	regnum	veniat

tua	voluntas	cælo in	sicut	fit
			ita	terra in
				fiat.

Adelung (1806), in his *Mithridates*² gives a brief notice of the language under the name of 'Guzuratte' or 'Suratte' and reprints (with corrections) Schultze's version of the Lord's Prayer. He mentions a manuscript Gujarātī Dictionary by Franciscus Maria as existing in the library of the Propaganda at Rome, entitled Thesaurus Lingue Indianæ. Adelung's brief notice (about half a small octavo page) is nearly all the written information which was available to the Serampore Missionaries when they published (in 1820, after thirteen years' labour) their version of the New Testament in 'Gujuratee.'

Two alphabets are employed for writing Gujarātī. One is the ordinary Dēva-nāgarī. It is not much used now-a-days, except by special tribes, such as the Nāgar, Brāhmaṇs, but the first printed Gujarātī books were in that character. The other is known as the Gujarātī alphabet, and is the one in general use. It is based on the same original as Dēva-nāgarī, and closely resembles the ordinary Kaithī character employed all over Northern India. A Tirhutiya scribe finds little difficulty in reading a Gujarātī book. In ordinary mercantile correspondence it is usual to omit all vowels except when initial, which makes the reading of a banker's letter a task of some difficulty. It then corresponds to what is known as the Mahājani script in Upper India, and in Gujarat it is known as Vāṇiāi or Ṣarrāfi (from Vāṇiō, a shop-keeper, and Ṣarrāf, a banker), or Bōḍiā (from Bōḍi, clipped or shorn).

As the Gujarātī alphabet is treated exactly like Dēva-nāgarī it is unnecessary to give any lengthy explanation of its principles,—for which the reader is referred to the account of the latter character on pp. 7 and ff. of Vol. V, Pt. ii. It will suffice to give the forms of the letters.

These are as follows:—

VOWELS, ETC.

अ a, आ ā, इ i, ई ē, उ u, ऊ ū, ऋ ṛi, ए e, ऐ ai, ओ ō, औ au, or ° both anuswār and anunāsik. Although Gujarātī has both a short e and a long ē, no distinction is made in writing them. Nor is any distinction made between anuswār and anunāsik, both being represented by °.

CONSONANTS.

क ka,	ख kha,	ग ga,	घ gha,	ङ ṅa.
च cha,	छ chha,	ज ja,	झ jh,	ञ ña.
ट ta,	ठ tha,	ड da,	ढ dh,	ण na.
त ta,	थ tha,	द da,	ध dha,	न na.
प pa,	फ or प pha,	ब ba,	भ bha,	म ma.
य ya,	र ra,	ल la,	व wa or va.
श śa,	ष sha,	स sa,	ह ha,	ळ la.

It will be noted that Gujarātī has a cerebral ḷa.

The following examples show the employment of non-initial vowels:—

आ bā,	बि bi,	बी bē,	बु bu,	बू bū,	ब्रि bṛi.
ऐ be,	बै bai,	बो bō,	बाу bau,

The following are more or less irregular,—

र ru or rū, also र ru,	रू rū,
जā (hardly irregular),	जि ji,	जु ju,	जू jū,
दri,	सri, and	हri.

For some of these regular forms are also used. Thus, सri, रु ru.

The following are examples of compound consonants:—

क्ष ksha,	ज्झ jhha,	कन kna,	गवा gwa.
तता tta,	त्रा tra,	तवा twa,	पता pta.
स्ता sta,	द्वा dva,	द्या dya,
दधा ddha,	श्चा ścha,	श्वा śwa,
ङ (or, better, ङ) ढ्ढha (ṭṭha),	ह्या hya,	ध्या dhya.

It will be seen that these all closely follow Dēva-nāgarī, and numerous other compounds (which will be found in the grammars) are formed on the same principles. When ra is the first member of a compound, it takes the form ṛ. Thus, ṛtha. When it is not the first member of a compound, it takes the form -. Thus, ṛgrya, ṛbra.

A good deal of this has been already dealt with on pp. 329 and ff., and need not be repeated. We may add that ṛ is often written for i and u for ū. ṛi is often pronounced rū (German ü), but more commonly as the English ru in 'rule.' The letter ṛ is a pure labial, as explained under Rājasthānī (ante, p. 5.), and is not a denti-labial as in English. Before i, e, or y it is transliterated v, otherwise w. The letter ṣ is properly pronounced like the ss in 'session,' but in some dialects sounds like an ordinary dental s. The letter ṣ is pronounced gnya, not dnya as in Marāṭhī. In the Charōtar tract, ch, chh, j, and jh are sounded ts, tsh, dz, and dzh, respectively (see pp. 394 and ff. below).

As a general rule, the spelling of Gujarātī is capricious, but recently steps have been taken by the Educational Department, with a view to securing a nearer approach to uniformity in this respect.

After the foregoing explanations, it is hoped that the following brief sketch of Gujarātī Grammar will enable the reader to understand the specimens.

Grammar.

GUJARATĪ SKELETON GRAMMAR.

I.—NOUNS.—There are three genders, masculine, feminine, and neuter. There are two numbers, singular and plural.

Case.—Besides the nominative, there is a general oblique form, and an agent-locative. Thus:—

A.—Strong nouns.

	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
Sing. Nom.	chhōk'rō , a boy	chhōk'rī , a girl	chhōk'rū , a child.
Obl.	chhōk'rā	chhōk'rī	chhōk'rā .
• Ag.-Loc.	chhōk'rē , chhōk'rāē , by or in a boy	chhōk'rīē , by or in a girl	chhōk'rē , chhōk'rāē , by or in a child.
Plur. Nom.	chhōk'rā , chhōk'rāō , boys	chhōk'rīō , girls	chhōk'rāē , chhōk'rāō , children.
Obl.	chhōk'rā , chhōk'rāō	chhōk'rīō	chhōk'rāē , chhōk'rāō .
Ag.-Loc.	chhōk'rāē , chhōk'rāōē , by or in boys	chhōk'rīōē , by or in girls	chhōk'rāēē , chhōk'rāōē , by or in children.

B.—Other nouns. Bālak, a child (nom. and obl. sing.); bālakē, by or in a child; bālakō (nom. and obl. plur.); bālakōē, by or in children.

The usual case suffixes are, acc.-dat. nē; abl. thī; gen. nō; loc. (instead of ē above) mā. They are all added to the oblique form. Thus, chhōk'rānē, to a boy; chhōk'rā-thī, from a boy; chhōk'rānō, of a boy; chhōk'rē or chhōk'rā-mā, in a boy. Gharē, in a house, is nearly always written and pronounced gher.

The genitive nō is an adjective, and agrees in gender, number, and case with the noun which governs it. In poetry we often find tanō or kērō instead of nō.

Instead of the ablative thī, we sometimes, in the dialects, find thō, which is an adjective agreeing in gender, number, and case with the thing which is taken from the noun in the ablative.

The case of the agent is also used as an instrumental.

Note that nē, the sign of the acc.-dat. is the locative of the genitive nō. Nō and nē are not real postpositions. They are terminations and are added to the noun without hyphens. Thus, chhōk'rānō. On the other hand, thī and mā are postpositions and require hyphens. Thus, chhōk'rā-thī. This is a matter of history which is too long to explain here. (See p. 328.)

Adjectives.—A strong adjective (including genitives, and the thō-ablative) has its masculine in ō, its feminine in ī, and its neuter in ū. It agrees with its noun in gender, number, and case, except that it does not take the plural forms in ō. When a noun is in the oblique form, so is the adjective, and when it is in the agent-locative, so is the adjective. If, however, the noun in the agent case is the subject of a transitive verb, the adjective is put into the oblique form. Examples: sārō chhōk'rō, a good boy; sārā chhōk'rānē, to the good boy; sārī chhōk'rīō, good girls; sārū chhōk'rū, a good child; sārā chhōk'rānē, to good children; bījē dahādē, on the second day; ēnā (not ēnē) bhatrijē māgyū, his nephew asked. Adjectives other than strong do not change.

Comparison is formed as usual by the ablative. Thus, māthā-thī mōṭū, larger than the head; or, as in Mārwarī, with kar'tā, with the obl. gen.; thus, dar'wājānā kar'tā ūchū, higher than the door. Generally nā is omitted. Sahu-thī mōṭū or sahu kar'tā mōṭū, largest of all, largest.

Adjectives are quoted in the dictionaries in their neuter form where such exists.

II.—PRONOUNS.—The following is taken from Mr. Taylor's Grammar.

The first and second personal pronouns have each four bases employed in the declension of the singular and three in the plural, viz., first person, sing. hū, ma, mārā, and maj (or muj); plur. am, amārā, amō. Second person, sing. tū, ta, tārā, tuj; plur. tam, tamārā, tamō. We thus get the following declension:—

First Person.

	Singular.				Plural.
Base.	hū .	ma .	mārā .	maj .	am .	amārā .	amō .
Nom.	hū	...	...	...	amē , am	...	amō .
Acc.-Dat.	...	manē	mārē	maj'nē	am'nē	amārē	amōnē .
Ag.	...	mē	mārē	...	amē	amārē	amōē .
Abl.	hū-thī	...	mārā-thī	maj-thī	am-thī	amārā-thī	amō-thī .
Gen.	...	...	mārō	maj	...	amārō	...
Loc.	...	...	mārā-mā	maj-mā	am-mā	amārā-mā	amō-mā .

Second Person.

	Singular.				Plural.
Base.	tū .	ta .	tārā .	tuj .	tam .	tamārā .	tamō .
Nom.	tū	...	...	...	tamē , tam	...	tamō .
Acc.-Dat.	...	tanē	tārē	tuj'nē	tam'nē	tamārē	tamōnē .
Ag.	...	tē	tārē	...	tamē	tamārē	tamōē .
Abl.	tū-thī	...	tārā-thī	tuj-thī	tam-thī	tamārā-thī	tamō-thī .
Gen.	...	...	tārō	tuj	...	tamārō	...
Loc.	...	...	tārā-mā	tuj-mā	tam-mā	tamārā-mā	tamō-mā .

The genitives mārō, amārō, tārō, and tamārō are, as usual, adjectives. So are maj (muj) and tuj, but these do not change for gender, number, or case. The maj and tuj forms are mainly poetical. Am, tam, am-thī and tam-thī are rarely used. Amē and tamē, etc., and mārō, tārō, are pronounced with a slight h-sound. Thus, ahmē, tahmē, māhrō, tāhrō.

The pronoun of the first person plural, āp^{nē} is only used when 'we' includes the person addressed. It is thus declined, acc.-dat., āpa^{nē}; gen., āp^{nē}-thī; gen. āp^{nē} (poetical, āp^{nē}-dō); loc. āp^{nē}-mā.

The honorific pronoun of the second person is āp, your Honour. It is declined regularly, like a noun. Thus, abl. āp-thī; gen. āp^{nē}.

Demonstrative Pronouns. These are tē, he, she, it, that; ē, this; ā, this (near). Tē has sing. agent tēnē, gen. tēnō, obl. base tē, or (in abl. and loc.) tēnā; plur. nom. tēō, obl. tēō, tem, or (in abl. and loc.) tem^{nā}. In the agent tēnē, and in the acc.-dat. tēnēnē may be used in the fem. sing. About Surat, tēwan is used as a plural of respect. Pārsis often use tēwan for 'he' and tēnī for 'she,' both declined regularly. Ē and ā are declined exactly like tē. Other demonstrative pronouns are pēlō, that, and ōlō or ōlyō, that, both declined regularly.

Reflexive Pronouns. This is pōtē, self; agent, pōtē; gen. pōtānō; obl. base, pōtā. Plural same as singular. The genitive is not used, as in Hindi, to represent the first person, and rarely to represent the second person. But we have often phrases like hū pōtē chālyō, I went myself.

The Relative Pronoun is jē. Declined like tē.

The Interrogative Pronouns are,—(1) kōṇ, who? (sing. same as plur.) It has four forms of the oblique base, which are used as follows, kō (acc.-dat., abl., gen., loc.); kōnā (abl., loc.); kē (acc.-dat., gen.); kēnā (abl., loc.). Kē is pronounced with a slight h-sound. Thus, kēh. The agent is kōṇē or kēṇē. (2) śō, what? thus declined.

	Singular.			Plural.
	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
Nom.	śō	śē	śū	śā	śē	śū
Acc.-Dat.	wanting	wanting	wanting	wanting	wanting	wanting.
Agent	śē	wanting	śēnē (rare)	wanting	wanting	wanting.
Abl.	śā-thī	wanting	śā-thī	śā-thī	wanting	śā-thī .
Gen.	śānō	wanting	śānō	śānō	wanting	śānō .
Loc.	śā-mā	wanting	śā-mā	śā-mā	wanting	śā-mā .

The defective parts are supplied by kōṇ.

The Indefinite pronouns are kōi (m. and f.), anyone, some one, and kāi or kāī, anything, something. Both are declined like nouns, except that the plural is the same as the singular. Others are kōk, kōi-kō, some one; kūik, kūi-kō, something; har-kōi, any one; har-kāi, anything. Although kōi is masculine or feminine it generally governs a neuter verb.

Other Pronominal forms—

Pronouns.	ā , ē , this.	tē , that.	jē , who.	kōṇ , who?
Quality	āwō , ēwō , like this	tēwō , like that	jēwō , like which	kēwō , like what?
Size	āw^{nē}-dō , ēw^{nē}-dō , this size	tēw^{nē}-dō , so large	jēw^{nē}-dō , as large	kēw^{nē}-dō , how large?
Quantity	āṭ^{nē}-lō , ēṭ^{nē}-lō , this many or much.	tēṭ^{nē}-lō , that many or much	jēṭ^{nē}-lō , as many or much	kēṭ^{nē}-lō , how many or much?
Manner	ām , em , thus	tem , so	jem , as	kem , how? why?
Place	ahiyā , ahī , hyā , here	tyā , there	jyā , where	kyā , where?
Time	atyārē , now	tyārē , then	jyārē , when	kyārē , when?

The adjectives of quality have a slight unwritten h-sound in their first syllables. Thus, āhwō, tēhwō, jēhwo; similarly in tyāh, jyāh, tyāhrē, jyāhrē, kyāhrē, and in words like tēhwārē, then, etc. See the list on pp. 347 and ff.

III.—VERBS.

A.—Auxiliary Verbs and Verbs Substantive.

Present, I am.

Past, I was.

	Sing.	Plur.	Sing.			Plur.
			Masc.	Fem.	Neut.	Masc.	Fem.	Neut.
1	chhū	chhīē (vulgar chhāiyē).
2	chhe	chhō	hatō or	hatī	hatū	hatā	hatī	hatā .
3	chhe	chhe	hawō	havī	hawū	hawā	havī	hawā .

This tense does not change for person. The forms with w (v) are vulgar.

Present participle locative, chhatā, in or while being. Other forms are wanting.

Negative present nathī, used for all persons and both numbers. Past, nahatō, nahōtō, or nōhōtō.

B.—Finite Verb.

The usual principles of the central group are followed. In transitive verbs, the passive construction, with the subject in the agent can be employed with the past participle. Note, however, that when the impersonal passive construction is employed, the participle of the verb is put into the neuter, as we should expect, but agrees in gender with the object. Thus, tēṇē rāṇinē mūki (not mūkyū), by him, with reference to the queen, she (not 'it') was left, he left the queen.

Principal parts.

Infinitive, mār-wū, obl. mār-wā, to strike.

Present participle, mār-tō, striking.

Past „ māryō, mārō (obsolete), mārēlō (declinable), mārēl (indeclinable), struck.

Future „ mār-wānō (gen. of infin.), about to strike.

Conjunctive „ mārī, mārīnē, having struck.

Present Gerund, mār-tā, on striking.

Past „ māryā, on having struck.

Noun of Agency, mār-nārō (declinable), mār-nār (indeclinable), one who strikes or is about to strike.

(a) Simple tenses.

Present, 'I strike,' 'I may strike,' etc.			Future, 'I shall strike,' etc.				(b) Compound tense. Present Definite, 'I am striking.'

hū chālyō (or chālēlō), I went.

hū chālyō-chhū, I have gone.

hū chālyō-hatō, I had gone.

(jō) hū chālyō-hōū, (if) I may have gone.

(jō) hū chālyō-hōt, (if) I had gone.

hū chāl-wānō²-chhū, I am about to go.

hū chāl-wānō-hatō, I was about to go.

(jō) hū chāl-wānō-hōū, (if) I be about to go.

(jō) hū chāl-wānō-hōt, (if) I had been about to go.

Irregular verbs.

(1) Thawū, to become. Pres. sg. (1) thāū, (2, 3) thāy; pl. (1) thaiē, (2) thāō, (3) thāy. Future, (1) thaiē, (2) thāsē, and so on; conj. part. thainē. The stem is tha before i, ē, or a consonant. Otherwise it is thā. Note, however, thālō, past part., and thāy of pres. tense, 2nd and 3rd sing. and 3rd plur.

(2) Jawū, to go. Conjugated like thawū. Past part. also irregular. See below.

(3) Jōiē, it is necessary (defective impersonal); fut. jōisē; past subj. (jō) jōiat; pres. part. jōitō. Mārē ā chōp-qi jōiē, to me this book is necessary.

(4) Verbs like lēwū, to take, dēwū, to give, kēwū, kehēwū, or kahēwū, to say, rēwū, rehēwū, or rahēwū, to remain, form the 2nd and 3rd sing., and 3rd plur. pres., lē, dē, kehē or kahē, and rehē or rahē. So, conjunctive participle kahinē, lāinē, daīnē; fut. laiē, and so on.

(5) Verbs with roots in i, like pīwū, to drink, form the 1st plur. present like pīē.

(6) If the root ends in ō, it becomes u before the terminations -ē and -ō. Thus, jōwū, to see; juē, he sees; juō, you see. But jōēlō, because the -ē is not a complete termination. Hōwū, to be, and kahōwū, to be rotten, make hōy and kahōy, respectively, with the termination ē.

(7) If the root ends in s, it becomes ś before i or y in some dialects, but not in the Standard. Thus (dialectic), bes-wū, to sit; besinē, having sat: vas-wū, to dwell; past part. vaśyō.

(8) Irregular past participles.

Bes-wū , to sit,	past part.	beṭhō , beṭhēlō .
Dēkh-wū , to see,	„ „	dīṭhō , dīṭhēlō .
Nṅs-wū (nāḥs-wū), to flee,	„ „	nāṭhō , nāṭhēlō .
Pes-wū , to enter,	„ „	peṭhō , peṭhēlō .
ṛihēwū or, better, bīwū , to fear,	„ „	bīdhō or bīnō , bīdhēlō or bīnēlō .
ḷēwū , to give,	„ „	ḍīdhō , ḍīdhēlō .
Kar-wū , to do,	„ „	kīdhō or karyō , kīdhēlō or karēlō .
Khāwū , to eat,	„ „	kḥādhō , kḥādhēlō .
Lēwū , to take,	„ „	līdhō , līdhēlō .

¹ And so, throughout, the participle in ēlō may be substituted for that in yō.

² Or mār-nārō, chāl-nārō, and so throughout.

Piwũ , to drink,	past part.	pidhō, pīdhēlō .
Hōwũ , to be,	„ „	hatō, hōlēlō (regular).
Suwũ , to sleep,	„ „	sutō, sutēlō .
Mar*uwũ , to die,	„ „	muō, muēlō or marēlō .
Jawũ , to go,	„ „	gayō, gaēlō .
Kahōwũ , to be rotten,	„ „	kahōyō, kahēlō .
Kehēwũ , or kahewũ , to say,	„ „	kahyō, kahēlō .
Rehēwũ or rahēwũ , to remain,	„ „	rahyō, rahēlō .
Nipaj*uwũ , to be produced,	„ „	nipajyō or nipanyō .
Upaj*uwũ , to be produced,	„ „	upajyō or upanyō .

The past gerunds of these verbs are regular. Thus, tē khāyā (not khādhā) karē-chhe, he eats frequently. Gerunds formed after the analogy of the past participles are also found, but rarely.

In north Gujarat, passives whose roots end in ā, may optionally form the past participle by adding ṇō (ṇī, ṇũ) instead of yō (ī, yũ). Thus, bharāṇō (or bharāyō), was filled; marāṇō, was killed; chhapāṇō, was printed. So, also, dīṭhāṇō, for dēkhāyō, was seen.

Passive Voice. The passive voice can be formed from both transitive and intransitive verbs. The passive of an intransitive is always impersonal (cf. Latin luditur a me).

The passive stem is formed by adding ā to the root. Thus, *lakh*uwũ*, to write; lakhāwũ, to be written. If the root ends in a vowel, wā is added, not ā. Thus, jōwāwũ, to be seen. A preceding ā is shortened. Thus, *wāpar*uwũ*, to use, passive *wap*rawũ*; gāwũ, to sing, passive gawāwũ; *āw*uwũ*, to come, passive awāwũ; awāy, it is come. These passives have usually a potential sense; lakhāy, it can be written; dēkhāy, it can be seen, it is visible; awāy, it can be come.

Another passive is formed by conjugating the past participle with jawũ, to go, as in Western Hindī. Thus, tē māryō gayō, he was struck.

Another is formed with *āw*uwũ*, to come, and the locative of the infinitive. Thus, *ē wastu jōwā-mā āw*śē*, this thing will come into seeing, will be seen.

With all these passives the doer of the action is put in the ablative, not in the case of the agent. Thus, rājā-thī ē kām karāyũ, this work was done by the king.

Causal Verbs. These (including transitives from neuters) are usually formed by adding āw or āḍ to the root, a preceding ā being shortened.

Thus, lakh*uwũ , to write,	lakhāw*uwũ , to cause to write.
dēkh*uwũ , to see,	dēkhāḍ*uwũ , to cause to see.
sābhāḍ*uwũ , to hear,	sābhāḍ*uwũ , to cause to hear.

Sometimes the added syllable is aw. Thus, *chhōḍ*uwũ*, to release, *chhōḍaw*uwũ* or *chhōḍāw*uwũ*, to cause to release.

Irregular are—

bhāḍ*uwũ , to be mixed,	bhāḍaw*uwũ , to mix.
phar*uwũ , to be turned,	phāraw*uwũ , to turn.
maḷ*uwũ , to be met,	mēḷ*uwũ , to mingle.
pīwũ , to drink,	pāwũ , to give to drink.
mar*uwũ , to die,	mār*uwũ , to strike, kill.
ṭhar*uwũ , to be fixed,	ṭhāraw*uwũ , or ṭhāw*uwũ , to fix.

and others.

Double causals and passives can be formed from causals. Thus, *khaw*ḍaw*uwũ*, to cause to eat; *tapāw*uwũ*, to cause to be warm; apāwāwũ, to be caused to be warm.

Compound Verbs. These are as in other Indo-Aryan languages, viz.—

(1) From the shorter form of the conjunctive participle.

Intensives,—*mārī nākh*uwũ*, to strike down, kill.

Potentials,—*lakhī sak*uwũ*, to be able to write.

lakhī sakāwũ, to be able to be written.

Compleatives,—*lakhī chuḥ*uwũ*, to finish writing.

(2) From the past gerund.

Frequentatives,—bōlyā (or bōlyā) *kar*uwũ*, to speak frequently.

khāyā (or khāyā) *kar*uwũ*, to eat frequently.

jayā (or jayā) *kar*uwũ*, to go frequently.

(3) From the present participle, with jawũ, *āw*uwũ*, or rahēwũ.

Continuatives,—*bōl*ṭō rahēwũ*, to keep talking.

(4) From the infinitive,—

Obligatives,—*sipāhīnē bhūkhē mar*uwũ paḍ*śē*, to the sepoys dying by hunger will fall, the sepoys will have to die of hunger.

Permissives,—jawā (oblique) dēwũ, to allow to go.

Inceptives,—*kar*wā lāg*uwũ*, to begin to do.

IV. PARTICLES. The negative of the verb substantive has been already described. Mā is prohibitive. It follows the verb; bīhō mā, do not fear. Nā is used in answering questions like our 'no.' It and na are also used in prohibition, preceding the verb; na bīhō, do not fear. Nā in such cases may also follow. The usual general negatives are na (generally with the present) and nāhi.

Questions which do not contain an interrogative pronoun are generally indicated by sū, what? Thus, sū tamē jāō-chhō, are you going?

The emphatic suffix j is of frequent occurrence. Thus, tamē-j, you indeed; ēka-j, only one. It corresponds to the Marāṭhī -ch.

GUJARĀTĪ GRAMMAR.

APPENDIX III.

Words in which there is an unwritten h.

In a good many Gujarātī words, a slight sound of h is heard although that letter is not represented in writing. The presence of this h-sound is indicated in the Narmakōś and one or two other dictionaries that imitate it by a dot under the syllable in which it is pronounced. Thus કેહ, pronounced kēhwū, to say. The words in which this h-sound is heard vary according to locality and the speaker, but the following list includes most of those in which the standard dictionaries admit it. It will be observed that in many of these words the h is optionally written fully, thus, કેહ કેહ or કેહ, and that the h-sound is in most of them there by right of origin, as in બેહર, deaf, derived from the Sanskrit badhiraḥ, through the Prakrit bahirō, or as in બેહતર, better, from the Persian bihtar. In the list, I have indicated this slightly pronounced h-sound by h with a dot under it. In future pages, I shall not trouble to indicate it at all. The list will supply the necessary information in all cases of doubt.

adāḥr (for aḍḥār or arāḍḥ), eighteen.
an'saḥmaj, without understanding.
aḥmē, we.
aḥwālai, pertinacity.
aḥwāḍū or hawāḍū, the udder.
aḥwāḍō, aḥwēḍō, or hawāḍō, a water-trough.
āḥph, panting.
āḥph'ī'ū-kāph'ī'ū, confused.
āḥphī-jawū, to pant.

. OLD GUJARĀTĪ GRAMMAR.

APPENDIX IV.

In the year 1889, the late Mr. H. H. Dhruva published an edition of the Mugdhā-vabōdhamauktika, which he described as “a Grammar for Beginners of the Gujarati Language.” He cannot have given much study to the work, for a perusal of it will show that it is not a Gujarātī Grammar at all. It is a very elementary Sanskrit Grammar, with the explanations written in an old form of Gujarātī. The date of the work is A.D. 1394, and all that is known of the author is that he was the pupil of Dēva-sundara. His name is not given. As a Sanskrit Grammar the Mugdhāvabōdhamauktika is of very small value. It deals more with what we should call syntax than with the formation of words. But, as the explanations are written in the vernacular, these incidentally afford information as to what was the condition of the language of Gujarat between the time of the Prakrit Grammarian Hēma-chandra (fl. 1150 A.D.) and the time of Narsingh Mētā (fl. 1450 A.D.), with whom Gujarātī literature is commonly said to commence. The close connection of this Old Gujarātī with the Gaurjara Apabhramśa of the Prakrit Grammarians is remarkable; and, though the materials are very incomplete we are entitled to say that for the first time we have before us an unbroken chain of development between a Prakrit dialect and a modern Indian vernacular.

PHONETICS.

The original is carelessly printed. Great laxity is shown in the use of anuswāra, which is omitted ad libitum. When printed, it usually represents anunāsika. Possibly it sometimes represents anuswāra. As one cannot distinguish between the two uses of this sign, I have contented myself with uniformly transliterating it by ~. Forms like tā̃, jā̃, should perhaps be written tām, jām, respectively. I have silently corrected the numerous misprints in the use of anuswāra.

The letters e and o are no doubt often short, as in Apabhramśa. As the original makes no distinction in the quantity of these vowels, I have perforce left them unmarked.

In Marāṭhī a single Prakrit ṇ remains cerebralized in the modern vernacular, but a double cerebral ṇṇ becomes dentalized to n, thus following the example of Jaina Māhārāṣṭrī. The same rule obtains in Old Gujarātī. Thus, Apabhramśa jāṇai, Old Guj. jāṇai, he knows; but Ap. pañña, Old Guj. pāna, a leaf; Ap. aṇṇai, Old Guj. anai, and.

The rule, of course, does not apply to tatsamas like dāna, a gift.

As in Apabhramśa, a conjunct r is optionally retained (Hc., iv, 398). Thus, Chaitra or Chaitta, N.P.; prāmai, he obtains.

As in Prakrit, the diphthongs ai and au occur only as compounds of a and i, and a and u, respectively. They are not the Sanskrit diphthongs, and are usually written as separate letters, thus, aī, aū. I have followed Professor Jacobi's example in omitting the diæresis as a useless complication.

NOUNS.

WEAK NOUN IN a.

Base, dāna (neut., Sanskrit loan-word), a gift; Chaitta (maśc.), N.P., Chaitra.

Obl. base	dāṇaho, dāṇa	dāna	dān.

Plural.

I have met only one clear instance of the nominative plural. It is the same as the oblique base—mora in mora nāchāi, peacocks dance. In Ap. it would be the same. In Mod. Guj., it would be mōr(-ō). Cf., however, je līṅga vibhakti vachana hui, te śatr pratyaya paraī āṇī, the terminations of gender, case and number, are added to the suffix śatr.

Examples of the various cases—

Nominative.—(a) chandra ūgai, the moon rises; dāna dījai, a gift is given; śishya pūchhai, the disciple asks; dharmakaraṇahāra jīva sukha prāmai, an individual who acts virtuously obtains bliss; loka dekhai, the person sees.

(b) Chaittu loka-siū vāta karai, Chaitra converses with a person; Maittu nāchai, Maitra dances; anyādika-nau yogu hui, the sense of 'other' or the like is indicated; pumliṅga prathamā eka-vachanu hui, it is the third person masculine singular. Neut. dharmū sukha-nai kārani hui, virtue is for (i.e. leads to) happiness; chaitta-taṇau dhanū gāmi chhai, Chaitra's wealth is in the village.

¹ References here and elsewhere are to Hēma-chandra's Grammar. In iv. 425 Hēma-chandra gives taṇēṇa, but we are authorised to substitute taṇē for this by 343.

Accusative.—(a) vītarāga vāñchhita dii, the ascetic grants a boon; vāta karai, converses (see above); tapa karai, he performs austerities; guru-taṇaũ vachana haũ sābhalaũ, I listen to the word of the preceptor; artha pūchhai, he asks the meaning; hala khedatau, driving the plough (cf. below); bīja vāvai, he sows seed; sukha prāmai, he obtains happiness; śishya haũ sābhalaũ, I hear the disciple; śāstra paṭhatau, reading the scriptures.

(b) Chaittu kaṭu karai, Chaitra makes a straw mat; saṁsāru tarai, he passes over existence; guri arthu kahatai, while the preceptor is telling the meaning; kisũ khedatau, halu, what is he driving? the plough (cf. above).

Instrumental.—(a) jīva dharmī saṁsāru tarai, by virtue a living being crosses (the ocean of) existence (see below); kīṇai kījatau, sūtradhārī, by whom is it being made? by the architect (see below); śishyī paṭhītaũ haũ sābhalaũ, I listen to what is being read by the disciple; e grantha sukhī paṭhāyai, this book can be read with pleasure; śrāvakī deva pūjiu, the god is worshipped by the votary; gopālī gāe dohīte, while the cows are being milked by Gopāla; chaitī gātai maittu nāchai, while (a song) is being sung by Chaitra, Maitra dances.

(b) kisī tarai, dharmī, by what does one cross? by virtue; sūtradhārī kījatau prasāda, loka dekhai, a person looks on while the palace is being built by the architect.

Dative.—sukha-naĩ, for bliss; jeha vastu-naĩ parityāga sūchī, for what thing abandonment is indicated. Instead of naĩ, the word kāraṇi (the locative of kāraṇa), preceded by nai (the termination of the genitive put into the locative neuter to agree with kāraṇi), is commonly used. Thus, vivekiu moksha-nai kāraṇi khapai, the man of discrimination strives after salvation; dharmū sukha-nai kāraṇi hui, virtue is for (leads to) happiness. After a verb of giving the genitive termination rahaĩ is used to indicate the dative. Thus, jeha-rahaĩ dāṇa dījai, to whom a gift is given.

In the following instance the dative is used for the accusative:—i-kāra-naĩ bolivai, in saying the letter i.

Ablative.—oriksha-tau pāna paḍai, the leaf falls from the tree. No examples are available of the other suffixes.

Genitive.—Examples of taṇau and of nau will be given under the head of adjectives. The suffixes rahaĩ and rahĩ occur frequently in the grammatical rules, as in eha-rahāĩ, of this; a-varṇa-rahĩ, (in the place) of a vowel of the a-set. No examples are available of kīhĩ.

Locative.—sampradāni, in the dative; chaitta-taṇaũ dhanũ gāmi chhai, Chaitra's wealth is in the village; chaittu gāmi vasai, Ch. lives in the village; śabda-nai chhehi, at the end of a word; meghi varasatai mora nāchai, while the cloud rains (loc. absolute) the peacocks dance.

In connection with the above, it may be pointed out that the suffix naĩ of the dative is really the instrumental masculine or neuter of the genitive termination nau, which, as we shall see, is capable of being declined in all its cases.

Loc.	tārai	tārai	tārē.

Plural.

In Old Gujarātī, the nom. plural masc. appears to end in ā and the neuter in ā. Cf. Apabhraṁśa tāraa and sonṇaāĩ. The distinction between masc. and neut. is, however, very doubtful, and possibly both terminations are used indifferently. The plural oblique base is the same as the nominative. In Modern Gujarātī the forms for both the Nom. and the Obl. base are tārā-(ō) and sonā-(ō), the addition of ō being optional in each case. The only examples which I can give of the plural are mūlagā kartā kriyā suchīyāĩ, the original subject and action are indicated, (here apparently kartā and kriyā agree with an adjective in the neuter plural, unless the termination is also used for the masculine); ātmanepada-taṇā nava vachanā, the nine persons of the ātmanepada; ketalā, how many (apparently masc.), and similar forms.

The following are examples of the use of some of the cases of the singular :—

Nominative.—kriyā karivai ju mūligau hui, su kartā, the originator in doing an action is the subject; tārau ūgiu, the star rose; ihā sonaũ suhūgaũ vīkai, gold is sold cheap here; ātmanepada-naĩ pahilaũ ekū-ja vachana hui, the first (i.e., what we should call the third) person of the ātmanepada is only in the singular (ja=Śaurasēnī jjeva); jeha-rahaĩ kriyā hetupaṇaũ na huĩ, the actions of which do not become causality.

Accusative.—sūtradhārĩ kījataũ deharaũ loka dekhai, a person looks at a temple being built by the architect.

Instrumental.—karĩ lei deĩ ityādi bolivaĩ, by saying ‘having done,’ ‘having taken,’ ‘having given,’ etcetera.

Locative.—ju karai lī dii paḍhai hui ityādi bolivai, in saying the person who does, takes, gives, reads, becomes, etcetera; kriyā karivai ju mūligau hui, su kartā (see Nom.).

Oblique base.—varga-taṇā pahilā akshara parai, after the first letter of a varga.

No examples of the employment of the other cases are available.

OTHER NOUNS. •

Only sporadic examples of other nouns occur in the grammar. They are the following :—

Nominative singular.—vivekiu moksha-nai kāraṇi khapai, a man of discrimination, strives for final beatitude; karasaṇi hola kheḍatau bīja vāvai, the cultivator, while driving his plough, sows seed; guri arthu kāhatai pramādīu ūghai, while the preceptor is telling the meaning, Pramādī (or the lazy one) is drowsy.

Accusative singular.—sūtradhārī kījatī vāvī loka dekhai, a person looks at a well being built by the architect.

Dative singular.—jeha vastu-naī parityāga sūchīi, for what thing abandonment is indicated.

Genitive singular.—guru-taṇaū vachana, the word of the preceptor.

Genitive plural.—e bihui-nai yogi, in the sense of these two.

Locative singular.—guri, loc. of guru, see Nom. sing. above.

Locative plural.—gopālī gāe (gen. sg. gāi-nau) dohīte chaittu aviu, Chaitra came while the cows were being milked by Gopāla (loc. plur. absolute).

Oblique singular.—kartā (nom. the same) āgali, before the subject.

ADJECTIVES.

The feminine of strong nouns or adjectives in au (neut. aū) ends in i. Thus, puvvilau, first; puvvilī kriyā, the first verb. So kījatau (masc.), kījatī (fem.), kījataū (neut.), being done (pres. part. pass.). Adjectives are declined like substantives. Thus, sonaū suhūgaū (nom. neut.), cheap gold; varga-taṇā trījā (nom. masc. trījau) akshara-rahī padānti, (in the place) of the third letter of a set at the end of a word (here the adjective in the oblique form agrees with a genitive); liṅga chhehilā (oblique form) śabda-taṇaū hui, the gender (of a dvandva compound) is that of the last word; gāe dohīte, while the cows are being milked (loc. plur. absolute).

The genitive in taṇau or nau is treated exactly like an adjective, and is declined throughout all cases and numbers in agreement with the noun which it qualifies. When, however, the case of the principal noun is formed by adding a suffix to the oblique form, the suffix is not repeated after the genitive, which thus only appears in the oblique form. When a genitive agrees with a noun in the instrumental or locative, it is itself put into the same case. Examples are—

Nom. sing. masc.—eha-taṇau or eha-nau, of this; anyādika-nau yogu, the sense of ‘other,’ and the like; je kartā-nau athavā karma-nau ādhāra hui, te adhikarāṇa, those things which are the receptacle of the subject or of the object are the adhikarāṇa; teha trījā akshara parāi hakāra-rahī trījā-nau sagau chauthau hui, after these (above-mentioned) third letters (of the vargas) the fourth letter (of the varga) is added (sagata) to the third one (in the place) of the letter ha.

Nom. sing. fem.—kartā-nī apekshā hui, there is a reference to subject.

Nom. sing. neut.—chaitta-taṇaū dhanū, the wealth of Chaitra; kaṇṇa-taṇaū dhanū, whose wealth? guru-taṇaū vachana, the word of the preceptor; āpaṇā karma-naū viśeṣaṇa, a qualifier of its own object; bhāva-nū (sic.) viśeṣaṇu (sic.), a qualifier of impersonality, an impersonal verbal adjective.

Loc. sing.—teha-nai yogi, in the sense of that; jeha-nai kārāṇi, for whose sake; vivekiu moksha-nai kārāṇi khapai, a man of discrimination strives for final beatitude; dharmu sukha-nai kārāṇi hui, virtue is for happiness; ktwā-nai karmi dvitīyā, in the object of (a word ending in) the suffix ktwā there is the accusative case; śabda-nai chhehi, at the end of a word; karasaṇi-nai viśeṣaṇi, in the adjective qualifying the word karasaṇi.

Obl. form sing.—pratyaya-nā kartā āgali, before the subject of a suffix (here kartā is in the oblique form, which is the same as the nominative, being governed by āgali); varga-taṇā trījā akshara-rahī, (in the place) of the third letter of a varga; varga-taṇā pahilā akshara parai, after the first letter of a varga.

Nom. plur.—ātmanepada-taṇā nava vachana, the nine persons of the ātmanepada.

PRONOUNS.

The information regarding the personal pronouns is not complete. The pronoun of the first person is haū, I. So Ap.; Mod. Guj. hū. No instance of the pronoun of the second person occurs. It was probably tuhū, as in Apabhramśa. In Mod. Guj. it is tū. No other cases of either of these pronouns occur.

Instead of the genitive we have possessive pronouns, which are adjectives. These are māharau (Ap. māharau, Mod. Guj. māhrō), my; amhārau, (Ap. amhārau, Mod. Guj. aḥmārō), our; tāharau (Ap. tuhārau, Mod. Guj. tāhrō), thy; tamhārau (Ap. tumhārau, Mod. Guj. taḥmārō), your.

'He,' 'that' is su, neut. tā. No instance of the feminine has been noted. The corresponding forms in Ap. are su (m.), sa (f.), taṁ (n.). In Mod. Guj. we have tē (com. gen.). The nom. plural is te (? com. gen.). In Ap. it is te (m.), tāo (f.), tāi (n.). Mod. Guj. has tē (-ō) (com. gen.). Examples of these pronouns are—

Guru-taṇaū vachana haū sābhalaū, I listen to the word of the preceptor.

Ju tarai su kartā, he who crosses (the ocean of existence) is the subject (of the sentence); so ju dekhai su kartā; jā kijai tā karma, that which is done is the object (of the sentence); śishya śāstra paḍhī artha pūchhai; ju pūchhai su kartā, tihā prathamā; kisū pūchhai, artha; jā pūchhai, tā karma, tihā dvitīyā, the disciple having read the holy book asks the meaning; he who asks is the subject and therefore in the nominative case. What is asked? the meaning. That which is asked is the object and therefore in the accusative case; je liṅga vibhakti vachana huī, te śatr pratyaya parai āṇī, the signs of gender, case, and number are put after the suffix śatr.

'This' is e, which is both masc. and neut. sing. and plur. In Ap. the forms are eho (m.), eha (f.), ehu (n.), sing.; ei (com. gen.), plur. In Mod. Guj. it is ē for all genders and both numbers. There is a substantival oblique form, eha, for both sing. and plur. Examples are—

E grantha sukhiṇ pathāyai, this book can be read with pleasure; e bihui-nai yogi, in the sense of these two; eha-nau, of this; eha-rahāi, of this. From this oblique form we may assume that the oblique form of su is teha.

The relative pronoun is ju, neut. jā. The feminine has not been noted. The corresponding Ap. forms are ju, ja, jam, Mod. Guj. jē (com. gen.). There is also an instrumental jīnaī or jīnā (this latter may possibly be an accusative), both used as substantives. The nom. plur. is je, with a neuter substantive jihāñ. The substantival oblique form, both singular and plural, is jeha. Examples are—

Ju tarai ; jā pūchhai ; as given above under su ; jīñā karī karai līi dii ityādi yuktiñ jīhāñ kahāñ, anai jīñā karī kartā kriyā sādhai, tā karaṇa, the instrument is those things which are said (i.e. indicated) by the expression ‘having done (by) what, he does, takes, or gives,’ and ‘having done (by) what, the subject accomplishes an action’ ; jīñāñ mūlagāñ kartā kriyā suchīyāñ, by which the original subject and action are indicated. The dative sing. is jeha-nañ or jeha-nai kārāñi ; the abl. jeha-tau, -hūtau, -thau, -thakau ; jeha-siñ ityādi bolivai sādhai yogi tritīyā hui, in saying ‘with whom’ and the like, in the sense of ‘with’ and the like, the third case is used. The genitive is jeha-nau or jeha-rahāñ, with a loc. of gen. jeha-nai, and an obl. gen. jeha-nā. For the nom. plur. we have je līga vibhakti vachana huñ as given under su.

The interrogative pronoun for masc. and fem. is kaṇa or kuṇa. Its instrumental singular is kīñāñ or kañāñ, its abl. kaṇa-tau, its gen. kīha-taṇau, and its obl. base kaṇa or kīñā. Compare Ap. kavaṇu, fem. kavaṇa, and Mod. Guj. kōṇ, obl. kōṇā. Examples are—

Kaṇa tarai, who passes over ? chandra ūgai ; kuṇa ūgai, chandra, the moon rises. Who rises ? The moon ; kīñāñ kījatau, by whom is (the palace) being made ? gāe kañāñ dohītīe, while the cows are being milked by whom ? vṛiksha-tau pāna paḍai ; kaṇa-tau paḍai, the leaf falls from the tree. From what does it fall ? kīñā-siñ, with whom ?

The neuter interrogative pronoun is kisāñ, kisū, or kisiu ; instr. kisiñ ; dat. kisā-nai kārāñi or kaṇa-nai kārāñi ; abl. kaṇa-tau ; gen. kaṇa-taṇau ; loc. kisai ; loc. plur. fem. (see examples below) kisīe. The forms with kaṇa refer to nouns having grammatically a masculine gender. Compare Ap. kiñ, instr. kīñā, abl. kīsa, gen. kissā. Mod. Guj. has śū. Examples of this pronoun are—

Kisū pūchhai, what does he ask ? kisū kheḍatau, halu, what does he drive ? the plough ; kisāñ dekhai, prasāda, what is he looking at ? the palace ; guri arthu kahatai, kisiu kahatai, while the preceptor is telling the meaning. What is he telling ? kisiñ tarai, dharmāñ, by what does he cross ? by virtue ; kaṇa-nai kārāñi, moksha-nañ, for the sake of what ? for beatitude ; kisā-nai kārāñi dharmu hui, sukha-nañ, for what (i.e. tending to what) is virtue ? for happiness ; kaṇa-tau paḍai, vṛiksha-tau, from what does it fall ? from the tree ; kisai hūtai, gāitai, while what is going on ? while singing is going on (loc. abs.) ; gopālīñ gāe dohītīe chaittu aviu ; kisai hūtai, gāe ; gāe kisīe, dohītīe, while the cows were being milked by Gopāla, Chaitra came ; while what were being dealt with ? cows ; while what was being done to the cows (lit. while the cows were what, loc. plur. fem. abs.) ? while they were being milked.

The reflexive pronoun occurs only in the genitive. Thus, āpañi (fem. of -pañ) kriyā, its own action ; āpañā karma-nau, of its own object. Ap. has appaṇau. Mod. Guj. has āpañō, but it is used in the meaning of ‘our’ including the person addressed.

The only instance of an indefinite pronoun which I have noted is amukau, a certain person.

VERBS.

Conjugation is very superficially dealt with in the Mugdhāvabōdhamauktika. No attempt is made to explain the formations of the various tenses. Only the personal terminations are given in Sanskrit, and that without any translation into the writer’s vernacular. Participles and the like are treated more fully. From what is given we can gather the following concerning Old Gujarātī.

Present tense.—The only instance of the first person singular is sābhalaũ, I hear. The only other persons which occur are the third persons singular and plural. The termination of the third person singular is ai, or, after a vowel, i. That of the third person plural is aĩ, or, after a vowel, ĩ. There are several examples of the third singular. Thus—

(a) Consonantal roots.

āvai , he comes.	dekhai , he sees.
ūghai , she is drowsy.	nāchai , he dances.
ūgai , (the moon) rises.	paḍai , it falls.
karai , he does.	paḍhai , he reads.
khapai , he strives.	pūchhai , he asks.
chhai , it is.	prāmai , he obtains.
jānai , he knows.	vasai , he dwells.
tarai , he passes over.	vāvai , he sows.

sakai, he can.

(b) Vocalic roots.

hui , he becomes.	lii , he takes.
dii , he gives.

The following are examples of the third person plural: nāchaĩ, they dance; huĩ, they become.

The following table compares the forms of Old Guj. with Ap. and Mod. Guj. :—

APABHRAṂŚĀ.	OLD GUJARĀTĪ.	MODERN GUJARĀTĪ.	ENGLISH.
nachchaũ.	nāchaũ.	nāchũ.	I dance.
nachchai.	nāchai.	nāchē.	he dances.
nachchahĩ.	nāchahĩ.	nāchē.	they dance.

Future tense.—No example of the future occurs. We should expect a form such as nāchisaũ, corresponding to the Mod. Guj. nāchīs and the Ap. nachchissaũ. The noun of agency in -aṇahāra can be used as an immediate future, as in haũ kāli amukaũ karaṇahāra, I shall do such and such a thing to-morrow.

Past tense.—This is formed as in all modern Indo-Aryan vernaculars from the past participle passive. All three constructions, the active, the personal passive, and the impersonal passive are used. Thus, chaittu aviu, Chaitra is come; śrāvakiĩ deva pūjiu, the god was worshipped by the votary, i.e., the votary worshipped the god; śrāvakiĩ deva pūjiũ, by the votary, with reference to the god, worship was done, i.e. the votary worshipped the god. In the impersonal construction the verb is not attracted to the gender of the object as is the case in modern Gujarātī.

Past conditional.—This is formed with the present participle, as in jai haũ paḍhata tau ubhalaũ hũta, if I had read I should have (?) understood. So also in Jaina Prakrit.

The passive voice is formed by adding iy to consonantal roots, and ij to vocalic ones. With the terminations ai and aĩ of the third person, iyai can become ii, and iyaiĩ ēĩ.

The Ap. termination of the passive is ijja, or in Śaurasēnī Ap. za. This form of the passive is not used in modern standard Gujarātī. Examples are—

(a) Consonantal roots.

uchcharīyai , it is pronounced.	bolīyai , it is said.
kahīyai , it is said.	sūchīyai , it is indicated.
kahīi , it is said.	sūchīi , it is indicated.
tarīi , it is passed over.	ānīi , they are brought.
paṭhīi (not paḍhīi), it is read.	sūchīyaī , they are indicated.

(b) Vocalic roots.

dījai , it is given.	lījai , it is taken.
kījai , it is done.

Note that the root kar, do, is treated irregularly as if it were vocalic (Pr. kījai), as, indeed, it is in Sanskrit.

A potential passive is formed by adding ā or āy to the root. So also in Mod. Guj. Examples are—

	vikāi , it can be sold.
kahāi , they can be said.

Present Participle.—This is formed by adding atu (weak form) or atau (strong form). I have only noted the weak form in the neuter (cf. the genitive termination nū on p. 351). Thus, masc. karatau, fem. karatī, neut. karatū or karataū, doing. So in the passive, kījatau, -tī, -tū, being done. These are declined like adjectives and locatives absolute are common. Examples are—

(a) Active.

karatau , doing.	paṭhatau , reading.
kahatau , saying. Loc. abs.	letau , taking.
kahatai .	varasatau , raining. Loc. abs. varasatai .
ghaṭatau , happening.

(b) Passive.

kījatau , being done.	paṭhītau , being read.
gāītau , being sung. Loc. abs.	lījatau , being taken.
gāītai .
dohītau , being milked. Loc.
plur. fem. abs. dohītīe .

Examples of the use of these participles are—

Meghi varasatai mora nāchaī, while the cloud rains the peacocks dance; guri arthu kahatai pramādīu ūghai, while the preceptor is telling the meaning, Pramādi is drowsy; gopālīi gāe dohītīe chaīttu avīu, while the cows were being milked by Gopāla, Chaitra came; śishya śāstra paṭhatau haū sābhalaū, I listen to the disciple reading the holy book; śishyīi śāstra paṭhītau haū sābhalaū, I listen to the holy book being read by the disciple; chaīttīi gāītai maīttu nāchai, Maitra dances while it is being sung (impersonal) by Chaitra, i.e. while Chaitra sings.

Past Participle passive.—This usually ends in īu, as in Ap. The examples found are avīu, come; giu, went; pūjīū (neut.), worshipped; ūthīu, risen; jāgiu, awakened.

The Sanskrit supta(ka) becomes, through the Ap. suttau, sūtau. No examples occur of those past participles which are usually irregular in Mod. Guj. In the last-named language the participle usually ends in yō, as in uthyō, risen.

The conjunctive participle ends in ī as in Mod. Guj., corresponding to the Ap. -i or -iu. Examples are karī, having done; leī, having taken; deī, having given; paḍhī, having read. The verbs 'to know' and 'to be able' are construed with this participle, as in karī jānai, he knows how to do; leī sakai, he can take. So, the Ap. iu is by origin an infinitive.

Verbal noun.—This ends in ivaũ after consonantal and vaũ after vocalic roots. Thus, karivaũ, the act of doing; levaũ, the act of taking. The oblique forms, such as karivā, levā, are used as infinitives of purpose in sentences such as "the potter brings earth to make a pot" (in the original the example is only given in Sanskrit). The locative and instrumental are also very common.

The noun of agency is formed by adding aṇahāra to consonantal and ṇahāra to vocalic roots. Thus, karaṇahāra, a doer; leṇahāra, a taker. The Mod. Guj. forms would be karanār, lēnār.

POSTPOSITIONS.

The following postpositions have been noted. They all govern nouns in the oblique form—

siũ , with.	āgali , before.
māhi , in.	pāchhali , behind.
	parai or pari , after.

It will be seen that the last four are nouns in the locative.

એક માણસને બે દીકરા હતા. અને તેઓમાંના નાનાએ આપને કહ્યું કે, આપ, સંપત્તિ પહોંચતો ભાગ મને આપ, ને તેણે તેઓને પુંજ વહેંચી આપી. અને થોડા દહાડા પછી નાનો દીકરો સઘળું એકદું કેરીને વેગળા દેશમાં ગયો, ને ત્યાં રંગ ભોગે પોતાની સંપત્તિ ઉડાવી નાખી. અને તેણે બધું ખર્ચી નાખ્યું, ત્યાર પછી તે દેશમાં મોટા દુકાળ પડ્યો, ને તેને તંગી પડવા લાગી. અને તે જઈને તે દેશના વતનીઓમાંના એકને ત્યાં રહ્યો, ને તેણે પોતાના ખેતરમાં ભુંડોને ચારવા સાર તેને મોકલ્યો. અને જે શિંગો ભુંડો ખાતા હતાં તેમાંથી પોતાનું પેટ ભરવાને તેની ઈચ્છા હતી, ને કોઈએ તેને આપ્યું નહીં. અને તે સાવચીત થયો ત્યારે તેણે કહ્યું કે, મારાં આપના કેટલા મજૂરોને પુષ્કળ ચોરલા છે, પણ હું તો જૂએ વિનાશ પામું છું. હું ઉડીને મારા આપની પાસે જઈશ ને તેને કહીશ કે, આપ, મેં આકાશ સામા તથા તારી આગળ પાપ કીધું છે. અને હવે તારો દીકરો કહેવાવા હું ચોગ્ય નથી, મને તારા મજૂરોમાંના એકના જેવો ગણુ. અને તે ઉડીને પોતાના આપની પાસે ગયો, ને તે હજી ઘણો વેગળો હતો ત્યારે તેના આપે તેને દીઠો, ને તેને કસણુ આવી, ને તે દોડીને તેની કોટે વળગ્યો, ને તેને ચુંબન કીધું. અને દીકરાએ તેને કહ્યું કે, આપ, મેં આકાશ સામા તથા તારી આગળ પાપ કીધું છે, ને હવે તારો દીકરો કહેવાવા હું ચોગ્ય નથી. પણ આપે પોતાના દાસને કહ્યું કે, ઉત્તમ વસ્ત્ર લઈ આવો, ને એને પહેરાવો, ને એને હાથે વીટી ધાલો, ને પગમાં જોડા પહેરાવો. અને પાંજેલા વાછરડાને લાવીને કાપો, ને આપણે ખાઈને આનંદ કરીએ. કેમકે આ મારો દીકરો મુઓ હતો. ને પાછો જીવતો થયો છે, ને ખોવાએલો હતો, ને જડ્યો છે; ને તેઓ આનંદ કરવા લાગ્યા.

અને તેનો વડો દીકરો ખેતરમાં હતો, ને તે આવતાં ઘરની પાસે પહોંચ્યો, ત્યારે તેણે રાગ તથા નાચ સાંભળ્યા, અને તેણે ચાકરોમાંના એકને બોલાવીને પુછ્યું કે, આ શું છે? ને તેણે તેને કહ્યું કે, તારો ભાઈ આવ્યો છે, ને તારા આપે પાંજેલા વાછરડાને કપાવ્યો, કેમકે તે તેને સહીસલામત પાછો મળ્યો છે. પણ તે શુરસે થયો, ને માંહે આવવાની તેની ખુશી ન હોતી. માટે તેના આપે બહાર આવીને તેને સમજાવ્યો. પણ તેણે ઉત્તર આપતાં આપને કહ્યું કે, જો, આટલાં વરસ હું તારી ચાકરી ફરું છું, ને તારી આમા મેં કદી ઉલ્લંઘી નથી, તો પણ મારા મિત્રોની સાથે ખુશી કરવાને, તે મને બોકડિયું પણ કદી ન હોતું આપ્યું. પણ આ તારો દીકરો જેણે કસબેણીની સાથે તારી સંપત્તિ ખાઈ નાખી, તેના આવતાંજ તે તેને સાર પાંજેલા વાછરડાને કપાવ્યો. અને તેણે કહ્યું કે, દીકરા, તું મારી સાથે નિત્ય છે, ને માફ સઘળું તારું છે. આપણે તો ખુશી થવું તથા હર્ષ કરવો જોઈતો હતો કેમકે આ તારો ભાઈ મુઓ હતો, ને પાછો જીવતો થયો છે, ને ખોવાએલો હતો, ને જડ્યો છે.

TRANSLATION.

Recite, O Parrot, may Sītā, the chaste (wife) of King Rāma, teach you.
 Beside you having built a cage, may she cause you to mutter the name of Rām with your mouth.
 Parrot, for you I cause green bamboos to be cut ;
 Of them, O parrot, I am getting a cage made ; I am causing it to be studded with diamonds and jewels.
 Parrot, for you what kinds of food shall I cause to be cooked ?
 Having made sugared powder of wheat, I shall pour (ghā) over (it) ;
 Your wing is yellow ; and your foot is white ; on your neck is a ring of black.
 Worship the lord of Nar-Sāi (Nar-Singh), trolling a pleasant song.

As another specimen of standard Gujarātī, I give a folktale which comes from Ahmedabad.

NOTES.—This story is in the colloquial Gujarātī of educated women. It is recorded in the language of an elderly lady of the Nāgar Brāhmaṇ caste.

¹ The verb hatō is put out of its usual place at the end of the sentence for the sake of rhythm.

² The word tō is a common expletive used after numerals.

⁵ Wajē is a colloquial form of vijaya.

⁶ Rō, dō, and lō are diminutive suffixes frequently used to express affection,—the dear brothers, the dear sisters-in-law, and so elsewhere.

⁷ Kō’tō is a colloquial contraction of kahō, tō.

⁸ Kīdhū, done, is quite commonly employed in the sense of kahyū, said.

⁹ The neuter plural is used to agree with even a feminine singular noun to indicate respect. There are several other instances in the story.

¹⁰ Sap¹⁰nā. Here the plural is used instead of the singular to indicate respect.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There was a king. He had as many as seven sons. These seven brothers had but one younger sister named Virbāi. It was the month of Āśvin, the bright fortnight, and the day of the Vijaya-daśamī. The young wives of the seven brothers went through the initiatory ceremonies of the vow of the day. The sister says, 'dear Sisters, I would also do it, if you let me.' The sisters-in-law replied, 'you are not able to go through it.' The sister said, 'I will go through it, whether I have the ability or not.' As for Virbāi, she went through the initiatory ceremonies, and laid herself down. In spite of insurmountable difficulties she finished it up to its closing ceremonies. As days went by, the goddess, Mother Gaurī, was pleased with her, and Virbāi was blessed with great happiness. Her sisters-in-law and others looked on in disappointment and resolved to starve themselves to death before the mother goddess. The mother goddess appeared before them in a dream, and said, 'you cannot secure your object in this way. Think of the circumstances under which Virbāi performed her vow. Do as she did. In place of a flower, you gave me a gold flower; in place of water you gave me milk. You gave me the most delicious dishes in place of ordinary dishes. You put Virbāi to immense trouble. As for Virbāi, oppressed with difficulties, she gave me water in place of flowers, she gave me water in place of food—and thus whatever she did, she did with all her heart. I considered the water given by Virbāi as of greater value than even the nectar given by you. As for gold, we smear our ground with it, and we scrub our pots with nectar. It is devotion that we hunger for. Those who do as Virbāi did will get what Virbāi has got. You will get as you will do.'

The next specimen is a folksong from the district of Broach. It deals with the arrest and trial of the Gaikawār of Baroda, Malhār-rāo, for the attempted poisoning of Colonel Phayre.

THE SONG¹ OF MALHĀR-RĀO.

Refrain.—Malhār-rāo, the protector of the earth, became a captive. Suddenly did he become a captive.

- (1) On Thursday, the seventh of the bright half of Pōs in the Samvat year 1931, behold the troops suddenly arrested him.
- (2) Sitting in a beautiful chariot he came to visit the Resident, and they captured him in a single moment, nor could he obtain leave to go home.
- (3) In the camp he was made a captive, and his house and property were attached. Sin leaves no one unpunished, Who therefore would do a sinful act?
- (4) The English made proclamation, and the people trembled and shivered. They all felt excessive grief in their doubt as to what would now become of the king.
- (5) His two queens, Sunā-bāi and Kamā-bāi, weep and pray to God to end their lives.
- (6) Brāhmanas came from near and far, and sat and made incantations. They meditate on the God of the universe, as if the king would be set free to-morrow.
- (7) Says Malhār-rāo, ‘for what fault have I been made captive?’ with hands folded in supplication he implores them to unfold the mystery.
- (8) Says Sir Lewis Pelly, ‘O king, you have committed a bad act. You mixed poison in sharbat and gave it to the Colonel to drink.’
- (9) ‘Colonel Phayre was the Resident on behalf of Her Majesty, and you had no hesitation in killing him.’
- (10) Malhār-rāo was astonished, and spoke humble words, ‘Nothing know I of this. My mind is on fire.’
- (11) Says Sir Lewis Pelly, ‘pure justice will be done. Be not anxious. Keep patient, my friend.’
- (12) This interesting song was composed in Broach. Unexpectedly they carried Malhār-rāo off, and now, behold, the protector of the earth is in Madras.

¹ A gar^abō is a kind of song sung by women, while dancing in a circle.

NĀGARĪ GUJARĀTĪ.

The Nāgar Brāhmaṇs have always formed an important part of the Gujarat community. The literary form of the Apabhraṃśa from which Gujarātī is descended, was in olden times known as the Nāgara Apabhraṃśa, and some scholars maintain that the Dēva-nāgarī character owes its name to its being the form of writing used by this caste. At the present day they employ the Dēva-nāgarī and not the Gujarātī character, as will be seen from the specimen annexed.

They are said to have a dialect of their own, called Nāgarī Gujarātī, but their language is ordinary Gujarātī, with a slightly greater use of Sanskrit words than is met with in the Gujarātī of other castes.

As a specimen I give a short extract from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son received from the Collector of Customs, Bombay.

BOMBAY GUJARĀTĪ.

Bombay is a very polyglot city, but its main language is Marāṭhī. It contains a large number of Gujarātī settlers, whose language has adopted several Marāṭhī expressions. I give a short extract from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, written (as received) in the Dēva-nāgarī character, which will show that Bombay Gujarātī differs very slightly from the standard form of the language. To the Musalmān influence we owe the use of words like rahīs for the Arabic-Hindōstānī raīs, a headman, a respectable person, a citizen.

As expressions which are due to the influence of Marāṭhī, we may quote the use of śōp'wũ, instead of āp'wũ, to give; bār gām (cf. Marāṭhī bāhēr gāvē), to a distant village; wāpar'wũ, to squander; and garaj lāgī, want began to be felt. Some of these are, it is true, also used in standard Gujarātī or in Hindōstānī, but their selection here is no doubt due to the influence of Marāṭhī.

GĀMADIĀ.

The Gāmadiā, or Grāmya, Gujarātī is a general name for the dialect spoken by the uneducated village people of Gujarat generally. It varies little from place to place, and reappears under various names. As a standard form of it, I take Sur'tī, the dialect spoken by the village people of Surat and Broach.

The most noted characteristics of Gāmadiā Gujarātī, are the tendency to drop the letter h, and on the other hand to pronounce s as h, and chh as s; the tendency to pronounce a y when it follows another consonant in standard Gujarātī, before the consonant; and a weak sense of the distinction between dental and cerebral letters. These will all be noted in the examples given in the following pages.

SURATĪ GUJARĀTĪ.

The educated classes of the districts of Surat and Broach speak ordinary Gujarātī, but in the rural parts of these districts a curious patois is spoken, which the Bombay people call Suratī, or the language of Surat.

In pronunciation, Surātī continually pronounces the letter s as h, as we find in the Bhil languages and in Southern Rājasthānī. S is often written, but even then it is pronounced h. Examples are dah, for das, ten; māṇah, for māṇas, a man; hārō for sārō, good; hũ, for śũ, what? hōḍē, for sōḍē, near.

On the other hand a true original initial or medial h is often elided, or, when written, is not pronounced. Thus, hũ or ũ, pronounced ũ, I; utō for hutō, a dialectic form of hatō, was; kaũ for kahũ, I say.

The letter chh is pronounced s. Thus, chha, six, is pronounced sa, and chhũ, I am, is pronounced sũ.

Cerebral and dental letters are absolutely interchangeable. There are numerous examples in the specimen. Thus, thōḍā or ṭhōḍā, few; ēk^athũ or ēk^aṭhũ, in one place; dīdhũ, ḍīdhũ, or ḍīḍhũ, given; taṅgī or ṭaṅgī, want; tem or ṭem, that much; ḍiṭṭhō or dīṭhō, seen; tamārō or ṭamārō, your; tũ or ṭũ, thou; tēḍinē or ṭēḍinē, having called; ḍāh^adō for dahāḍō, a day. Cerebral ṇ and ḷ are rare. Thus we have kāran, not kāraṇ, a cause; galē, not gaḷē, on the neck.

The letter n is often changed to l. Thus, nāllō for nānō, younger; lākh^awũ, for nākh^awũ, to throw.

Medial consonants, and sometimes even initial ones, are often doubled. Thus, nāllō, younger; ḍiṭṭhō, seen; nōkkar or nōkar, a servant; ammē, we; mmārō, my.

The letter jh is pronounced as z. Thus, jhāḍ, pronounced zāḍ, a tree.

When the letter y follows a consonant, it is pronounced before it, and is then sometimes written y and sometimes i. As most past participles end in y preceded by a consonant, this forms a very striking characteristic of the dialect. Numerous examples will be found in the specimens. The following are only a few,—māy^arō or māirō, for māryō, struck; pāy^adō or pāidō for pādyō, caused to fall, made; chāy^alō or chāilō, for chālyō, went; may^alō or maīlō, for malyō, met; pōy^arō, for pōriyō or pōryō, a son.

It may be noted that exactly the same peculiarity is noticeable in the Nāgpurī sub-dialect of the Bhojpurī dialect of Bihārī.

Nouns ending in a consonant optionally add ā in the oblique form. Thus, bāp^anē or bāpānē, to a father; bāpō or bāpāō, fathers.

The following are the first two personal pronouns:—

	I.		Thou.
	Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
Nom. . . .	ũ	hamē, ammē, aminō	tũ	ṭamē, tammē, tammō.
Agent . . .	mē	hamē, ammē, aminō	tē	ṭamē, tammē, tammō.
Gen. . . .	mārō, mmārō	hamārō, ammārō	tārō	ṭamārō, tammārō.

Other forms are as in the standard dialect. As explained above, the t of the second person can optionally be cerebralised.

Besides the usual standard forms, hē is also used to mean 'that.'

The following are the forms of the verb substantive :—

Present.

	Sing.	Plur.
1 . . .	chhawũ, chhũ, chhe, chha	chhaiyē, chhīē.
2 . . .	chhe, chha	chhō, chhe, chha.
3 . . .	chhe, chha	chhē, chha.

It will be noticed that chhe or chha can be used for any form except the first person plural.

It should be remembered that the chh is pronounced like s, so that the words are really sawũ, sũ, se, etc. In all the specimens the chh is written throughout, and I have not altered the spelling.

The past is hutō or utō, both being pronounced utō. When employed as an auxiliary verb tō is often used instead of utō.

As regards finite verbs, the present definite is either conjugated as in the standard, or chh is added to all persons of the simple present. Thus, I strike.

	Sing.	Plur.
1 . . .	mārũ-chh	mārīē-chh.
2 . . .	mārē-chh	mārō-chh.
3 . . .	mārē-chh	mārē-chh.

As explained above, the auxiliary employed for the imperfect is usually tō. Thus, ũ mār^atō-tō, I was beating.

The formation of the past participle has been explained under the head of pronunciation.

The future is sometimes written as in the standard dialect,—thus, mārīs, I will strike; but the ś is pronounced as h, so that the true form of the future is—

	Sing.	Plur.
1 . . .	mārīh	mār^ahũ.
2 . . .	mār^ahē	mār^ahō.
3 . . .	mār^ahē	mār^ahē.

Sometimes the future ends in ā or wānō. Thus, ũ u^ahā, I will arise; ũ jawā, I will go; ũ kēwānō, I will say.

The following specimen of Sur^{ti} is provided by the Collector of Customs, Bombay. It is printed, as received, in the Dēva-nāgarī character.

ANĀWĀLĀ OR BHĀṬHĒLĀ.

This is the dialect spoken by Bhāṭhēlā or Anāwālā Brāhman̄s of Surat, Jalalpur, Chikhli, Balsar, and the Navsari division of the Baroda State. Natives recognize it as a distinct dialect, but it does not differ from the Surātī ~~just described, except that its~~ speakers, being cultivators, have borrowed a few words from their neighbours, the Bhīl Dhōḍiās and Naikās. It is quite unnecessary to give any specimen of it. I may mention that in some of the specimens of this dialect which have reached me from Surat, words containing the letter chh are phonetically spelt with s, thus illustrating the pronunciation of chh, to which attention was drawn when dealing with Surātī. Thus, the word for 'six' is written 'sa,' not 'chha,' and the present tense of the verb substantive is written

	Sing.	Plur.
1	se	•sīē
2	se	se
3	se	se

This, of course, is only a more phonetic way of writing, and does not constitute a new dialect.

GUJARĀTĪ OF EASTERN BROACH.

In the east of Broach, the language of the semi-civilized Bhil tribes is Gujarātī, much mixed with the Bhil dialects of the adjoining state of Rajpipla.

I give a short specimen of this mixed dialect.

We may note the occasional change of s to h as in Har^hbhāṇ for Sarbhāṇ, and of chh to s as in pāsā for pāchhā, afterwards. L sometimes becomes n as in nōk for lōk, people.

In the declension of nouns there are some irregularities.

The case of the agent ends in hā, as in nōk^hhā for lōkē, by the people. The dative plural ends in hān, as in Talāvyāhān, to Talāvyas.

The Genitive masculine ends in nā, and sometimes even in ā. Thus, Har^hbhāṇⁿnā or Har^hbhāṇā, of Sarbhān.

The sign of the locative is mī, as in Angrējī-mī, in English territory.

The following pronominal forms may be noted, amī, we; am^hhā or ām^hhā, by us; amāhān, to us; amā, our (oblique); tamī, you; tīyē, by him; tīyā, his (oblique).

In Verbs, note way-nī, it does not become; vīyō, it became; atā, they were; kayō, it was done.

The suffix n is commonly added to past tenses. Thus, rahyān, we lived; am^hhā rūpiā māgyān, we asked for money; amāhān rūpiā nī āpyān, money was not given to us.

The Future is as in Bhil dialects, e.g. āpūhū, we shall give.

The Present Participle is used as an imperfect, with or without an auxiliary verb, and in conditional sentences. Thus, katⁿnā, we were doing; majūrī jātī rī, wages were going away; rāt, (if) you remain. Note the additional suffix in katⁿnā (for kar^ttō), as in Rānī Bhil. Rī, of course, is for rahī, and rāt for rahat.

Examples of the Conjunctive Participle are kaī, having done; chhōḍī-n, having left. Such forms are common in most Bhil dialects. In jāitⁿnē, going, and nētⁿnē-n, taking off, there is a very old suffix tanē, instead of the modern form nē, added to the participle in i: nē is itself derived from the ancient tanē.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

We are inhabitants of Sarbhan. We served as watchmen of Sarbhan for about 15 or 20 years, but we were not paid for 5 years. When we asked for the rupees the people told us that they would pay us the next year. Thereupon we continued to serve as watchmen. But the next year, too, we were not paid. We again asked for the rupees, whereupon the village people dismissed us and engaged Talāvyas as watchmen. Then, as we could get no labour or work, we went to Gopalpur, a village in the Dabhoi Taluka, in the Gaikwar territory, to cultivate the land. We got crops for one year and scanty crops the next year. The third year, as no rain fell, we went to the zamindar of the village who told us that he could not provide us with grain till the following year, and that therefore if we went to the British territory and (there managed to maintain ourselves) and remained alive we might return the following year.

PĀRSĪ GUJARĀTĪ.

The Gujarātī spoken by Pārsīs varies from the standard form of the language in some respects like the Gāmāḍiā dialects, and has also some peculiarities of its own.

In its vocabulary it borrows much more freely from Arabic and Persian than does standard Gujarātī.

In pronunciation it as a rule prefers r to ḍ, the dental l to the cerebral ḷ, and the dental n to the cerebral ṇ. Thus, pariyō, not paḍyō, he fell; āgal, not āgaḷ, before; tēnē, for teṇē, by him; paṇ, for paṇṇ, even. As in the Gāmāḍiā dialects, it shows a tendency to drop the letter h. Thus, ũ, I. The h is, however, often written, although not pronounced. On the other hand, none of the specimens received show any trace of the change of s to h or of chh to s. The distinction between cerebral and dental letters is preserved, but n is liable to be changed to l or ll. Sometimes we find dentals preferred to cerebrals, as in ḍukkar for ḍukkar, swine. Initial ē is pronounced yē, as in yēk for ēk, one.

The declension of nouns is as in standard Gujarātī, except that we often hear mē instead of mā in the locative case. In the Pronouns, we have ũ, I, plural hamē. Amē and amō are also used. For the third personal pronoun we often meet tēwan, he, feminine tēnī, she. The word for 'what?' is sũ, not sũ or hũ.

The Definite Present of finite verbs is often formed by adding ch. Thus :—

I am striking.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	mārũ-ch	mārīē-ch
2	mārē-ch	mārō-ch
3	mārē-ch	mārē-ch

The ś of the Future becomes s and is not changed to h. Thus, mār^sē, he will beat. The first person singular is māras, not mārīś. Similarly, the first person plural is mār^sũ, not mārīśũ.

The past participle sometimes inserts i before the y, and sometimes drops the y altogether. Thus, māryō, māriyō, or mārō, struck. So in the tenses derived from this participle.

The masculine plural of the participles takes a nasal, as if it were neuter. Thus, amō jatā hatā, for amē jatā hatā, we were going. The past subjunctive takes the suffix ē. Thus (a woman is speaking), agar-jō manē khabar hatē, tō kadī-bī hũ tyā sutē nahī for jō manē khabar hōt, tō kadī paṇ hũ tyā sutī nahōt; if I had known, I should never have slept there.

The past participle of jawũ, to go, is gīyō.

As a specimen of Pārsī Gujarātī, a short extract from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son will be sufficient.

Note that, as also occurs in the various dialects of Hindōstānī, the Agent case is sometimes used for the subject of an intransitive verb in the past tense. Thus, nhāllā chhōk^arāē gīyō, the younger son went.

(especially in the case of neuter nouns), we have words like gharā, houses; tshēt'rā fields. śi is a postposition of the instrumental, as in khusi-śi, joyfully.

Pronouns.—The following are the first two personal pronouns:—

	I.		Thou.
	Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
Nominative	hū, ũ	amē, amhē	tū, tū	tamē, tamē
Agent	mē, mē	amē, amhē	tē, tē	tamē
Genitive	mārō	amārō, ahmārō	tārō, tārō	tamārō

Other forms are as in the standard dialect. The list of words also gives amānō, of us; but other authorities doubt the existence of this form.

The demonstrative pronouns, and the pronoun of the third person are as in the standard dialect, but we have also a form with an initial h. Thus, hē, he; hēnō or hanō, his; hēnē, by him; hanā-kanē-thi, from near him; hēnē or hanē, to him; hē-mō-nō, of in them.

Kasū is 'anything.'

Conjugation.—In the conjugation of the verb, the principal irregularity to be noted is that the second person singular ends (like the first person) in ū as well as in ē.

The verb substantive is thus conjugated. It will be seen that it closely follows the Sur'ti forms.

	Sing.	Plur.
	tshū	tshē
2	tshū, tshē	tshō, sō
3	tshē, tsha, se	tshē, tsha, se

The past tense is either hatō, as in the standard, or utō, as in Sur'ti. When used as an auxiliary we also find tō. Thus, khōwāyō-tō, he was lost.

The verb thawū, to become, makes its past tense thayō or thyō.

As regards the finite verb, attention must be called to the frequent optional dropping of a final nasal.

The following is the definite present of mār'wū or mār'wu, to strike:—

	Sing.	Plur.
1	mārū-tshu, -tshū	mārē-tshē
2	mārū-tshu, -tshū, -tshē	mārō-tshō, mārō-sō
3	mārē-tshē, mārē-tsh, mārē-se	mārē-tshē, -tsh, -se

The imperfect is mār'tō-utō or mār'tō-tō.

In none of the specimens have I met any instance of the ś of the future becoming h. The following is the conjugation of this tense.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	mārēś, māriś	mārīsū
2	mārēś, māriś	mārśō
3	mārśē	mārśē

Note how the i of the first and second persons singular is changed to ē, and how it is also optionally shortened to i. So we have jaīś, I will go.

The past participle is much as in the standard dialect. Note, however, āyō for āvyō, he came; and ḍzyō, gyō, or gayō, he went.

The conjunctive participle is irregular in verbs whose roots end in long ā. Thus, khāinē, having eaten, for khāinē.

At the end of a question, we find the word kanē, 'is it not?' Thus, ē badhu tāru-ḍz, tshe-kanē, that all is thine or is it not thine, i.e. it is certainly thine. The word is almost certainly a worn-down form of kānahi, or not.

THE THIEVES AND THE CHICK.

Some thieves entering a house with a design to rob it, when they had entered, found nothing worth taking but a cock, so they took and carried him off. But as they were about to kill him, he begged hard for his life, putting them in mind how useful he was to mankind by crowing and calling them up betimes to their work.

'You villain,' replied they, 'it is for that very reason we will wring your head off; for you alarm and keep people waking, so that owing to you we cannot rob in peace.'

PĀṬĪDĀRĪ.

The language of the rest of the Kaira District closely resembles that of the Charōtar tract. The Kuṇbis form the most important cultivating class of the district, and its principal members, the hereditary village shareholders, are known as pāṭidārs. Hence the language of the cultivators of Kaira, excluding that of the Charōtar tract, is locally known as Pāṭidārī. As Charōtarī has been very fully discussed, I shall here content myself with noting only the main peculiarities of Pāṭidārī, more especially referring to those points in which it differs from Charōtarī.

Pronunciation.—We have noted how in Charōtarī the letter ā is sometimes pronounced with a broad tone, something like that of the o in the French word ‘mon.’ This is carried further in Pāṭidārī, in which words that in the standard dialect are written with a long ā, are here written with a long ō. Examples are mō, for mā, in; wōṇiyō, for wāṇiyō, a merchant; mēdō, for mādō, sick; nōnō, for nānō, younger; pōhē, for pāsē, near; gōm’dū, for gām’dū, a village; hōmō, for sāmō, opposite.

The letter k is liable to be changed to ch, especially under the influence of a neighbouring e, i, or y, as in dich^arō, for dik^arō, a son; chidhū, for kidhū, it was done. Before a y, the letter g becomes j, as in mājya for māgya, ask.

So far as I can judge from the specimens ch, chh, j, and jh are not pronounced ts, tsh, dz, or dzh, as is the case in Charōtarī. Ch appears generally to preserve its proper sound, but sometimes it is represented by s, as in wasan, for wachan, a promise; wāsā, for wāchā, speech. Chh is regularly changed to s, as in sōk^arō, for chhōk^arō, a son; pasē, for pachhē, afterwards. So entirely convertible are these two letters, chh and s, that chh is once actually written for s, when that is the proper letter. The instance is chhū, written instead of sū, for śū, what?

As in Charōtarī, the letter kh follows the analogy of k. While k becomes ch as shown above, kh becomes chh. Thus, rāchh^awū, for rāk^hwū, to keep; dēchhīnē, for dēkhīnē, having seen. In the word sētar, for khētar, a field, kh has first become chh and that, in its turn, has become s.

The letter s regularly becomes h. Thus, hāt, for sāt, seven; hō, for sō, a hundred; vīh, for vīs, twenty; hāp, for sāp, a snake.

An h is itself often elided, as in āthī, for hāthī, an elephant.

In dealing with the village dialect of Surat, we noticed that the distinction between dental and cerebral letters was hardly observed. The same is the case, but not to the same extent, in Pāṭidārī. Here the pronoun of the second person is written with a cerebral t. Thus, tū, thou. Similarly, we have tō, then, for the standard tō.

The letters q, r, l, and ḷ, are interchangeable. Thus, we have āgar, for āgaḷ, before; kalyō, for karyō, done; ghaḍ, for ghar, a house; and mārō, mālō, or māḍō, my.

The vowel scale is not very definitely fixed. We have i changed to a in wachār, for vichār, consideration; and u changed to a, in kal for kul, a family, and hakhī, for sukhī, happy.

Nouns.—The declension of nouns does not call for any remark. In one instance if the translation is correct, the postposition nē seems to form the agent case. The sentence is Bhag^awān-nē kar^awū, which is translated, 'by God it was done,' but the translation seems to me to be very doubtful.

Pronouns.—Mē or mē is 'by me.' As already said, 'my' is mārō, mālō, or mādō. Mārē seems to be used as the agent case in the phrase mārē dēwō nathē, by me he is not to be given, i.e., I cannot give him.

The following forms of the pronoun of the second person occur in the specimen,—tū, thou; tē, by thee; tādē, to thee. Note the cerebralisation of the t.

Sū, written chhū, is 'what?' Chīyā gōm^anō is 'of what village?' With chīyā we may compare the Sindhī chhā, what? We may also remember that, as shown above, ch sometimes may represent a k, so that the original form was kiyā. Compare Hindōs-tānī, kyā, what.

Verbs.—The conjugation of verbs closely follows that of Charōtārī, and calls for no remarks. The verb substantive is se, he is, the chh being regularly changed to s. The past tense is tō, was. An irregular past participle of a finite verb is kalyō, done. If correctly translated, kar^awū, in Bhag^awān-nē kar^awū, also means 'done.'

As a specimen of Pāṭidārī, I give a folktale received from Kaira.

A STORY TOLD BY A DHĀRĀLĀ.¹

Once upon a time there was a merchant who had four sons. It chanced that he fell ill, and he thought to himself, 'I am going to die, and my sons will quarrel among themselves and come to grief.' So while he had yet strength, he sent for them, and gave two hundred rupees to each of the three elder ones, and five hundred rupees to the youngest one. By the mercy of God he recovered, and became well enough to sit in his shop and do his business. Then the youngest son made up his mind to go on a journey of a hundred miles. So he started off, and on a field met a Banjārā, or travelling grain merchant, with a dog. The boy asked him what he would take for the dog, and offered to give him whatever he should ask. The Banjārā asked for a hundred rupees, to which the boy agreed, and took the dog. Then he went on to a village, and saw a parrot in the house of a Dharālā, which he also bought. Then he went on and bought a cat. Then he met a fowler who was sending off his daughter to her husband's house. The fowler was saying, 'I gave her a cock with a red beak, and a black dog, and yet there she is, sobbing and crying.' Then the boy went on and met a snake-charmer. From him he bought all his paraphernalia,—his costume, his gourd, his music-pipe, and all,—for a hundred rupees. He tried the pipe, and found that he could play it all right. Then he went on again, and, as he walked, it struck him that he might go and visit his elder brothers. So he went to his elder brothers and pulled out a snake. When they saw it they ran away, and said to him,—'what is this that you have done? You have disgraced your family. Go away, you father-in-law Dhēḍ.¹' So then he went to his father, and said 'hullo, dad,' and then his father recognized him. Said his father, 'you're not my son. Be off with you, wherever you like. But don't come into my house. If ever you do that, I'll cut your head off.' So he went off and sat down by a tank in the fields. As he sat there, a snake put its head out of a hole in the ground and looked at him. One of the snakes in his basket asked him to take it out, 'for,' said it, 'that snake that has put its head out of the hole is my uncle.' So he let it out, after it had promised to come back again. Then its uncles and aunts all asked it to stay with them. Said it, 'nunkey dear, let me go this once, and I'll come back again.' (For it was a snake-god, and could speak.) Then it returned to its master and said, 'when my uncle comes to you, you must say that you can't let me go, and then you must ask him for a snake-stone.²' So the uncle came, and offered to give him anything he asked for if he would only let his nephew go. So the boy said, 'give me a snake-stone, and I'll let your nephew go home with you.' So the uncle gave him a snake-stone. Then the boy went up on a hill and sat there. He wished for a golden palace, and troops of horses. Straightway there appeared on the spot a palace, and troops of horses, surrounded on all sides by forts and battlements. Next morning when people got up they rubbed their eyes and looked at the hill. 'Why,' said they, 'this was open land, and what's this? How did this golden palace get there? What king is it that has come and settled there?' Then all the merchants of the place got their daughters ready to marry them to this wonderful stranger, but what chance had merchants? A real king came and married his daughter to him, and gave him royal drums, and elephants, and tom-toms. So they ate and drank, and lived happy ever afterwards.

² In Indian folklore, snakes have magic powers, and, like the English toad, each bears a precious jewel, the snake-stone, in its head. The snake-stone grants its possessor his every wish. ♣

VADĀDARI.

From Bombay City a dialect of Gujarātī has been returned under the above name, as the dialect spoken in the Baroda division of the Baroda State. This state consists of four divisions, viz., Amreli, in Kathiawar; Kadi, north of Ahmedabad, in which Paṭṭanī Gujarātī is spoken; Baroda proper, on the east bank of the Mahī; and Navsari, to the east of Surat. Most of the people in Navsari speak Bhīl languages which are described elsewhere.¹ The 79,544 persons returned as speaking Gujarātī in this division, speak either standard Gujarātī, if they are educated, or Anāw'lā similar to that of Surat, if they are not.

In Baroda proper, 728,136 people are returned as speaking Gujarātī. As usual those who are educated speak the standard dialect. The rest speak Vadādarī. Vadādarī does not differ from the other dialects of north Gujarat, of which we may take the village dialect (the so-called Pāṭīdarī) of Kaira as a standard. It is unnecessary to publish any specimen of it. It will be sufficient to quote the following words from a version of the Parable received from this locality.

The vowel ā often becomes ō, as in mō, in; kōn, the ear; for mā and kān, respectively.

Ā is shortened before i, as in bhaī, a brother; khaīnē, having eaten. K often becomes ch under the influence of a neighbouring e or i (chēṭālā, for kēṭālā, how many; chēwadāwōwū, for kēwadāwōwū, to be called); and kh similarly becomes chh (chhētar for khētar, a field; bhuchhē for bhukhē, by hunger).

Medial consonants are doubled as in Sur'tī; thus, pōttānō, own; badhdhū for badhū, all.

S often becomes h, as in hābhālī, for sābhālī, having heard; hamājāwū, for samājāwū, to conciliate. Ṣ, however, seems to be preserved, and is sounded as an English sh, as in dēs, a country; hōś, I shall be.

Chh is always pronounced as s.

In the pronouns, the locative of the genitive is used for a dative. Thus, mārē, to me.

The second person singular of verbs is the same in form as the first person. Thus, mārū-chhū, I am or thou art striking.

The above remarks may also be taken as applying to the Gujarātī spoken by cultivators of the Panch Mahals district who do not speak Bhīlī.

¹ See Vol. IX, Part III., pp. 198 and ff.

These remarks do not apply to the dialect of the north-east of the district round Parantij, or to that of the detached Taluka of Gogo on the Gulf of Cambay. These will all be considered separately. The educated people of Ahmedabad speak standard Gujarātī.

PAṬṬANĪ GUJARĀTĪ.

The city of Paṭṭan or Pāṭan, the capital of the ancient state of Anahilavāḍa, is situated in the Kadi division of the Baroda State, which lies north of the Ahmedabad district. The form of Gujarātī spoken by the villagers of this tract and of the neighbourhood is called Paṭṭanī. This Paṭṭanī dialect is spoken in the Kadi division of Barodā, in Mahikantha including the outlying Parantij-cum-Modasa sub-division of the Ahmedabad district and in the greater part of the state of Palanpur. In the north of Palanpur it merges into Mārwarī through an intermediate dialect which has been dealt with under the head of Rājasthānī.¹ On the east it has the various Bhīl dialects of Māhikantha,² and on the south it has the village dialect of Ahmedabad, with which it is closely connected. On its west it is bounded by the Great and Little Ranns of Cutch. Over the whole of this area the educated people speak ordinary standard Gujarātī.

Paṭṭanī possesses all the peculiarities of the village dialect of Ahmedabad, its only real difference being that it possesses these peculiarities in a higher degree, and exhibits them more regularly.

Pronunciation.—As usual in northern Gujarātī, the ā in the word bhāī, a brother, is shortened, and we have bhai. The vowel a is changed to ī in dīyā for dayā, compassion.

As usual, ā is often pronounced as a broad ō, and is written, in the Gujarātī character ઔ. Thus, ઔઠા chōḍō, for chādō, the moon. This broad o-sound I represent in transliteration by ō. Other examples are nōnō for nānō, small; mōḍwū for māḍwū, to place. So firmly established is this custom that we sometimes even find words which have an ō in them by right of origin, written with an ā, i.e., the writer has attempted to spell according to the rules of standard Gujarātī, and has blundered in doing so. Thus, in the first specimen mōj, joy, is written māj. Following the principle of the change of ā to ō, in the word paṭyōl, a paṭēl or village headman, ē has been changed to yō.

A long ī is regularly changed to ē as is also common in northern Gujarātī. Thus, nēchē, for nīchē, below; kēmat, for kīmat, price; vēṭī, for vīṭī, a ring; wāt-chēt, for wāt-chit, conversation; mārīs or mārēh, I shall strike.

In dakh, for dukh, grief, u has been changed to a.

A final unaccented ē often becomes a or ā. Thus, ana, for anē, and; ka for kē, that (conjunction); hama or hamā, for hamē, now; tamā, for tamē, you.

Nasalization at the end of a word is omitted or introduced ad libitum. Numerous examples will be found in the specimens. Such are hama or hamā, now; karyu for karyū, it was done; nē or nē̃, the sign of the dative; khātā-tā, they (masculine) were eating. The oblique plural is often nasalized as in gharā, houses; nōkārā, servants, instead of the standard gharō, nōkārō.

The letters ch and chh are regularly pronounced as s, and are usually written so. Even when ch and chh are written, they are pronounced as s. Indeed so entirely identical are the sounds represented by the Gujarātī letters ષ, ષ્, and ષ્ that they are written for each other ad libitum and are all pronounced s. Thus the standard word સાવચેત sāw^achēt, conscious, is actually written છાવસેત chhāw^asēt in the first specimen, and similarly સભચેત sābhalyō, he heard, is written સભચેત. Other examples of the pronunciation of these letters are sāk^arī, for chāk^arī, service; chyār or sār, four; pāṣ, for pāṣh, five; usō, for ūchō, high; vēsāwū, for vēchāwū, to be sold; vēsī, for vēchī, having distributed; khar^asī, for khar^achī, having spent; sār^awū, for chār^awū, to feed cattle; sālē, for chālē, he goes; chhōrū or sōrū, a child; pasī, for pachhē, after; pusyu, for puchhyū, it was asked; nāsyā, for nāchhyā, i.e. nāchhyā, on being thrown. On the other hand, s and ś are usually pronounced h, and are then, as explained below, written h.

As elsewhere in north Gujarat, kh is pronounced (and written) as chh, i.e. is pronounced as s (and sometimes written so). Thus, khēdū, or chhēdū, a cultivator, chhētar, for khētar, a field; nāsyā, for nāchhyā, i.e. nāchhyā, on being thrown.

Very similarly, when the letter g is followed by i, ē, or y, it is pronounced (and written) j. Thus, lāg^awū, to begin; but lājī, she began; lājyā, they began; war^ajyō, for waḷ^agyō, he embraced; pajē, for pagē, on foot.

There is the usual confusion of cerebral and dental letters. Thus, mātē, for māṭē, for; kōṭī, for kōṭē, on the neck; āṭh or āth, eight; ēk^atu, for ēk^athū, in one place; dīthō, for dīthō, seen; tēnē, for tēṇē, by him, as well as 'to him'; ḍakār, for dukāl, a famine. ḍ and ḍh, however, usually become r. Thus, ghōḍō or ghōrō, a horse; thōrā dārā for thōḍā dahāḍā, a few days; urārī, for uḍāḍī, having squandered; par^awū, for paḍ^awū, to fall; warō, for waḍō, great; jarō, for jadyō, found; lōḍhū or lōrū, iron.

The letters s and ś regularly become h. Thus, hō, for sō, a hundred; māṇah, for māṇas, a man; hūraj, for sūraj, the sun; hū for śū, what; hīd, for śīd, why? dēh, for dēs, a country; khuhī, for kh^aśī, happiness; ka^amīr, for kāśmīr, Kashmir; ham^ajāyō, for sam^ajāyō, conciliated.

I have not noted any instances in which h is dropped, but aspiration is lost in words like ēk^atu, for ēk^athū, in one place; hātī, for hāthē, on the hand.

The cerebral ḷ, like ḍ, regularly becomes r. Thus, mar^awū, for maḷ^awū, to mingle; sagh^aru, for sagh^aḷū, entire; āgar or āgaḷ, before; dhōrō, for dhōḷō, white; hāt-wārō, for hāt-wāḷō, a shop-keeper; war^ajyō, for waḷ^agyō, embraced.

Amongst other miscellaneous irregularities of pronunciation, we may note nhāl, for nyāl, satisfied (cf. Hindī nihāl).

Nouns.—The declension of nouns closely follows standard Gujarātī.

The neuter as often as not ends in u, instead of ū, owing to the free way in which a final nasal is employed. For the same reason, the termination of the dative is nē or nē.

Nouns ending in a consonant, even when masculine, have a plural in ā. Thus, gharā, houses; nōk^arā, servants.

The agent-locative ends in ī, instead of ē. Thus, hātī for hāthē, on the hand; kōṭī, for kōṭē, on the neck; hāthī or hāthē, for sāthē, with; bhā, a father; mōṭā-bhā, by the grandfather.

Pronouns.—The agent case of the first person singular is mī or mī. Similarly, we have tī, tī, or tīē, by thee.

Other pronominal forms are amī or amē, we; āp^adē, we (including the person addressed); amārō, āp^aḍō, our; tamā, for tamē, you; tēnō, of him; tēnē (not tēṇē), by him, to him; ī or î, he (declined regularly, thus, inō or īnō, of him); kun, who? hũ, what?

Verbs.—The verb substantive is thus conjugated in the present,—

	Sing.	Plur.
1	sũ.	saĩyē, sīyē, sa.
2	sē, sã.	sō.
3	sē.	sī, sē.

The negative verb substantive is nāthī, is not.

The past is hatō (as in standard Gujarātī), often contracted to tō. The negative past is natō, was not, as in natũ āpyu, was not given. 'I shall be' is hōīs or hēh.

The Definite Present of the finite verb is thus conjugated. The varieties of form are mainly due to the lax use of the final nasal.

I am striking.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	mārũ-sũ, mārusu.	māriyē-saĩyē, etc.
2	mārē-sã, mārēsē.	mārō-sō.
3	mārē-sē.	mārē-sē, etc.

The future, I shall strike, is thus conjugated,—

	Sing.	Plur.
1	mārīś, mārēh.	mār^aśũ, mār^ahũ.
2	mārīś, mār^aśē, mārēh.	mār^aśō, mār^ahō.
3	mār^aśē, mār^ahē.	mār^aśī, mār^ahē.

The Present and Past Participles are as in standard Gujarātī, with a few irregularities. The past participle of javũ, to go, is jyō, gyō, or jēlō. That of āv^awũ, to come, is āyō. Instead of jadyō, got, we have jarō.

Lēwũ, to take, has its conjunctive participle lī, for lai.

I give two specimens of Pattāṇī Gujarātī, both of which come from the Parantij-Modasa sub-division of Ahmedabad. The first is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, received from the Collector of the district. For the second, an admirable conversation between two villagers, I am indebted to the Rev. G. P. Taylor, the author of the well-known Gujarātī Grammar.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Speakers :—Dēw-kṛishṇa-dās, the village headman.

Mātyam, a bard.

Scene :—A gate of the village Palāchar.

Mātyam (in a loud voice)—This is Dēw-kṛishṇa-dās I see, isn't it ?

Dēw-kṛishṇa-dās (looking round)—O ! ho ! ho ! where have you come from, bard ? (or when did you come, bard ?)

Māt.—I came here two days ago : but it is plain, that times are changed indeed, else why must bards and Brāhman travel so far from home ? Time was when we used to come to good folk like you and after making our requests would leave with our wants all supplied : but now we're just killed with constant hard work. Bad luck to it all ! In Bombay Mātā Kālīkā's bowl is going round (i.e., death, or the plague, is now raging in Bombay) : but, thank goodness, there isn't as much annoyance in travelling now as there was last year.

Dēw.—I'm glad you're come, and as you're in the village we can have a bit of a chat together, though I am in a little hurry. What a crowd of pests are in the village ! But, friend, step into the temple and tell the priest that it is not convenient for you just now to make your offering to the idol or feed all the holy persons who came here yesterday. Go you your round of the village and collect what the people give as alms.

Māt.—All right. I'll go ; but first let me hear that at home you're flourishing.

Dēw.—All are flourishing. But, my good fellow, there's this confounded land-assessment going on. Then too those tumbler-folk have come, and the village shows crowds of street beggars and mendicants galore. Whence are the demands of all these to be met ?

Māt.—Friend, the farmer is a king. You'll have to satisfy first of all those tumblers, for, a couple of years ago, when they left discontented, immediately blow upon blow came upon the cattle and the men in the village.

Dēw.—It's true what you say. This is indeed a necessary bill. Let the others be given what may be, but these we are bound to square.

Māt.—Friend, you're the protector of bards and Brāhman and cows. Doesn't the saying run, 'Millions follow the farmer' (i.e., the farmer can support millions of folk). The peacock, the thief, the devotee, the mendicant, the village accountant, the clerk, and who not ? All follow you (for support).

Dēw.—You speak truly, bard ; but the former days are gone. Once we were lords of the village.

Māt.—Yes, friend, life and death were in your hand. Of old your grandfather gave us 'the bards' fields' and to the present day our sons bless him.

Dēw.—So, Patēl, Good day and may we meet again.

GUJARĀTĪ OF THAR AND PARKAR.

It is reported that 30,000 people speak Gujarātī in the extreme south of the Sind district of Thar and Parkar, which is separated from Northern Gujarat by the Great Rann of Cutch. They are evidently immigrants from Gujarat, but I have not ascertained what dialect of Gujarātī they speak. Specimens of Gujarātī received from Thar and Parkar are in the ordinary literary form of standard Gujarātī employed by educated people. The language of the uneducated is probably a form of Paṭaṇī Gujarātī, mixed with Mārwarī.

GUJARĀTĪ OF CUTCH.

In the Peninsula of Cutch the following languages are reported to be vernaculars:—

Kachchhī	spoken by	311,000 people.
Kāyasthī	„	500 „
Gujarātī	„	205,500 „
Āyarī or Āhirī	„	30,500 „
Hindōstānī	„	3,000 „
TOTAL		550,500

Of these Kachchhī will be dealt with under the head of Sindhī. Kāyasthī,—a mixture of Rājasthānī, Gujarātī, and Kachchhī,—will be dealt with under the head of Kachchhī.

The Hindōstānī of Cutch has been dealt with under the head of Western Hindī,¹ and Āyarī or Āhirī under the Bhil languages.²

There remains Gujarātī. It is the home tongue of most Brāhmaṇs and Vāṇiās, and is, in Cutch, the language of literature, business, and general correspondence. This description shows that it is essentially the language of the educated classes. It, therefore, as elsewhere in Gujarat, possesses no dialectic peculiarities, and in no way differs from the standard form of the language. Specimens of it are hence unnecessary.

KĀṬHIYĀWĀDĪ.

The Gujarātī spoken by the educated classes of the Peninsula of Kathiawar is, as usual, the standard dialect. The uneducated Hindus, on the other hand, speak a well defined dialect, known as Kāṭhiyāwāḍī or Kāṭhiāwāḍī. Most of the Musalmāns speak Hindōstānī, but some of them, especially the sailors for whom Kathiawar is famous, speak a broken kind of Gujarātī which will be dealt with separately.

Local authorities divide Kāṭhiyāwāḍī into four sub-dialects,—Jhālāwāḍī spoken in the north-east, Sōraṭhī in the south-west, Hālāḍī in the north-west and centre, and Gōhilwāḍī or Bhāwnagari in the south-east of the peninsula. These do not, however, differ to any serious extent among themselves. Hālāḍī, which is spoken on the Gulf of Cutch, has, it is true, borrowed a few idioms from Kāchchī, such as the use of paṇḍ'nō, to mean 'of oneself,' but these are not sufficiently numerous to demand separate consideration. I therefore deal with Kāṭhiyāwāḍī as a whole, and give two specimens of it, selecting those which have come from Jhālāwad, as they are the most complete that I have received.

The following may be taken as the approximate number of speakers of Kāṭhiyāwāḍī :—

Where spoken.	Number of speakers.
Bombay Town and Island	25,000
Kathiawar—
Jhālāwāḍī	437,000
Sōraṭhī	733,000
Hālāḍī	770,000
Gōhilwāḍī	631,000
TOTAL	2,596,000

Kāṭhiyāwāḍī has most of the peculiarities of northern Gujarātī, and also has some of its own. These will be evident from the following grammatical sketch.

There is the usual uncertain vowel scale. Thus, wachārī for vichārī, having considered; kapātar for kupātra, a bad person. As usual ā is shortened before i. Thus, bhāi for bhāī, a brother; khaīnē, for khāīnē, having eaten. So we have the change of i to ē in kēmat, price. Ē is sometimes changed to ya as in gāmya for gāmē, in a village. The broad sound of o, which I transliterate as ō, is rather common. We have even ghōḍō, a horse. The past participle of jawū, to go, is always written jīyō, although the ō in other past participles is written as in the standard; thus, hatō (not hatō), was; paḍyō (not paḍyō), fallen.

The change of ch and chh to s is very common. Chh is often preserved in writing, but the pronunciation is always that of s, not chh. Thus although pāchhā, back-again, is written with chh, it is pronounced pāsā. Before i, e, and y, however, the chh often becomes ś, not s. The following are examples of these changes: sādō for chādō, the moon; sār^wũ, for chār^wũ, to graze cattle; sākar, for chākar, a servant; sad^wũ, for chad^wũ, to mount; pās, for pāck, five; pasā, for pachās, fifty; sō, for chha, six; sōk^rō, for chhōk^rō, a son; pasē, also spelt pachhē, after; sũ, also spelt chhũ, I am; sōdā^wũ, for chhōdā^wũ, to release; māras, for mārē-chhe, thou strikest (so rōwachh, thou weepst, here written with chh); se, often written chhe, he is; śētē, for chhētē, far; śēdu, also spelt chhēdu, a cultivator; pūsyũ, for pūchhyũ, it was asked.

K becomes ch, and kh becomes chh, under the influence of a neighbouring i or e. Thus, dīch^rō, for dīk^rō, a son; chēt^lā, for kēt^lā, how many? cham, for kem, why? chēdē, for kēdē, after; chhētar, for khētar, a field; khēdu, chhēdu, or śēdu, a cultivator.

Jh is pronounced as z, as in jhōḍ, pronounced zōḍ, a devil.

S or ś only becomes h in the middle or at the end of a word. Thus, s'hāhā, for sāsā, want; dah, ten; vīh, twenty; dēh, for dēs, a country; par-dēh, a foreign country; mānah, for mānas, a man; warah, for waras, a year; jah, for jas, fame. At the commencement of a word, s is aspirated and is written in the vernacular ꣳ which bears the same relation to ꣳ s, that ꣳ kh, does to ꣳ k. The same sound is common in the languages of Burmah, and is there transliterated hs. I cannot here transliterate ꣳ by sh, as this would be confused with the sh representing the sound of sh in 'shun.' I therefore transliterate it s'h for want of a better sign. Examples are, s'hāt, for sāt, seven; s'hō, for sō, a hundred; s'hūraj, for sūraj, the sun; s'hāhā, for sāsā, want; s'hārō, for sārō, good; s'hābharyũ, for sābhalyũ, he came to his senses; s'hāb^dō, standing up; s'hāthī, for sāthī, a servant; s'hapar^mō, for sapar^mō, festive.

An initial ś seems to be preserved. Thus, śũ, what? śyā-thī, why.

The letter h, when medial, is elided. Thus, kaũ, let me say; waiũ, a wife; rē, for rahē, he remains. The letter ḷ usually becomes r. Thus, sārya, for chhālā, husks. A final vowel is optionally nasalized. Thus, āt^lē̃, thereupon; pachhē or pachhē̃, after; kōyē̃, by anyone; nē or nē̃, and.

Declension.—There are a good many irregularities in the declension of nouns. As in Sur^{ti}, nouns ending in consonants take ā in the oblique form singular and in the plural (in the plural also ā̃). Thus, janānē, to a man (jan); bāpⁿē or bāpānē, to a father; gānā̃, songs; bhūḍ^dā̃, swine; ghōḍā or ghōḍā̃, horses.

Another oblique form is made by adding ya. It is used in both numbers. Thus, sārya, husks; gōthya, feastings; mōrya, formerly; gāmya, in a village; āḍya-mā̃, on the side (of a pond). Compare ā-bhaī, he, oblique ābhīyā, below.

The plural is also indicated by the addition of ũ. Thus, mānahũ, men; dīch^rīyũ, daughters; gāyũ, cows; s'hāthīyũnē, to his servants; rāḍũnī, of harlots.

The ē of the agent-locative is often nasalized. Thus, āt^lē̃, thereon; kōyē̃, by anyone.

Pronouns.—The first two personal pronouns are as in standard Gujarātī. The locative of the genitive may be used as a dative. Thus, manē or mārē, to me.

The pronoun of the third person is tē, tī, or ī. All these forms are declined regularly, except that the nominative plural of ī may be īwaḍāī. The case of the agent has a dental n, as in īnē by (as well as, to) him. Imⁿē or temⁿē is 'to him' or 'to them.' The word bhaī, is also employed with a pronoun of the third person. Compare standard Gujarātī bhāy^dō, a man. Thus, ā-bhaī, he (lit. this man) (was sent to the fields); bhaīnē, (consciousness came) to him; ā-bhīyānũ ōjh^rũ, his belly. Kuṇ or kōṇ is 'who?', kunō is 'whose?', sō (fem. śī, neut. śũ) or kīyō or chīyō is 'what?' Its oblique form is śyā.

Conjugation.—As usual in North Gujarat, the second person singular is the same as the first person. Thus, sũ, I am, thou art. In other respects the conjugation of the verb closely follows the standard dialect, allowing for phonetic changes.

The present tense of the verb substantive is as follows :—

	Sing.	Plur.
1	sũ.	sayẽ.
2	sũ.	sõ.
3	se.	se.

This is often written chhũ, etc., but the pronunciation is always sũ, etc.

The past tense is hatõ or tõ, as in other northern Gujarat dialects. Nõtũ, it was not.

The present tense of the finite verb is :—

I strike.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	mārũ-sũ.	mārẽ-sayẽ.
2	mārũ-sũ, mārās.	mārõ-sõ.
3	mārẽ-se.	mārẽ-se.

The standard forms are also used. The auxiliary is often written with chh. Thus, mārachh, for mārās, thou strikest. The imperfect is mārõtõ-tõ. The past participle is māryõ.

The future is as in the standard dialect. The ś seems to be preserved and not to be changed to h. Thus, mārĩś, I shall strike.

The imperative ends in ya. Thus, mārya, strike.

The past participle of verbs the roots of which end in ā (passives) takes the termination ñõ. Thus, bharāñõ, he was filled; jhalāñõ, he was seized; lūtāñõ, he was plundered; marāñõ, he was killed.

The verb jawũ, to go, has its present participle jātõ, not jatõ, and its past tense jyõ. In this word the final o is always written in the specimens as õ, not as o. So also, its infinitive is jāwũ, not jawũ. Similarly, thawũ, to be, has its infinitive thāwũ, and its present participle thātõ.

એક જણને બે સોકરા હતા. તીમાંથી નાને ઈના બાપને કીધું કે, બાપા, આપણ મઝીઆરામાંથી મને મારો ભાગ આપો. આટલે ઈને બાપે બધી ધરવખરી વેચી દીધી. થોડા દી ચેડે નાને તો પોતાના ભાગનું બધું વેચીસાટી ઈના જે પૈસા આવ્યા ઈ હૈને પરદેહમાં જીયો, ને ઇયાંકણે પોતાનું બધું ગોઠે ઇમ ઉડાડવા માંડ્યું. આટલે થોડા દીમાં તો બધું ખુટી રિયું. એટલામાં ઈ દેહમાં-જ ભારે કાળ પડ્યો. તારે ઈને ખાવાના સ્કાંહા પડ્યા. પછે ઈ એક તે દેહના સ્કારા વભાવાળા આશામીને ઇયાં જઈને સ્કાથી રિયો. ઇયાં કણે આભઈ તો એલ્યા ધણીનાં ભુંડાં વગડામાં સારવા જીયા. પણ ભુંડાં તો સાર્યે ખાય, ઈ માણુહથી ખવાય નઈ નેકે તો, ઈ ખઈને નભત. વળી ઈને ક્યેયે કઈ નો આપ્યું; આટલે આભીયાનું એઝરું નો ભરાણું તારે ભઈને સ્કાંભર્યું, કે મારા બાપને ધરે તો એટલા દાડિપા રજે છે. વળી ઇમને ખાવા પીવા પણ મબલખ મળેછે, ને આઈ મરિ તો લાંબણું કરવી પડેછે. તો લાવને, હું સ્કાબદો થઈને મારા બાપ પાહેં જઈ, અને તેમને જઈને કઈ કે, બાપા, હું તમારો ને પરભુનો સોર સું; હું તો કપાતર જગ્યો. પણ હશે સોર કસોર થાય, પણ માવતર કમાવતર થાય નઈ, ઇમ જાણી મને તમારે ઇયાં દાડિયો રાખો. ઇમ વચારી તે સ્કાબદો થિયો અને પોતાના બાપ પાહેં જીયો. ઈને બાપે તો ઈને શેટેથી ભાલ્યો કે અંતરમાં દયાનો ઉમળકો આવ્યો તેથી હડી કાઢી દીયરાની કોટે બાઝી પડ્યો ને બચીયું ભરવા માંડ્યો. સોકરો બોલ્યો, બાપા, હું તો તમારો ને પરભુનો એવો ચુનેગાર થિયો સું કે તમારા જવાનો દીયરો કેવરાવા જોગ રિયો નથી. ઈને બાપે સ્કાથીયુંને કયું કે, જાઓ, ધરમાંથી સ્કારો સ્કાવો લાવીને ઈને પેરાવો, ને હાથમાં વેટવીટી તથા પગે પગરખાં પેરાવો, જાણી આજ સ્કપરમો દી ગણીને જમણવાર કરો તથા ઘોળમંગળ ગવરાવો. સ્કાથી કે આજ મેં મુવો ધારેલો દીયરો સ્કજવન દેખ્યા, અને ખોવાણેલો જડ્યો સે. પછે બધા લીલાલેર કરવા માંડ્યા.

અટાણે ઈનો મોટો સોકરો તો છેતરમાં કામે જીયો તો; ઇયાંથી પાછો વળી ધર પાહેં તે આવ્યો તારે પોતાને ધરે નાસ થાતો ને ગાણાં ગવાતાં સ્કાંજ્યાં. પછે ઈને સાકરને સ્કાકરી પુશ્યું કે, આજ ધરે શી ધામધોમ સે ? તારે સાકરે જબાપ દીધો કે, તમારો ભઈ આજ હીમખીમ પાછા આવ્યા, તેથી રાજ થઈને તમારે બાપે આજ ગોઠય કરી સે. આથી ઈ એવો રીશો બલ્યો કે ઘેર જીયો-જ નઈ. એથી ઈને બાપે આવીને ફાહલાવા માંડ્યો. તારે ઈ બોલ્યો કે, બાપા, આટલાં વરહ લગણ મેં તમારી સાકરી કરી, ને તમારે એકે વેણ વાઢ્યું નઈ; તોય મને તો મારા ભઈબંધને જોડય દેવા સ્કાર એકે રાભર નો અપાણું; અને બ્યારે રાંડુની રમતમાં તમારી માયાને ઉડાડનાર દીયરો ઘેર આવ્યો તારે તમે મોટી મેમાની કરી. બાપ બોલ્યો, બેટા, તું તો રોજ મારી પાંહો-જ સું, ને મારી બધી સુડી પણ તારી-જ સે. હાઈ એ કે આ ઠાણે તો આપણે આણું કરવો જોઈએ; સ્કાથી કે, આ તારા મુવા ધારેલા ભઈને જીવતો દીઠો, અને ખોવાણેલો આજ જડ્યો સે.

THE STORY OF RALIYA GADHAVI.

In times gone by there were frequent raids made into Kathiawar, and so people used to deposit their goods and chattels in Ranihar, the village of the Bard named Raliya

Gadhavi in the belief that no one would think of raiding a village of bards, who were known to be beggars by profession, and to have nothing worth taking. But one fine day Bodi, the Mughul, plundered Ranihar, and carried off a Brahman's daughter as a hostage. Raliya followed to rescue her, but was himself captured. He then began to weep, and the Mughul asked him why he did so. 'Because,' replied Raliya, 'all my money is buried in a certain place, and I haven't given anyone a clue as to where it is. Now you are carrying me off, and all that money will remain lying there, doing no good.' So the Mughul promised him that if the money could be found, he would let him go, and give him half of it. Raliya took them off to the side of a pond, and pointing out a muddy piece of ground said 'the money is buried on the far side of this slough. So they all urged on their horses, which stuck in the morass, and Raliya, who was going behind them, took to his heels.

He went to the village of Muli, and complained to its Raja, Lagadhir Parmar, saying, 'Your Bard has been plundered, and a Brahman's daughter has been carried off. This is a disgrace to you. If you let Bards and Brahmins be looted before your very eyes, who will be left to sing your praises?' Lagadhir replied, 'Go at once to Wadhwan,¹ and tell the Raja there. I am following at once with two hundred horses.' So Raliya went to Wadhwan, while Lagadhir set out on his expedition of rescue. On the way he met the freebooters. In the mêlée which ensued, Bodi Mughul took up the Brahman girl behind him, and rode away, pursued by Lagadhir, who caught hold of him, and pulled him off his horse. The Mughul twisted round and sat upon Lagadhir. The latter had no weapon handy, but seized his opponent by the throat. Then the Brahman girl pointed out to him a poniard which the Mughul carried in his belt, and Lagadhir plucked it out, and plunged it into his enemy's belly. But the Mughul simultaneously drew his scimitar and with it struck down the Hindu Raja. In this way both received mortal wounds and gave up the ghost. Their monumental stones exist to the present day.

¹ Both Muli and Wadhwan are in Jhalawad. Lagadhir was a historical character. He flourished at the end of the fifteenth century. According to tradition, the Brahman girl, in rescuing whom he lost his life, burned herself upon his funeral pyre. See Kathiawar Gazetteer, p. 555.

MUSALMĀN GUJARĀTĪ.

Most of the Musalmāns of Gujarat speak Hindōstānī, not Gujarātī, and specimens of their language will be found in the section devoted to Western Hīndī.¹ Some tribes, however, who are by origin descended from converted Hindus, speak Gujarātī. The educated members of this class speak ordinary Gujarātī, with a free admission of Hindōstānī (and through it of Arabic and Persian) words, and specimens of this form of speech are not necessary. The uneducated Gujarātī-speaking Musalmāns usually employ the dialect of their uneducated Hindū neighbours. The languages of two Muslim communities demand, however, closer attention; these are Vhōrāsāi or the language of the Bohora community, and the dialect of a certain Musalmān community of Kathiawar.

The Bohoras are a well-known trading community of Gujarat. We may take the town of Surat as their head-quarters, for there resides the chief Mullah of one of their principal divisions. In Broach, most of them are cultivators. Vhōrāsāi has been reported for the present Survey as a definite dialect of Gujarātī from the two following localities :—

Locality.	Reported number of speakers.
Bombay Town and Island	10,000
Mahikantha	150

Specimens have, however, been received from other districts as well. In the census of 1891 131,751 Bohoras were enumerated in the Bombay Presidency and Baroda, of whom 127,569 came from Gujarat (including Baroda). These Gujarat Bohoras were distributed as follows :—

Locality.	Number.
Ahmedabad	10,972
Kaira	13,520
Panch Mahals	4,216
Broach	32,367
Surat	12,905
Baroda	10,880
Other Native States	42,709
TOTAL	127,569

An examination of the specimens received shows that there is no true Vhōrāsāi dialect. Everywhere it is the same as the general dialect of the uneducated natives of the locality where the Bohora speakers happen to be found. Thus, in Kaira, they drop their h's like the other Kaira cultivators, and in Surat they mix up their cerebral and dental letters. If Vhōrāsāi has any distinguishing mark it is this last, for the Bohoras of Bombay and of Mahikantha have carried this custom with them, and call a 'son' ḍīk^rrō, not ḍīk^rrō, for 'was' they say huṭō, not hutō, and for 'taken' they say līḍhō, not līdhō. This peculiarity which is evidently taken from the local dialect of Surat, their head-quarters, does not entitle us to say that the Bohoras have any special dialect of their own. I therefore give no specimens of Vhōrāsāi.

The Musalmān Khār^wās of Kathiawar are skilful and intrepid seamen. 'They man the native craft that visit Zanzibar, Aden, and the whole coast of Hindostan eastward as far as Singapur; and they are employed in steamers plying between Bombay and London, in some cases forming the entire crew.'¹ Their origin is obscure. They call themselves Paṭhāns, but they are probably a mixed race with Hindu and Arab blood in them. The island of Piram was assigned to them by the Delhi Emperors, and they also hold rent-free lands in the detached Taluka of Gogo, belonging to the Ahmedabad district, which is geographically a part of Kathiawar. They speak a curious dialect. It does not differ materially in its grammar from standard Gujarātī, although it has in this respect a few peculiar characteristics, but its pronunciation differs widely. I am fortunate in being able to present two excellent specimens of this dialect, which come from Gogo. The following are the main points in which it differs from the standard dialect.

Pronunciation.—The vowels ā and e and ē are liable to be changed to a, in the first syllable of a word. Thus, nanāē, for nānāē, by the younger (son); marō, for mārō, my; tarō, for tārō, thy; darō, for dādō, a day; sathē, for sāthē, with; hath, for hāth, a hand; kaḍhō, for kāḍhō, draw water; tawār, for tēwārē, then; kaṭ^rlā, for kēṭ^rlā, how many? jam, for jem, as, like; kam, for kem, how, why? So the ā in the Persian termination dār is shortened, as in ḍōs-ḍar, for dōst-dār, a friend; ḍukān-ḍar, for ḍukān-dār, a shopkeeper. Similarly, ā is shortened before ī, as in northern Gujarat. Thus, khaīnē, for khāīnē, having eaten; bhaī, for bhāī, a brother.

The vowel ī is liable to be changed to ē, as in northern Gujarat. Thus, mārēs, for mārīs, I shall strike.

As regards consonants, the principal point to notice is that the sense of distinction between cerebral and dental letters is altogether lost. The two classes are absolutely interchangeable. Thus, t becomes ṭ in huṭō, was; pōṭānō, own; samṭaṭ, wealth; ṭē, he; waṭanī, a native; khēṭar, a field; chhōṭ^rrā, husks; khāṭō, eating; sāw^rchēṭ, conscious; gamṭaṭ, rejoicing; jūw^rṭō, living; uṭṭar, an answer; ṭū, thou, and many others: th becomes ṭh in ṭhī, from; ṭhīyō, became; taṭhā, and; laṭhī, is not; uṭhāpiyō, for uthāpiyō, disobeyed; sathē, with; d becomes ḍ in ḍīk^rrō, a son; ḍēs, a country; ḍukāl, a famine; Khuḍā, God; ḍās, a servant; aṇḍar, within; dh becomes ḍh in khīḍhū, for kīdhū, done; and līḍhō, taken. In ḍaṭ, a tooth, both consonants have been cerebralized.

On the other hand, ṭ has become t in mōtō, great; pēt, belly; kaṭ^rlā, for kēṭ^rlā, how many? aṭ^rlō, so much; rōṭī, bread; kōṭē, on the neck; vīṭī, a ring: ṭh has become th in ēk^rthū, in one place; and bethō, beṭhō or betō, seated: ṇḍ has become nd, in bhundō, swine. The letters ḍ and ḷ, when medial, generally become r, as in thōrā, a few; darā, days; urāvī, having caused to fly; pariyō, for paḍyō, fell; ḍōrīnē, for dōḍīnē, having run; sagh^arū, for sagh^aḷū, entire; vēg^arō, for vēg^alō, distant; sābhariyō, for sābhalyō, heard; āgar, for āgaḷ, before; pachhar, for pāchhal, behind. On the other hand, r has become ḍ in khaḍ^achī, expenditure; maḍī, having died; chāk^aḍī, service. Sometimes it becomes ṇ, as in lug^aṇā, for lug^arā, clothes. So ṇ, when standing alone, almost always becomes n, as in mānas, for māṇas, a man; pan, but; gan, count; ghanō, many.

It will be remembered that a similar inability to distinguish between cerebrals and dentals is a characteristic of the Surṭī dialect spoken in Surat and Broach, opposite Gogo, across the Gulf of Kathiawar.

An initial n often becomes ḷ, as in lākhī, for nākhī, having thrown; laṭhī, for nathī, is not; lāch, for nāch, dancing; lōkar, a servant; lāk, a nose.

The letter ś becomes s in mārēs for mārīs, I shall strike, and other futures, and in the word sū, what?

In the word khīḍhū, for kīḍhū, not only has the dh been cerebralized, but the initial k has also been aspirated. So also in khaḍiyō, for kāḍyō, was taken out. On the other hand, h, or an aspiration, is elided in darō, a day, for dāḍō, i.e. dahāḍō; riyō, for rahiyō, i.e. rahyō, remained; nai or nī, for nahi, not; kēs, for kahēs, i.e. kahīs, I will say; kērāwū, for kēw^arāwū, for kahēw^arāwū, to be called; rēm, for rēhēm, compassion; pērāwō, for pahērāwō, clothe; bar for bāhār, outside; beṭō or beṭhō, seated. This omission of h is also common in the standard dialect.

Letters are sometimes doubled under the influence of a preceding r or l. Thus, bānnū, for bār^anū, a door; gōwānnī, for gōwāl^anī, a herd-maiden. So, we have dōllā-ṭhī, with ropes, for dōr^aḍā-ṭhī, in which the ḍ is first changed to ḷ, and then doubled.

The consonants within a word are sometimes interchanged by metathesis. Thus, kharāvēs, for khawārēs, i.e. khaw^aḍāvīs, I will give to eat: so dēl^awā, for dēw^atā, fire.

A final nasal is sometimes dropped, as in tamāru, for tamārū, your.

Nouns.—The declension of nouns, if we allow for pronunciation, closely follows the standard dialect. Thus the sign of the ablative is ṭhī, not thī. The only dialectic peculiarity is the use of hōn, to form the plural. Thus, bāpu, a father; bāpuhōn, fathers. This termination hōn is also found in the Mālvi dialect of Rājasthān and in some forms of Khāndēśī.

Some adjectives form their feminines in ēi, as in badhēi khaḍ^achī, all expenditure. Compare gēi, below, under the head of participles.

The pronouns are more irregular. The pronoun of the second person is usually spelt with a cerebral ṭ. Thus, ṭū. The dental t also occurs. The agent cases of the first two personal pronouns are mē or hūē and ṭē or tūē, respectively. The genitive singulars are marō and tarō or ṭarō. The plurals are regular (allowing for the optional cerebralization of the ṭ in the second person). In the singular the nominative is also used as an oblique base. Thus, hūnē, to me; ṭūnē, to thee; hū-ṭhī, from me.

The pronoun of the third person is ṭē or i, he, she, it, that: ṭē is declined regularly in the singular. ī is shortened in the oblique cases of the singular; thus, iē, by him; inō, of him. The plural of ṭē is ṭēhōn, and of i, ēhōn, both being declined regularly.

The relative pronoun is jī, who, declined like i; thus, jīnō, whose. Similarly is declined kōn, who? : genitive, kīnō, and so on; sū, is 'what?'

Verbs.—The present tense of the verb substantive is chhe, which does not change for number and person. Thus, hũ chhe, I am. When used as an auxiliary the e is dropped, and it becomes simply chh. Thus, karũchh, I do; āviyōchh, he has come; khādhũchh, it has been done.

The past of the auxiliary is huṭō, fem. huṭē, plur. masc. huṭā.

The finite verb has a few irregularities. The t of the present participle is cerebralized. Thus, mār^atō, striking. The past participle inserts an i before the y. Thus, māriyō, for māryō, struck. So we have pariyō, fell; lākhiiyũ, thrown; mōkaliyō, sent; āpiyũ, given; walagiyō, he embraced; lāgiyō, he began; pōchhiyō, he arrived.

The definite present is formed by adding chh to all persons of the simple present. Thus, mārũchh, I am striking; mārēchh, thou art striking, and so on. So the perfect is māriyōchh, he has been struck; similarly, khādhũchh, it is done; thiyōchh, he has become; āviyōchh, he has come. Rēchh, for rahēchh is a contracted form of the present definite.

An irregular simple present is khēi, he says, for kahē.

The Imperfect and Pluperfect are regularly formed with huṭō. Thus, mār^atō-huṭō, he was striking; iē māriyō-huṭō, he had struck.

The future is slightly irregular, as it changes i to ē and s to ṣ. We thus get,—

I shall strike.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	mārēs.	mār^aṣu.
2	mār^asē.	mār^asō.
3	mār^asē.	mār^asē.

Contracted forms are hōs, I shall be; jās, I shall go; kēs, I shall say; rēs, I shall remain.

The verbs thawũ, to be, and jāwũ, to go, lengthen their first vowels. Thus, thāwũ, to be; thātō, being; jātō, going.

Irregular past participles are khādhō, done, from kar^awũ; often used in the neuter to mean 'said' by so and so. Rah^awũ has its past participle riyō; remained, and jāwũ, to go, makes giyō. The feminine of giyō is gēi or gē. With gēi, compare baḍhēi, the feminine of baḍhō, all.

The verb lēwũ, to take, makes its conjunctive participle lī, for laī, having taken.

As specimens of Khār'wā Gujarātī I give a version of the Parable, and an amusing, if slightly coarse, folktale.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there were a cock-sparrow and a hen-sparrow. The cock-sparrow brought some rice grains, and the hen-sparrow brought some peas, and with them they cooked a mess of pottage. Then the hen went off to draw water, and, as soon as she was gone, the cock ate up the pottage, and tied a bandage over his eyes and lay down on his bed. In the meantime the hen came back with her water jar, and cried out, 'cock-sparrow, my king, open the door.' 'I can't,' said he, 'my eyes are hurting me.' So she put the pitcher down and opened the door herself. The first thing she saw when she looked round was that there was no pottage, so she asked her husband who had eaten it up. 'The king's dog,' said he, 'came and ate it up.'

So the hen-sparrow went off to the king and complained that his dog had eaten up the pottage. The king asked the dog if he had done so, and he denied. Then the king asked the cock-sparrow, and he denied too. Then the king told a soldier to throw the cock-sparrow down into a well, and this was done. It chanced that a herd-girl came by, and to her the hen-sparrow said, 'if you will take my cock-sparrow out of the well, I will give you rice-milk and bread to eat.' So the herd-girl went down into the well, and took out the cock. Then the hen took the herd-girl home with her, and the cock-sparrow heated a griddle red-hot, and said to the herd-girl, 'sit down, please, on this golden chair.' So she sat down on the griddle, and as soon as she did so it burnt her and she jumped up again, saying, 'I didn't get any rice milk, and I am burnt on the part of me on which I sit down.'

PAṬṆŪLĪ.

• Paṭṇūlī, also called Saurāshṭrī (or the language of Surat) and Khatri, is the language of the silk-weavers of the Deccan and Madras. Sir A. Baines, on page 141 of the Census Report for 1891, gives the following account of them :—

The migrations of this class have not been clearly traced, but probably it was first brought above the ghāts through one of the many local courts of old time in the Deccan.¹ The descendants of the original silk-weavers are now found exercising the same trade in Mysore, the Deccan, and in quite the south of the peninsula. The dialect they use is peculiar to themselves and is not current amongst them when dealing with other communities, though it has taken the colour of the countries through which the caste has passed, and is at present mainly Telugu, whereby it has lost its northern twang. The reason for this segregation may be found, perhaps, in the fact that a class of this sort, especially when engaged in a lucrative industry, raises its demands for social recognition, as it recedes further from its place of origin. We thus find the Saurāshṭrī weaver of the south employing priests of his own caste, who claim Brahmanical honours, and ignore connection with a region where silk-weavers are not in such a high position. This leads them to neglect or depreciate their former tongue. There are, nevertheless, over 77,000 Paṭṇūlī in the Madras Province who still return their language as of yore.

Paṭṇūlī was returned in the census of 1891 from the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay, and from the state of Mysore. The following are the figures. Speakers are also found in Hyderabad, but no figures are available:—

• The Linguistic Survey does not extend to Madras, and hence no figures for or specimens of Paṭṇūlī have been received from that province or from Mysore. From Bombay, only 300 speakers of Paṭṇūlī have been returned for this Survey, and these from Ahmēdnagār, a district from which no speakers were returned in 1891. On the other hand, 6,550 speakers of 'Paṭ'wēgārī,' also a dialect employed by silk-weavers, have been returned from Belgaum, Dhārwar, and Bijapur. Specimens have been received from all these districts, and an examination of them shows that the Paṭ'wēgārī of Bijapur is simply corrupt Marāṭhī, while that of Belgaum and Dhārwar is Paṭ'nūlī. The following are, therefore, the figures for Paṭ'nūlī as returned for this census from the Bombay Presidency :—

Ahmednagar	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	300
Belgaum	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	4,000
Dhārwar	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	1,500
TOTAL												.	5,800

It will be seen that these differ widely from the census figures. Indeed, it must be confessed that much reliance cannot be placed on either set. Paṭ'nūlī is merely ordinary Gujarātī, and does not require that separate enumeration which it is practically impossible to give.

Specimens of Paṭ'nūlī (or, Paṭ'wēgārī) have been received from all the above districts. As just stated, it is ordinary Gujarātī with, in each case, a slight addition of local words to its vocabulary. Specimens of Bombay Paṭ'nūlī are therefore quite unnecessary. No specimens are available of Madras Paṭ'nūlī, but it, too, according to the census reports, is also the same as standard Gujarātī.

It may be added that in Chanda, in the Central Provinces, the silk-weavers speak a mongrel dialect called Paṭ'vī, which appears to be based on Marāṭhī. Vide ante, page 294.

KĀKARĪ.

The Kākars are Paṭhān immigrants from Afghanistan who are found scattered over Northern India and the Bombay Deccan. At the Census of 1891 the following numbers of Kākars were returned :—

United Provinces	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	25,386
Punjab	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	4,386
Hyderabad	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	4,193
Bombay	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	.	122
															TOTAL	34,087

It appears, however, that only in Bombay have these people (122 in number) a language of their own, called Kākari. It is used by Kākars only as a home language. In their intercourse with people of other castes they employ ordinary Dakhiṇī Hindōstānī. Kākars belong to the Kākarzāhī tribe of Afghans, and their forefathers are said to have come from Afghanistan with Aḥmad Shāh Durrānī about 1748. On his return from India, after having conquered the Marāṭhās at the battle of Panipat in 1761, these Kākars remained in the country leading the life of outlaws, and, after rambling through the provinces of Agra and Gujarat, they found their way to Haidar 'Alī of Mysore. Thence they spread over the Deccan, where they now earn a living as servants, messengers, and horse-keepers.

Their speech is a mixed jargon, but is mainly based on Gujarātī. I give a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son into Kākari which comes from Belgaum. It well illustrates the mixed character of the language, as well as its Gujarātī basis. The Gujarātī on which it is founded is that of North Gujarat, and is mixed with Rājasthānī. Among special peculiarities we may mention,—

The tendency (also existing in Rājasthānī) to weaken a final e to a short a. Thus the Gujarātī hamē, we, becomes hama; the Rājasthānī dative suffix kē, becomes ka (this is the usual suffix of the dative); the Gujarātī suffix nē of the conjunctive participle becomes na.

There is a tendency to disaspirate (also common in Northern Gujarātī). Thus, chhē, is, becomes chē or cha, and we have uṭisna for uṭhisnē, having arisen.

Strong masculine nouns with a-bases form the nominative singular in ō, with an oblique form in ā. Thus, bētō, a son; plural, bētā. The suffix of the genitive is the Gujarātī nō. That of the dative is the Rājasthānī ka (for kē). The agent case does not seem to be used.

The word for 'two' is dī, as in Lābhānī.

The present tense of the verb substantive is chhē or chē (cha), he is. Thus, mīlacha for malē-chhe, it is got. The past is hatō or tō as in Northern Gujarātī.

There are some curious forms of the finite verb in the specimen. Such are kariśēndō, he did; a doubled tt in the present participle as in āwattē, in going. The conjunctive participle ends in īsna, isnō, or isnā. Thus, jayīsna, having gone; bharīsna, having filled; wātīsno, having divided; uṭisna or uṭisna, having arisen. This form is probably borrowed from Dravidian languages. So also the ir in marirōcha, (I) am dying. Compare Tamil iru, be.

TĀRĪMŪKĪ OR GHISĀDĪ.

The Ghisāḍī are a tribe of blacksmiths who wander, like our tinkers, over Southern India. The following numbers have been reported from that part of India to which the Survey extends :—

The Ghisāḍī call themselves Tārīmūk. They are called Ghisāḍī (i.e. polishers) by their Hindū neighbours. Their tradition is that they originally came from Gujarat and this is borne out by their language. The fullest account of the tribe will be found in the Poona Gazetteer, as quoted below.

The earliest account will be found in an article entitled On the Migratory Tribes of Natives in Central India, by Edward Balfour, in Vol. xiii, Part I. (1844), of the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal. Account of the Taremook or Wandering Blacksmith, on pp. 8 and ff. Taremookee Vocabulary on pp. 17 and 18.

I give two excellent specimens and a list of words in Tārīmūkī, both of which come from Belgaum. The first is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the second a piece of folklore. The language of the Berar specimens is identical, and they need not be printed.

An examination of the specimens will show that the language closely agrees with ordinary colloquial Gujarātī. The following are the main points of difference.

There is a tendency to drop aspiration (as is also the case in Northern Gujarat). Thus, pāchal for pāchhal, after; uṭīna, for uṭhīnē, having arisen; cha or ch, for chhe, is, when used as an auxiliary.

A final e or ē becomes a. Thus the suffix of the dative, and of the conjunctive participle ne, becomes na, as in manuśyā-na, to a man; uṭīna, having arisen; chha for chhe, is; hama for hamē, we. This a is sometimes dropped, so that we have forms such as karīn, having done; lēwā-n, to take; huwā-n, to become; āyōch for āyō-chhe, he has come; and karyōcha, for karyō-chhe, he has done, in the same sentence.

As in the Marāṭhī of Berar, an initial v before ē becomes y, and before i is dropped. Thus, yal, for vēl, time; ichāryō, for vichāryō, asked. A final ū is dropped in bakryān (for bakryā-nū) bachchū, the young of a goat.

In the declension of nouns, there is no agent case. As in Dakhinī Hindōstānī, the subject of a transitive verb in the past tense remains in the nominative. Thus, phānō bēṭō kayō, the younger son said.

The termination of the genitive is nō, which is treated as in Gujarātī, except that its neuter is nū, not nũ. Similarly, all strong neuter nouns end in ū, as in bachchū, a young one.

The pronouns, as a rule, are regular. But 'you' is tuma, not tama (for tamē). 'They' is ōy.

The verb substantive is thus conjugated in the Present:—

Sing.	Plur.
1. chhau .	chha .
2. chha .	chha .
3. chha .	chha .

When used as an auxiliary, it becomes cha or ch for all persons and both numbers. Thus—

I am striking, etc.

Sing.	Plur.
1. mārūcha .	mārēcha .
2. māracha .	mārōcha .
3. māracha .	māracha .

In all the above the final a may be dropped. Thus, mārūch.

The past of the auxiliary verb is hotō or tō, as in colloquial Gujarātī.

The simple present of the finite verb is practically regular, allowance being made for the change of final ē to a. Thus,—

I strike, etc.

Sing.	Plur.
1. mārū .	mārē, mārā .
2. mārā .	mārō .
3. mārā .	mārā .

The future is irregular. It takes the form mārōs, and does not change for number or person.

Other forms are regular. Thus,— mār^awū, to strike.

mār^atō, striking.
māryō, struck.
māryōch, has struck.
māryā-tō, had struck.

Other minor peculiarities, especially those of vocabulary, will be learnt from the list of words and sentences.

A PUZZLE.

Fifteen good men were once going on a journey. In the evening, as they went along, it began to rain heavily, so they looked about, and seeing an inn, entered it and sat down.

A little later fifteen thieves came to the same inn by another road; and all the thirty formed a circle and sat round a fire in the courtyard.

Suddenly there arrived a merchant with five attendants, all very hungry, and he asked the circle of thirty for pity's sake to give him something to eat. So some of the good men got up and brought from inside the house the food they had in their baggage. The merchant ate and was happy.

Then he took out fifteen rupees, and said, 'I will give these as a reward to you, on condition that I may give a rupee to each ninth man as you sit in your circle, and that as soon as any one gets a rupee he gets up and goes away, so that he cannot be counted over again.' They all agreed to this, and the merchant began counting, and gave a rupee to the 9th man and then to the 18th man, and then to the 27th, and then (going on round the circle again) to the 6th, and so on, each man as he got his rupee getting up and going away. It turned out that each of the fifteen good men got a rupee, and none of the fifteen thieves got anything.

How were the thirty men seated?

[The answer is not given, but the puzzle is an easy one to solve. Beginning from the point in the circle at which the merchant began to count, the good men occupied the following places,—5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 12th, 16th, 18th, 19th, 22nd, 23rd, 24th, 26th, 27th, 30th.]
